LBJ Slates Draft Study By Civilians

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson Saturday set up a high level citizens' commission to conduct a sweeping study of the fairness and effectiveness of the draft.

The review will take at least six months and may produce a major overhaul of the Selective Service Act.

Johnson named Burke Marshall, former assistant attorney general in charge of the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department, to head the 20-member panel. Marshall now is general counsel and vice president of International Business Machines.

DRAFT LOTTERY

No idea, including a possible draft lottery and the concept of national service by women in nonmilitary fields, will be excluded from the commission's area of study, press secretary Bill D. Moyers said.

Johnson said in a statement:

"After the study has been completed, my advisers and I will weigh its recommendations very carefully in the light of our military requirements and the impact on our young people and their families.

"We will then offer to the American people the course of action which we believe to be best designed to protect the nation's freedom with the least and most equitable burden on our society."

Johnson created the commission at a time of mounting discussion and criticism of the draft.

Some critics have called it a "poor man's draft" because of the present policy of deferring college students who keep up their grades.

Some contend also it discriminates against Negroes and poor whites because a smaller percentage of them go to college.

Moyers said Johnson feels both a just-completed study of the draft by the Pentagon and hearings on it by the House Armed Services Committee have been very helpful.

"But in his opinion they both point to the need for an over-all study of draft problems by an imperial citizens' group," Moyers added.

"The President's feeling is that we need now to assure that the same rules and military fitness standards are being applied fairly and uniformly as possibly on a national basis," said Moyers.

"His feeling is that this can be done most effectively by a study such as he is establishing today. The commission will have a broad charter which in effect will go beyond the Pentagon study and hearings in Congress."

New legislation will be required by next June 30 when the present draft law is scheduled to expire.

Moyers said Johnson believes the draft system has been well administered, both during World War II and since, but that he wants a penetrating, long-range study of all proposals and problems with a view to the utmost fairness and effectiveness.

He said the commission would be aided by a staff director and other personnel.

Moyers reported that Johnson for some time had been reviewing with administration officials and prominent private citizens the public discussion and debate about the draft. Moyers added this had led to Johnson's decision to form the commission.

First Full Day

U.S. Traffic Toll Climbing Steadily

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The nation's traffic death toll climbed steadily Saturday, the first full day of the long Independence Day weekend.

The National Safety Council noted that the count was moving upward at about the same rate as last year. The eventual total on that occasion was 551, a record for a three day celebration of American independence.

Hot, humid weather — traditional on the Fourth of July — covered much of the nation. Some areas had rain that left a treacherous surface on highways.

91 MILLION

Council statisticians figured most of the 91 million motor vehicles in the United States would be in motion at one time or another during the three-day weekend and would run up a total of 9.5 billion miles.

Most of the accidents cost one life or two.

But four persons were killed Saturday when a small bus collided with a freight train near Polo, Ill., 30 miles southwest of Rockford. The victims were in the bus.

The council estimated in advance that between 510 and 610 men, women and children might lose their lives in traffic accidents in the period that began at 6 p.m. local time Friday and will end at midnight Monday.

To establish a basis for comparison with motoring performance during a nonholiday period of the same length, The Associated Press made a survey of motor vehicle fatalities between 6 p.m. Friday, June 17 and midnight Monday, June 20. They totaled 383.

The record traffic toll for any Independence Day period was set during a four-day celebration in 1963. It was 557.

The record traffic death tally for any holiday period was set during the three-day observance of Christmas last year. It was 720.

The lowest traffic toll for any three-day observance of Independence Day since World War II was 255, counted in 1947.

Allies Winning War, Top General Claims

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Gen. William C. Westmoreland said Saturday he believed the allies were winning the war in Viet Nam.

The U.S. commander, never more openly optimistic, made the statement on a day when his military spokesman announced the loss of four American planes over North Viet Nam but reported winning blows against the Communists at sea and on the ground.

"Six months ago," Westmoreland told reporters, "I stated that we had not yet started to win, but certainly at that time we had stopped losing.

"Since then we have a string of victories to our credit. We have increased our forces and military power, and we have gained in effectiveness."

'BEGUN TO WIN'

The four-star commander went on to say that "we have a long way to go," but he agreed with a newsman's remark that "we have now begun to win." To that remark, phrased as a question, he said "Yes."

In a rare air-sea engagement, Navy planes from the aircraft carriers Constellation and Hancock sank three North Vietnamese torpedo boats Friday night 38 miles out in the Gulf of Tonkin.

The boats were headed at high speed on what the Navy termed an attack course against the U.S. guided-missile destroyer Coontz, patrolling off the North Viet Nam coast.

The two carriers, on station in the gulf, launched 14 planes to engage the torpedo boats. The navy said the boats had fired on the planes and the jet fighter-bombers sank the three boats with rockets and bombs. Destroyers picked up 19 North Vietnamese sailors from the torpedo boats, and at last report they were being held aboard the Contz. Though a torpedo that normally carries 12 or 15 men, there was no immediate word of how many might have been lost with their craft.

Seizure of the 19 raised a question of what disposition would be made of them. Technically, the United States is not at war with North Viet Nam, and captives are classified as detainees rather than as prisoners of war.

A similar torpedo boat incident Aug. 2, 1964, marked the start of stepped-up U.S. involvement in Viet Nam. The U.S. destroyer Maddox fired on three North Vietnamese torpedo boats that were believed making a torpedo run on it. One torpedo boat was reported sunk, and the other two fled.

Three days after this incident, the United States staged its first aid raid over North Viet Nam, and pilots claimed they had sunk 15 torpedo boats and 9 gunboats in coastal waters.

The loss of four U.S. warplanes over North Viet Nam Friday raised to 277 the number announced lost to enemy action since the United States started the current air campaign Feb. 7, 1965.

On Leave

A2C Bob Wilson, stationed at (TAC) Mountain Home Air Force Base, Idaho, will be home in Monroe this weekend on a two weeks leave visiting his family and friends. He is the son of Mrs. Wilma Wilson.

Following a stay in Monroe, Wilson will spend another two weeks touring the Southwestern states.

Performance

The Phares Corder Orchestra, well rehearsed after performing for the Miss Louisiana Pageant, has been engaged to perform at Clear Lake, Iowa. One of their most applauded numbers during the pageant was "Slow Boat to China." The Corder band has the versatility to be a 4-piece combo or a 10-piece orchestra. The orchestra makes its home in Monroe.

Partly Cloudy Weather Seen

Partly cloudy and warm is the weather picture for today in the Twin Cities and vicinity. Widely scattered thundershowers are expected this afternoon, with 30 per cent probability of rain.

The high today is expected to range between 88 and 94, with an expected low of 68 to 74.

Only a trace of rain was recorded by FAA at Selman Field Saturday. The high during the day was 83, with an overnight low of 73.

Variable winds are expected at 5 to 15 mph.

N. Koreans Volunteer In Viet Nam

TOKYO (UPI) — Communist North Korea, in a broadcast heard here Saturday, declared it would send "volunteers" to North Viet Nam to aid the Communist war effort.

The official Pyongyang radio broadcast a North Korean foreign ministry statement denouncing the U.S. raids on the Hanoi-Haiphong area as an "open challenge" to the dignity of the Communist camp and an act "wrecking peace" in Asia and the world.

ALL FORMS

It said North Korea would provide all forms of aid to North Viet Nam "including the dispatch of volunteers."

The statement broadcast by the North Korean radio specifically complained of U.S. bombing raids Wednesday and Thursday when U.S. Navy and Air Force planes blasted North Vietnamese oil storage depots on the edges of Hanoi and Haiphong.

The Pyongyang broadcast was the firmest pledge of manpower aid to North Viet Nam yet made by a Communist bloc country.

The Soviet Union and Communist China, as well as North Korea, had previously said they were "prepared" to send volunteers to the aid of the Hanoi regime, but had specified they would do so only if such human aid was asked for by North Viet Nam.

Communist nations have, however, been providing material aid to the Communists in Viet Nam. Russia specifically has made available surface-to-air (SAM) missiles, and the North Vietnamese air force is equipped with some MIGs.

Recent reports from Saigon also have given evidence of North Korean arms aid to the Viet Cong.

Small quantities of North Korean-manufactured arms were reported found in two widely separated locations in South Viet Nam within the past two weeks.

U.S. Infantrymen who recently ended a sweep called "Operation Paul Revere" said they picked up 15 or 20 Soviet-style assault rifles bearing North Korean manufacturing stamps near Pleiku in South Viet Nam's Central Highlands.

It was under the guise of "volunteers" that Communist China poured troops across the border into North Korea in 1950 to battle American and South Korean troops at the height of the Korean war.

NEA Puts Off Louisianans

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The National Education Association suspended its white Louisiana affiliate Saturday for failing to take in Negro teachers.

It was the first time in the big professional organization's 104-year history that such drastic action has been taken against a state association.

Dr. Irvamae Applegate, the NEA's new president, announced the action by the NEA 11-member executive committee. She said the vote was unanimous.

She said the Louisiana Teachers Association, the white group, will be called on before the executive committee's next meeting in October to show cause why the suspension should not be "converted to expulsion."

"Upon failure to show cause, the Louisiana Teachers Association will be forthwith disaffiliated from the NEA," she said.

Nine other southern states are under the gun to merge white and Negro NEA affiliates. But only Louisiana has failed to even remove a racial restriction clause from its by-laws.

Dr. Applegate said the other states have filed some kind of merger plans with the NEA to meet a deadline of midnight Friday night.

The executive committee now has until Sept. 30 to determine whether these plans are adequate and jointly approved by both white and Negro groups.

Grader Kills Monroe Man

MOUNT PLEASANT, Tex. (AP)—Mark Willis, 58, of Monroe, La., was killed Saturday when a road grading machine he was operating overturned and fell on him.

The accident occurred inside the city limits of Mount Pleasant. Willis was employed in the construction of a section of Interstate 30.

Northeast College Beauty Wins Title Of Miss Louisiana 1967

By TRAVIS MAYO
World Staff Writer

Miss Northeast, Joy Linda Woods, crowned Miss Louisiana 1967 at the culmination of the 17th annual Miss Louisiana Pageant Saturday night at Neville Auditorium, is a professional oboist who "enjoys everything," but enjoyed nothing quite like she did winning the crown of a queen.

Miss Woods follows in the footsteps of the winner of the first beauty pageant held in Monroe in 1964 — Cherie Jean Martin — also a Northeast Louisiana State College student.

Winning the title of Miss Congeniality Saturday night was Georgia Lopes, Miss Louisiana Peach, a hazel-eyed blonde now attending Louisiana Tech.

The trophy for the Most Talented Contestant went to Deborah Gail Swartz, Miss North Louisiana Cotton, and one of the top five. Miss Swartz was first runner-up and presented as her talent competition an acrobatic routine, including cart wheels, splits and difficult turns.

TOP FIVE

Competition narrowed to the top five, Miss Swartz, Barbara Ann Bollinger, Donna Lee Field, Shirley Duncan and Miss Louisiana 1967, Miss Woods.

Miss Swartz (Miss North Louisiana Cotton) was asked for her extemporaneous discussion to describe how she became interested in her four hobbies — singing, piano, studio dance trampoline. She began singing as a young girl, joined the choir because she loved to "sing for Christ" and began her other talents at a young age.

Miss Bollinger (Miss Greater New Orleans), second runner-up, was the talent winner Friday. She presented a medley of songs from the musical "Carousel." She was asked to describe how she won the Best Actress of the Year award at college. She "let herself go" when she appeared in "Little Mary Sunshine."

Miss Field (Miss Tangipahoa Parish), third runner-up, was asked to describe why she chose a dual talent — as professional entertainer and worker with children to develop their talents in dancing, singing and acting. She said she has wanted all her life to make people happy. "I want to instill into children what I have learned from my parents. I want to make others happy."

Miss Duncan (Miss Jennings), fourth runner-up, who aspires to a career in marketing and fashion, was asked what she thought of the trend in women's clothes. "Pretty far out," she said, "but still basically with the same purpose — to flatter the woman's figure."

TOP TEN

In addition to the top five, the judges chose two former swimsuit winners, a talent winner and two dancers to complete the top 10. Rebecca Ruth Butler (Miss Bienville Parish and Thursday swimsuit winner), Wanda Faye Smith (Miss Claiborne Parish and Wednesday talent winner), Nancy Carolyn

Groom Flees Wedding To Insure Honeymoon

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — If Thomas Shaw had not fled the wedding, he might have missed the honeymoon.

The moment had arrived for Shaw, 19, of Lincoln Park and his bride, Marlene Eilers of Dearborn.

Bride and father were waiting at the foot of the aisle Friday night. Guests were waiting in their pews. As the clergyman turned to nod to the bridegroom and best man the pair sprinted out the side door.

As Thomas and his brother, Glenn, the best man, glanced out into a parking lot they had spotted three thieves taking license plates from Thomas' car, plates necessary to get him to Florida for a honeymoon.

The thieves fled in a car with the plates. The Shaws gave chase.

They trailed the fugitives through back streets and alleys until at last they pinned the three in a dead end alley.

Thomas pulled his car in to block the thieves' escape.

The thieves got out of their car and one pulled a knife and headed for Thomas. His brother jumped in front of him and was cut in the side and on the fingers. The other two attacked Thomas, knocking him down. Then all three fled on foot.

Police arrived and Thomas Shaw Sr., followed close behind. Police wanted to question the two brothers, but when women nearby found out a bride was waiting at the church they berated police into letting the Shaws return.

As the ceremony finally began, the wounded best man fainted. Then a small delay while the ring, feared lost in the scuffle, was located.

Finally married, Thomas and Marlene stopped at a police station to pick up their license plates. Then they headed straight for Florida.

They skipped the reception.

Two of the thieves were apprehended by Dearborn police. They were under 16 and the police withheld their names.

U.S., Britain Have Regrets On Explosion

PARIS (AP) — France exploded an atomic bomb from a tower above a lagoon in the South Pacific on Saturday and Defense Minister Pierre Messmer predicted that within three years his country would have an arsenal of nuclear tipped missiles.

The explosion, one of a series designed to give France the hydrogen bomb as soon as possible, touched off expressions of regret from Britain and the United States. Those two countries have renounced nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

SOVIETS QUIET

So has the Soviet Union, but Moscow, where President Charles de Gaulle completed a state visit Friday, kept silent.

Messmer said French Mirage IV bombers already carry atomic bombs but "our second generation of atomic weapons is based on devices to be carried by missiles — ground to ground or sea to ground.

"We have made very great progress in the construction of missiles, and this progress is such that today we can say our first missiles capable of transporting a nuclear warhead will be operational in 1969."

Saturday's test — the first in the South Pacific since the United States ended its explosions at Bikini — took place at Mururoa in the islands of French Polynesia.

The yield of the explosion was not revealed. A French Defense Department communique said only that its power was in "the tactical range."

In recent weeks French officials have been saying the device would pack a wallop of less than 100 kilotons, about five times the power of the U.S. atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The blast was the first of six planned for this summer at the Polynesian test center, which has been undergoing furious preparation for over two years.

Plans call for one more nuclear explosion this month and two more in August before France attempts to set off two bombs containing some thermonuclear material in September. President Charles de Gaulle is expected to visit French Polynesia for the September tests.

These so-called "doped" atomic bombs will put France one step away from a thermonuclear weapon. First tests of a hydrogen device are expected next year.

The United States and Britain, two signers of the Moscow treaty of 1963 which bars nuclear testing above ground, issued statements expressing regret at the French test.

There was no immediate comment from the Soviet Union, which helped promote the partial test-ban treaty. The Soviet news agency Tass carried a brief news dispatch on the explosion.

France and Red China, which also is striving to become a nuclear power, have refused to sign the treaty.

The French announcement of plans for the atmospheric tests had drawn protests from Japan, Chile, Ecuador, New Zealand and other nations fronting on the Pacific.

France assured these countries there would be no danger from radioactive fallout.

Mururoa is about 620 miles southeast of Tahiti, 2,720 miles from New Zealand and 3,720 miles from Chile's coast.

The French test was its first in the Pacific. France conducted four atmosphere tests in the Algerian Sahara beginning Feb 13, 1960. This was followed by three subterranean tests in the Sahara, the last in November 1964.

Becky Building For 2nd Storm

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Weather Bureau said Saturday a depression in the Atlantic Ocean had developed into a tropical storm 830 miles northeast of Bermuda.

The storm, the second of the year and named Becky, contained winds up to 60 to 70 miles an hour near the center, with gales extending outward 300 miles in the eastern semicircle and 50 to 100 miles to the west.

The Weather Bureau said Becky was expected to move on a north-northeast course at a speed of 15 to 20 miles an hour during the next 12 to 24 hours. It said little additional intensity was expected.

Becky's position at 4 p.m. EDT was located by ships near latitude 40.0 north, longitude 53.5 west. This was 830 miles northeast of Bermuda and 540 miles south of Cape Race, Newfoundland.

Business Bureau Membership Noted

The Better Business Bureau of Ouachita Parish now totals approximately 100 members, officials, who are conducting a drive to expand membership in this "vital" organization, announced "enthusiastically" Saturday.

The drive opened slightly less than two weeks ago and a total of 64 members have been added, including 15 obtained since the previous report was issued last Tuesday.

"We are real enthusiastic about the drive," said Bernard Biedenharn, chairman of the BBB of Ouachita Parish. "Our drive is progressing very nicely — in fact much better than we anticipated when we started.

"It is extremely encouraging to see that the businessmen of our community realize the importance of this organization," he said. "All of our workers are real pleased with the response we have been receiving from the business community."

At the same time Biedenharn urged all workers to try and complete their calls in time for the final report meeting which is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 12 at the Paragon Club.

With the latest figures, officials pointed out they have now reached about one-third of the total goal.

"We anticipate we shall reach that goal," Biedenharn said.

The chairman again emphasized that an active and strong Better Business Bureau will easily save the people "of our community an estimated $300,000 or more a year. And he pointed out that the bureau's main purpose is to expose improper business practices and to help promote better business-customer relations.

New members reported Saturday were: Mulhearn Funeral Home, Dial Finance Company, John's Trading Company, Sinclair and Valentine, Southern Tool Company, Adair GMC, Cooley Printing, Rivers & Heuer, Savage, Moore & Miles, Monroe Wholesale Beverage, Three Way Finance Co. Inc., West Monroe Firestone, First National Bank, Louisiana Power & Light, Ouachita Cigar & Tobacco Company.

Shreveport Man In Fatal Dive

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Warren Charles Metcalf, 29, vice president of South Coast Seacraft Company, lost his life in the Red River here Friday night.

Capt. Rudy Tilley of the Caddo Parish sheriff's office said Metcalf dived into three feet of water from the top deck of a paddlewheeled houseboat, the "Idle Ours."

Metcalf and his wife, Nancy, 26, were part of a group of 20 persons enjoying a late evening picnic and party aboard the craft.

6 Persons Injured In Auto Wreck

Six persons were injured Saturday in a two car collision on Interstate Highway 20, but generally the long holiday began quietly Saturday. The accident occured two and one-half miles west of West Monroe.

Marshal L. Waters, 22, Gaston Street, was admitted to Glenwood hospiatl in undetermined condition. Authorities late Saturday could not be reached as to Waters' condition.

Passengers from the other vehicle, driven by Melvin R. Tarpley, 32, Lipan, Tex., taken to Glenwood by Kilpatrick's ambulances were his wife, Grace Tarpley, Mrs. Esther Tarpley, Commanche, Tex., and two children, Evelyn Tarpley and Lelan Tarpley, 8; and Peggy Wiley, 18, Stephensville, Tex. None in the Tarpley vehicle were believed seriously injured.

The Tarpley man was charged by State Police with reckless driving. Troopers said he ran into the rear of the Waters vehicle, while heading east on the highway.

State police noted the day as being more accident free than most weekend days in a holiday period.

City police, meanwhile, reported light activity on the books, with Monroe officers charging Johnnie Williams, 4013 Pippin with aggravated battery, and West Monroe police booking Manuel Luna, 513 Breard, for driving while intoxicated.

Several accidents were reported in the Twin Cities Saturday, but only one in which injuries were reported.

This occurred at Louisville Avenue and North 6th Street when two automobiles collided. Injured were Teresa Kay Stinson, 18, of Hamburg, Ark., driver of one of the cars involved, and John Campbell, 2117 Oliver Road, driver of the other car.

The girl suffered facial lacerations, bruises, and a knee injury, authorities said, while Campbell suffered bruises, a cut on his right hand, and a knee injury.

Police said the girl's vehicle was traveling west on Louisville, while the Campbell car was turning left onto North 6th off Louisville when the collision occurred. Campbell, police said, was charged with negligent driving.

Bus Schedule Is Announced

Schedules for Monroe city buses Monday, will be on a Sunday or holiday routine, Commissioner H. W. McSherry said Saturday.

The Park Avenue - DeSiard Road bus will leave town at 6:20 a.m. and run every 40 minutes until the last schedule at 10:20 p.m.

The Bernstein Park bus also will leave town at 6:20 a.m. running on a 40-minute schedule until 10:20 p.m.

The Charity Hospital - Powell Ave. schedule will be the regular runs — every 40 minutes from 6:30 a.m. downtown through the day. A bus will leave each end at 6:10 arriving in town 20 minutes later.

Music Camp 2nd Phase Is Scheduled

The second phase of the annual Northeast Louisiana State College Summer Music Camp will begin next Sunday, July 10, when junior high and high school students register for the choral portion of the camp.

The first camp session, devoted to band, ended June 25.

Director of the Choral Camp will be John C. Burgin, assistant professor of music at Northeast. Other members of the camp faculty will be Joe Barry Mullins, head of the College's Department of Music; Davis Bingham, associate professor of music; Mack Hearne, assistant professor of music; and Bill Herring, choir director at Ouachita Parish High School.

Registration will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, July 10, at Biedenharn Recital Hall.

Classes will cover theory, with emphasis on sight - reading, conducting, voice instruction and choir and ensembles.

Choral laboratory experience with the college choir is also included in the instruction. Camp Director Burgin is director of two of Northeast's choral groups.

Resident campers will live in air - conditioned dormitories while at Northeast, the girls in Ouachita Hall and the boys in Madison Hall.

Fees for the choral session are $27.50 for students living on campus and $15.00 for non - resident campers.

Among the many activities planned for the campers are a get - acquainted party Sunday, swimming, movies, stunt night and attendance at a rehearsal of the Monroe Little Theatre's production of "The Music Man."

Final event of the camp will be a recital concert Friday, July 15.

Mother Booked On Murder

Drowning Of Children Puts Father In Agony

FAIRFIELD, Maine (UPI) — A grieving father bowed his head in silent anguish Saturday as his three murdered children were buried beside their brothers and sisters who met the same fate 12 years ago.

For the second time in his life, Carl Fisher, 46, watched three small, white coffins bearing the bodies of his children lowered into the ground.

Fisher's 37-year-old wife, Constance, was in a jail cell in Augusta, charged with drowning the youngsters. Her husband found them dead when he came home from work Thursday afternoon.

The woman, apparently driven by some fearful compulsion, also drowned her first three children in 1954.

Both times the pudgy, tired-looking woman tried to kill herself and left notes saying her children would be safe in heaven from the evil of the world.

Fisher, a tall, lean railroad worker, was accompanied by his parents and his wife's parents when he attended a brief graveside service Saturday at St. Francis Cemetery in nearby Waterville.

Kathleen, 6, Michael, 4, and Natalie, 9 months, were buried side by side only a few feet from the brothers and sister they never knew.

On March 8, 1954, Carl Fisher came home from work to find his children, Richard, 6, Daniel, 5, and Debra, 11 months dead of drowning and his wife unconscious from drinking shampoo.

Mrs. Fisher was charged with murder but never went to trial.

She was ruled insane and committed to Augusta State Hospital.

For the next five years, her husband visited her faithfully, and he was instrumental in having her released in 1959. The hospital said she was cured.

And so it seemed until recently. The hospital's Roman Catholic chaplain, Rev. A. J. Lemire, said he visited Mrs. Fisher from time to time and found her happy and taking proper care of new children.

About a month ago, however, Mrs. Fisher began showing signs of depression and mental vagueness, according to a pychiatrist, Dr. Prince A. Kirkpatrick.

Kirkpatrick said she appeared to be having the same visions that preceded the deaths of her first three children.

Caldwell's Elderly To Be Counted

COLUMBIA (Special) — Plans are now being made for the enumeration of citizens of Caldwell Parish who are 65 years and older, according to a statement made by Rev. Sidney A. Seegers of Columbia, chairman of the Caldwell Council on Aging.

The Rev. Seegers states that plans will soon be complete and that about July 15 enumerators will contact citizens of our parish 65 and older, similar to what is ordinarily done by regular census takers.

This is a voluntary program and is being carried out with the idea in mind of finding out the needs of our senior citizens as to recreation, health, housing, employment and general welfare.

Dr. J. H. Jones Jr. of the Division of Extension at LSU will be in Caldwell Parish July 12 and 13 to train the enumerators who will do the work in Caldwell Parish completing the questionaires as they visit our older citizens.

A part time office has been opened at Clarks, and the enumeration of citizens will be under the direction of George D. McKnight of Kelly.

Rev. Seegers states that funds for the enumeration of our senior citizens have been secured as a grant from Louisiana Commission On Aging in Baton Rouge.

According to McKnight the census will point out the needs of senior citizens in Caldwell Parish.

Major Roll Call Votes Announced

WASHINGTON (Special) — Here's how the members of the Arkansas - Louisiana area delegations were recorded on major roll call votes in the Senate and House this past week:

Passed (76, for, none against) the Auto Safety Bill, to allow the Secretary of Commerce to establish motor vehicle safety standards and establish civil penalties for violation of these standards.

ARKANSAS — For: Fulbright and McClellan. Louisiana — for: Long and Ellender.

Rejected (14 for, 62 against) an amendment to the Auto Safety Bill that would provide criminal penalties for willful violations of prohibitive sections of the legislation. Arkansas — Against: Fulbright and McClellan. Louisiana — For: Long. Against: Ellender.

Rejected (35 for, 43 against) an amendment that would eliminate from the Auto Safety Bill provisions that require information and patents resulting from research and development done under the bill to be made available to the public. Arkansas — For: Fulbright and McClellan. Louisiana — Against: Long and Ellender.

Rejected (24 for, 48 against) an amendment by Sen. John J. Williams, R - Del., to a bill authorizing development of means of producing fish protein concentrate, that would limit experimental and demonstration plants to one instead of five and reduce authorized appropriations from $5 million to $1 million. Arkansas — Against: Fulbright and McClellan. Louisiana — Against: Ellender. Not voting: Long.

Adopted 46 for, 39 against — an amendment to a bill to expand duties of federal-state unemployment offices by authorization of $200 million for job hunting with computers, restraining programs, and other job placement techniques. The amendment provides that no person shall be given a job that is vacant because its former holder is on strike or locked out. Arkansas — For: Fulbright and McClelland. Louisiana — For: Ellender. Against: Long.

Adopted (47 for, 42 against) an amendment to the bill concerning federal-state unemployment offices and job hunting, which was passed by voice vote, to eliminate provision that would give the Secretary of Labor Authority to fixx state employment service agency standards of merit and salary schedules and give that would give the Secretary of Labor authority to fix state employment service agency standards of merit and salary schedules and give that power to the state. Arkansas — For: Fulbright and McClellan. Louisiana — For: Ellender, against: Long.

House:

Decided (222 for, 148 against) to take up a bill to permit mailing and heavier and larger packages by parcel post. Arkansas — Against: Gathings. All others for. Louisiana — For: Edwards, Boggs and Morrison. Not voting: Long and Willis. All others against.

Business Workshop Scheduled

A Cooperative Education Workshop for business teachers, supervisors and administrators will be held at Northeast Louisiana State College here beginning July 11.

The three-week workshop is sponsored by Northeast's Department of Office Administration, the School of Business Administration and the School of Education in cooperation with the State Department of Education.

Participants may earn three hours of undergraduate or graduate credit in Education 403, Materials and Methods in Cooperative Education. The workshop is designed to introduce teachers to cooperative office education and teach how to establish, maintain and operate cooperative programs in the secondary schools.

The list of workshop lecturers is headed by Dr. Ruth Anderson, professor in the School of Business at North Texas State University and a nationally known expert on office administration. Dr. Anderson will speak on "An Overview of Cooperative Office Education" at the Northeast workshop July 12.

Dr. Anderson is a author of five books and numerous ar ticles in business education periodicals, former national president of Delta Pi Epsilon business education fraternity, ex-board member of the National Business Teachers Association and past vice president of the Texas Business Education Association.

She was professor and head of the Department of Business Education and Secretarial Science at Texas Christian from 1946 until 1963, when she joined the North Texas faculty. Dr. Anderson has served as visiting professor at six colleges and universities and as a guest lecturer at 15 others. She was selected Business Teacher of the Year in Fort Worth, Tex., in 1955 and Woman of the Year in Denton, Tex., in 1965.

DR. RUTH ANDERSON

Dr. Anderson received a bachelor's degree from Grove City College and master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Indiana.

Dr. Anderson's talk, along with other workshop sessions, will be from 1 to 4 p.m. in room 307 of Brown Hall. The public is invited to hear Dr. Anderson, according to Dr. J. W. Smith, assistant professor of office administration and workshop director.

Students may register for the workshop July 11 but advance registration is encouraged, Dr. Smith said.

Begin Term

LAKE PROVIDENCE (Special) — Lake Providence officials have begun their new term of office here, with swearing-in ceremonies.

Taking oaths were Mayor Ford Land, Marshal Henry Vaughan and aldermen Kirby Tyrone, Hyland Nelson, F. E. Fortenberry, Howard White and P. G. Marron.

In their meeting following the ceremony, the board named Hyland Nelson as commissioner of lights and water; Kirby Tyrone as finance officer, Howard White as public safety director, and F. E. Fortenberry as street commissioner.

George Fox was named city attorney and J. V. Maggio was chosen as city clerk. Mrs. Gene Flynn was named billing and posting clerk and cashier.

Predictable Act

MANILA (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Saturday Communist China had reacted predictably to U.S. bombing of fuel dumps close to Hanoi and Haiphong in North Viet Nam.

"Of course they didn't like it," he said. "We didn't expect them to like it."

Rusk spoke briefly to newsmen as he landed in the Philippines for discussions with President Ferdinand E. Marcos on the war situation in Viet Nam.

SINCE THE SPACE Age got its start in 1957, and especially in the past six years, unmanned satellites have been soaring into space at an increasing rate. At present the United States has sent up 360 successful unmanned craft, and the Soviet Union, 160 — plus for both. They include military satellites, weather observers, moon probers and others which are providing information of all kinds. The drawing shows Uncle Sam and the U.S.S.R. reaching into space, constantly with larger and more sophisticated craft. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Unmanned Satellites Probing The Secrets Of Big Universe

EDITOR'S NOTE — After a shaky start only nine years ago, the United States and the Soviet Union are filling the skies with unmanned satellites. They don't reap big headlines, but they are helping man in many ways — communications, weather forecasting, navigation. And the outlook is for more and bigger shots, and more dividends.

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Around the earth, above and around the moon, in the lonely stillness of space, unmanned satellites are probing the secrets of the universe.

They don't get the headlines that manned space flights do, but the automatic robots are yielding rich dividends in weather, communications, navigation and reconnaissance data. They are revolutionizing science's view of the universe and helping to make man's life on earth a better one.

Only six years ago, the United States and the Soviet Union were happy if they could throw a tiny satellite into any kind of an orbit with a simple Geiger counter aboard.

Now, both nations are launching satellites by the bundle and shifting them all over the skies to desired locations. Some have traveled with pinpoint accuracy to Mars, Venus, and the moon — and have relayed pictures over millions of miles of space. Some have had over 400,000 parts, all of which operated flawlessly for months in the hostile new environment.

FIRST IN 1957

The Soviet Union launched the first two Sputniks in 1957, but during the next four years was able to place only 10 satellites in orbit.

The U.S. placed five satellites in orbit in 1958 and 10 in 1960 — but recorded more failures than successes.

The figures for 1965 are astounding, considering the relative youth of the space age. The United States last year sent 94 satellites into orbit around the earth and fired two to the moon and one into orbit about the sun. The Russians placed 66 in earth orbit and rocketed two to Venus, one of them striking the planet.

To date, the United States has sent more than 370 successful unmanned craft into space and the Soviet Union more than 170. In addition, the United States has launched 13 manned ships with a total of 20 astronauts, compared to eight ships and 11 Russian cosmonauts.

The majority of these unmanned satellites have been military ones — more than 200 by the United States and more than 90 by the Russians, according to U.S. experts.

America's military satellites are launched in secrecy from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. Most are involved in photo reconnaissance of the Soviet Union, Red China and other areas of the globe. Others are used for navigation, mapping, policing the limited nuclear test-ban treaty and for experimenting with such things as satellite observation and inspection. Film and other gear usually is returned to earth for recovery after a week or so in space, accounting for the high launching rate.

The Soviet Union also is believed to be using unmanned satellites for extensive reconnaissance work. American officials believe the Cosmos satellites launched from a base at Tyuratam are military in nature because their orbits take them each day over the continental United States and major portions of Canada, Alaska and Europe. They usually stay up about eight days and then are returned to earth.

SATELLITES

Other Cosmos satellites are launched from a base at Kapustin Yar. They do not cover as wide an area of the globe and are believed to be what the Russians claim for all of the Cosmos series: scientific satellites.

The early Sputniks and American Explorers and Vanguards were sent up for scientific research. With more sophisticated equipment, the smaller American satellites produced the richer harvest.

They discovered and defined the potentially dangerous Van Allen radiation belt which encircles the globe; answered many questions about the communications - influencing ionosphere; located a great solar wind blowing radiation clouds through planetary space; described the earth as not round, but pear-shaped; detected layers of helium and hydrogen and bands of cosmic dust beyond our atmosphere, and proved it was safe for man to venture away from his planet.

As rockets became larger and more reliable, heavier satellites — weighing up to 22,000 pounds for the United States and 27,000 pounds for the Russians — were sent into space.

The series of U.S. geophysical and solar observatories — large payloads packed with instruments — have explored the sun and earth's atmosphere in great detail. A big disappointment was the failure in April of the first orbiting astronomical observatory, a $500-million package which was intended to give man his initial clear look at the stars and perhaps uncover clues to the origin of the universe. More and larger observatories are on tap.

Complex payloads have been launched on lunar and planetary missions — but not without difficulty. Twelve moon shots failed before the United States finally succeeded with three straight Ranger picture-taking efforts in 1964 and 1965 and the recent soft-landing of Surveyor 1.

America has sent two spacecraft to Mars and two to Venus, with one of each succeeding. The Soviet Union has succeeded on four of 14 moon shots, but has failed on nine of 10 Venus shots and on all seven of its Mars attempts.

The U.S. Mariner 2 sailed to within 21,648 miles of Venus in 1962 and relayed a wealth of data, including the fact that the surface temperature is about 800 degrees but that the reading dips to 30 to 70 degrees below zero on the cloud-top of the perpetually shrouded planet.

Mariner 4 passed within 5,600 miles of Mars last year and sent back 21 pictures of the surface. Analysis of radio data showed the red planet to be more moon-like than earth-like and indicated that Mars has no radiation belt and practically no magnetic field.

RANGER MOON

The Ranger moon pictures, plus the closeups obtained by the landers, the Soviet Luna 9 and America's Surveyor 1, apparently show that man can land safely on the lunar surface. Luna 10, the world's first moon orbiter, provided information on conditions in the vicinity of the moon.

Surveyor 1 was the first of an all-out assault that the United States plans on the moon to pave the way for manned lunar landings. During a 2½-year period 16 soft-landings and lunar orbiting shots are slated.

But budget problems have curtailed the planetary program and in the next seven years only three Mars and one Venus launching are planned. In 1973, a huge Project Voyager craft is to soft-land on Mars.

Russian interest in the moon and planets has been keen and they are expected to pursue these goals. Secrecy shrouds their plans.

As the space age grew, scientists decided to start making satellites work for man in his everyday life.

Since everybody talks about the weather, it was decided to see if satellites could do anything about it. The first of the Tiros series went aloft in 1960 and proved that fast relay of cloud cover pictures could be used effectively to predict the weather, in many cases far in advance of conventional means.

A total of 10 Tiros shots went into orbit and proved instrumental in detecting hurricanes and other storms around the globe. These research vehicles poineered the way for the launching of the first two operational weather satellites last February — ESSA 1 and 2.

These two satellites combine to provide the U.S. Weather Bureau with a complete picture of the earth's weather every day. They also permit individual weather stations around the world to receive instant pictures of conditions in their areas. Some television stations in the United States are equipped to feed the ESSA pictures directly to home screens.

Weather satellites now being developed will provide accurate night as well as daylight coverage, will spot forest fires, help shipping by forecasting the breakup of ice packs and through measurement of infrared emission from the soil locate good crop-growing areas.

A dozen American experimental communications satellites — the Echos, Telstars, Relays and Syncoms — laid the groundwork for the launching last year of Early Bird, a successful satellite which hovers 22,000 miles over one spot in the Atlantic.

EARLY BIRD

The Communications Satellite Corp. — Comsat — termed Early Bird an operational prototype. It has been in commercial use since June 1965, serving as a space switchboard for relaying telephone calls, television programs, teletype messages and photographs between North America and Europe.

Comsat plans to launch its first two operational satellites late this year to provide near-global coverage.

On June 16, the Air Force set off its first shot in a program that may revolutionize military communications. A mighty Titan 3c blasted off and successfully dropped seven "switchboard" satellites into different orbits, one after the other, 21,000 miles above the equator. Two more Titan shots, one in August and another in the fall, will bring the total of "switchboards" to 22. Together they are expected to provide the Pentagon with a jam-proof system of instant communications with United States military forces anywhere in the world. Initial emphasis is expected to be on traffic to and from Viet Nam.

Atlantis May Be Real Instead Of A Legend

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Atlantis, the lost continent which was mentioned by the ancient Greek philosopher Plato, is back in the spotlight.

Prof. Angelos Galanopoulos of Athens University, a leading seismologist, now believes he has located what may be the site of legendary Atlantis, the flourishing prehistoric city inundated within minutes by one of the great natural catastrophes of history.

He also claims the same catastrophe destroyed Knossos, site of the Minoan civilization of Crete, and also accounted for the same phenomena, described in the Book of Exodus, which enabled Moses and the children of Israel to cross the Red Sea on dry land.

A preliminary survey, including underwater exploration by Greek and American scientists, is to be carried out this fall. It will be the first practical attempt to investigate the theory.

Surveying, to be conducted by scientists from Athens University and the Woods Hole (Mass.) Oceanographic Institute, will involve test excavations at depths up to 60 feet below the surface of the Aegean Sea.

The expedition follows publication of a paper by Galanopoulos in which he develops and defends his thesis that the remnants of Atlantis are awaiting discovery beneath the waters off the Aegean island of Santorini. The island, about 500 miles from the Egyptian Coast, is a favorite of tourists.

According to Galanopoulos, a mighty volcanic explosion, around the 13th century B.C. set off air waves 350 times more powerful than those of a hydrogen bomb and devastated the island.

In recent years, the ruins of three towns have been spotted in waters near Santorini, now a half-circled island surrounding a kind of crater lake — result of the collapse of the central volcanic cone.

Galanopoulos believes one effect of the first stage of the two-act catastrophe was the earthquake that destroyed the Minoan civilization, with the famed labryinth of the Minotaur at Knossos.

"Volcanic ash would have been carried for hundreds of miles and is the most likely explanation of rivers turning red and fire running along the ground as described in Exodus," the professor says.

"Geographical and climatic changes would account for the ten plagues of hail and locust which afflicted Egypt, that made the exodus possible."

The second stage, perhaps a year later, devastated Santorini (also known as Thira), coinciding with the flight from Egypt, a roof that had been formed over the crater by falling pumice, perhaps 600 to 900 feet thick, collapsed.

The central part of the island, the professor says, an area of 50 square miles, thus became a gigantic cavern.

"A colossal inrush of water," he explains, "drew the sea in tidal waves away from the Egyptian Coast."

According to the Bible, Galanopoulos points out, Moses and his people at the time of their crossing of the Red Sea, were waiting on a coastal strip of land that flanked a lake called Yam Suf, or the Lake of Canes. On today's maps, the crossing is Sebcha el Bardawil about 30 miles east of Port Said, Egypt.

"Between them and the next strip of land was a seafilled gap, dry for Moses and his people to cross. But the Lake of Water remained and, as the Bible says, there was a wall of water to their right and left.

"The time that elapsed between the dividing of the waters and the backwash that overwhelmed the pursuing Egyptian army would have been about 15 minutes — long enough for Moses and his people to cross but not time enough for the Egyptians," says Galanopoulos.

Support for Galanopoulos' theory, at least as regards the possible site of Atlantis and the destruction of Knossos, came this spring from James W. Mavor of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, who is due in Greece in early autumn with other scientists from the institute.

Writing in Oceanus, an institute publication, Mayor points out that eruption and subsequent collapse of volcanos are known to have occurred at Crater Lake, in Oregon, and at the island of Krakatoa in the East Indies. The Krakatoa disaster occurred in modern times and is well documented.

Recent drillings in the sea and on islands in the Santorini area have revealed ash layers up to 90 feet thick. New techniques of dating by radioactive tests have indicated that the disaster occurred in 1400 B.C. — plus or minus 100 years. The Bible dates exodus at 1491 B.C.

Plato wrote about Atlantis as a powerful kingdom whose armies overran the neighboring Mediterranean lands until it finally sank beneath the sea, apparently destroyed by an earthquake or volcano.

Services Set At 2 p.m. For Mrs. Waelder

Funeral services for Mrs. Byrnie Handy Waelder, 81, will be at 2 p.m. today at the Mulhearn Funeral Home Chapel with Christian Sciences Services.

Burial will be in the Hasley Cemetery in West Monroe.

Mrs. Waelder was the last surviving member of a prominent Ouachita Parish family. She died at St. Francis Hospital Friday after a long illness.

Pallbearers will be Thomas Leigh, Dr. W. E. Smith, Dr. C. P. Gray, Bill Hardin, W. E. Leigh, S. C. Strausser, Charles Smith and George Edwards.

Sen. Ellender Predicts Aid From North

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., predicted Saturday that Senate Southerners fighting President Johnson's open housing proposal will get help from Northern allies who are afraid their constituents will be "gored on the horn of 'civil rights'."

Ellender, in a radio report to constituents, also described as deplorable the recent voter registration march in Mississippi. He said such protests "do very little good, whether they occur in the North or South."

Ellender's comments were recorded before the House Judiciary Committee modified the President's open occupancy proposal to exempt property owners who sell no more than two dwellings a year and owners of apartments with up to four units who live on the premises. The President had proposed a broader ban on racial, religious or ethnic discrimination in the sale or rental of housing.

Ellender said he doubted that the modifications "will be sufficient to satisfy northern critics of the bill who are fearful of their own constituents being gored on the horn of 'civil rights'." He added:

"If the house...does approve legislation along these lines, which is extremely doubtful at the moment, it will still have a stiff fight in the Senate. This time, we of the South will have Northern allies, I believe.

Tibet Propaganda

DARJEELING, India (AP) — Propaganda broadcasts from Red China's radio station at Lhasa, capital of Tibet, said government "advisory committees" in all Tibetan villages had forwarded statements condemning "counter revolutionaries and royalists" and pledging full support of Mao Tze-Tung. Tibet's god-king, the Dalai Lama, lives in exile in India.

Hoffa Campaigns Hard For Sure Re-Election

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "If there's any opposition, I can't find it," grinned Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa Saturday.

But Hoffa, getting ready for certain reelection to another five-year term as chief of the world's biggest union, wasn't taking any chances in campaigning among some 2,200 union delegates.

Hoffa came down from his closely guarded fourth floor headquarters of the Fontainebleau hotel to talk, greet and shake hands with everybody in sight in the lobby.

"I've known all these guys for 30 years and I might as well," said the 53-year-old Hoffa when someone commented he appeared to be campaigning as if his reelection weren't already in the bag.

Then Hoffa hustled off to shake more hands and greet delegates and their families arriving here for the opening of the teamsters' convention Monday.

The last trace of any kind of opposition to Hoffa disappeared when union Vice President Harold Gibbons withdrew plans to oppose Hoffa's choice of Vice President Frank Fitzsimmons as the union's new general vice presient.

Hoffa will create the new post by changing the union's constitution, providing for the general vice president to automatically succeed him if he should lose his court appeals on two criminal convictions.

Under the proposed constitutional revision, Hoffa would automatically step back into the union's presidency if he went to prison but was later freed before his presidential term expired.

The Supreme Court is expected to rule next Fall on Hoffa's appeal of his eight-year jury tampering sentence. Hoffa's five-year mail fraud sentence is pending in the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Although Gibbons found that opposing the Hoffa machine within the 1.7 million member union was futile, he reportedly may make a plea at the convention for more democracy in the union.

There is no opposition to the reelection of Hoffa, Secretary-Treasurer John F. English and the 13 vice presidents who make up the Teamsters ruling executive board.

Beauty Queen Says Just Be 'Yourself'

By BOB CARROLL
World Staff Writer

A dream that "every girl has" was fullfilled for Miss Joy Linda Woods Saturday night as she captured the hearts of hundreds and especially those of five expertly qualified judges who gave her the crown and responsibility of "Miss Louisiana for 1967" Saturday night.

In her first press interview as the state's reigning queen at Neville Auditorium, Miss Woods, 20-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon B. Woods, New Orleans, said that "presentation—how you present yourself" was the most important thing in facing her duties as the state's official representative during the coming year.

She added "naturalness . . . just being yourself" as being another guideline that she would follow, as she obviously has followed in the past living up to the Miss Northeast State College.

Again Miss Woods played the oboe — a most difficult and unusual instrument to master, which she readily admits, and went into an acrobatic dance routine to the tune of "Slaughter on 110th Avenue" as her talent in the beauty pageant. This brought spontaneous applause from the audience as it had Thursday night in preliminary competition.

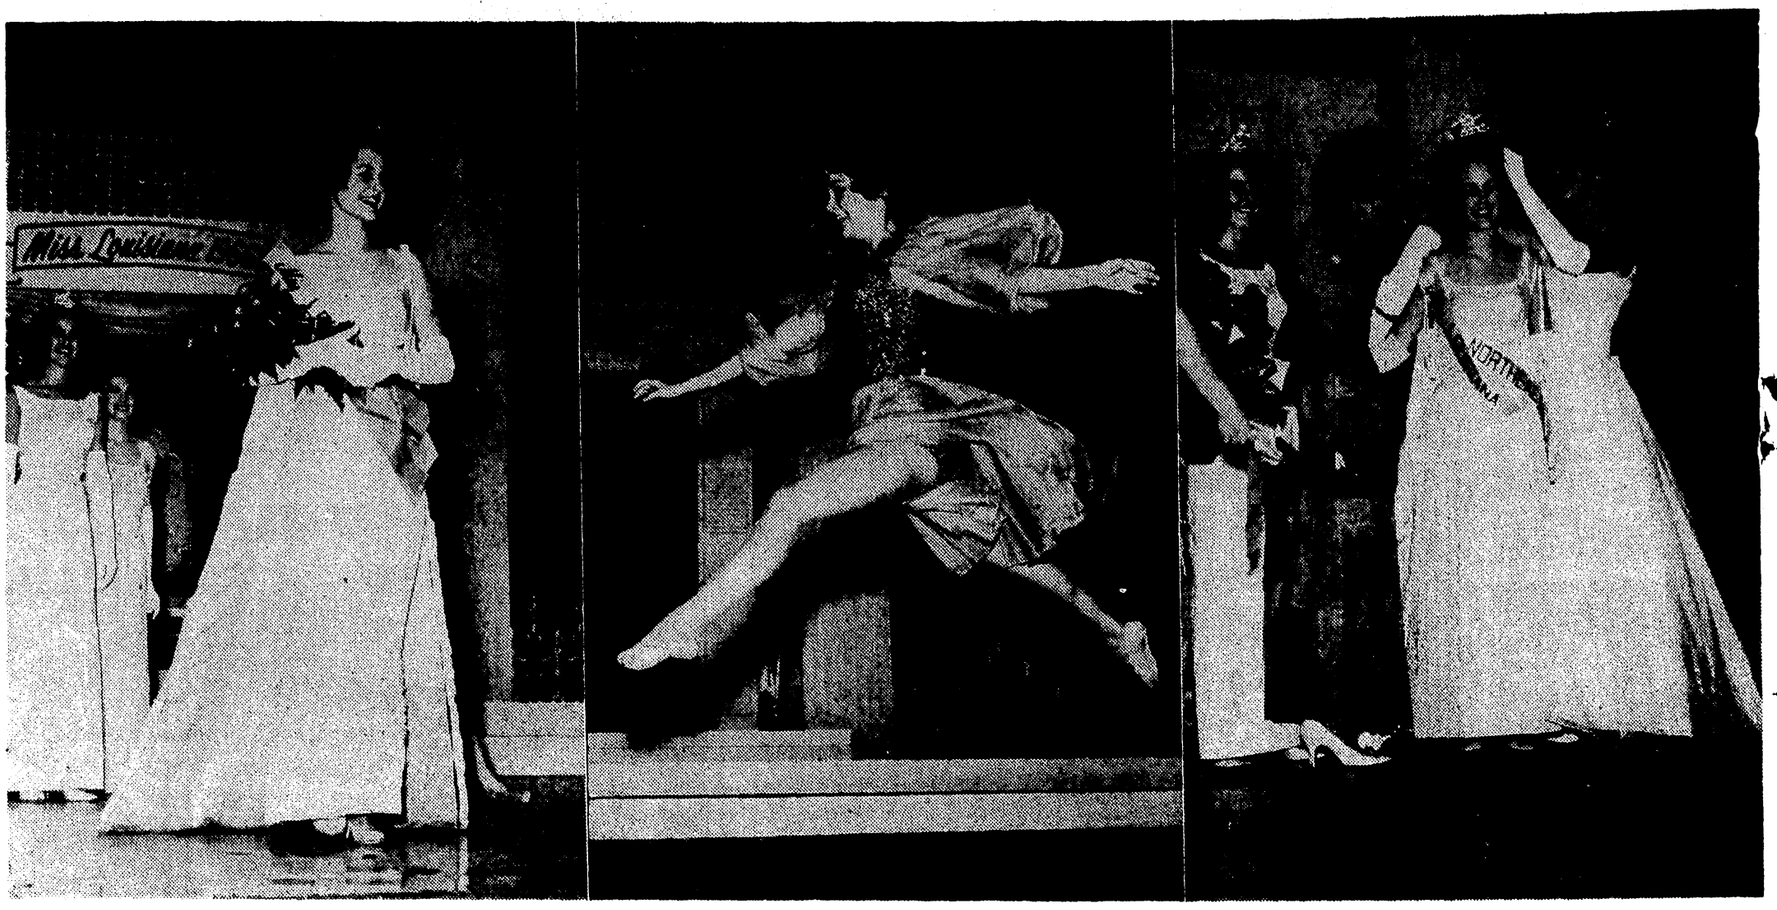
She has been dancing since she was three and playing the oboe for seven years.

"I just did what I was supposed to," she said of her performance Saturday night, and added that she had not changed up her routine any from the way in which she presented it in winning preliminary talent honors Thursday. Showing great poise throughout the pageant, she said that she "did not" feel greater pressure Saturday night than she had previously.

Miss Woods gives credit to her parents, who were "just happy, happy fo rher", and her teachers in dance, music and those at Northeast where she is a senior studying music history.

Miss Woods says that she has a steady boyfriend, and that she feels that he will be "quite happy" with her newest achievement in a line of achievements.

The thing that she remembers most about the pageant (next to winning of course) is "all the wonderful people that I have met . . . the friendship of all the girls." She described the group as "just one big family."



BEGINNING HER WALK down the runway at Neville Auditorium Saturday night with the crown of Miss Louisiana 1967 on her head and a happy smile on her face is Joy Linda Woods. In the center photo Joy performs an acrobatic ballet that complimented her oboe version of "Slaughter on 10th Avenue" which she used in talent competition. At right the Miss Louisiana 1966, Lynda Ferguson places the crown on the new queen's head, while a visiting queen, Miss Florida, Dianne Colston, places the sash on her shoulder. Cowboys End Cattle Drive Of Longhorns

DODGE CITY, Kan. (UPI) — A herd of longhorn cattle wrangled by a band of Texas cowboys rumbled through historic Front Street Saturday, echoing the sounds of a century ago.

The drive, which started last Sunday in San Antonio, Tex., was in celebration of the first cattle drive 100 years ago from Texas to the railhead at Dodge City.

The modern longhorns, nearly 100 of them, were met with much greater fanfare than their ancestors. Gov. William H. Avery of Kansas brought his own saddle and joined trail boss Charles Schreiner on horseback at the head of the parade.

And instead of dusty streets, the cowboys herded the cattle over four and six-lane thoroughfares for much of the route through town which included a stop at Boot Hill. Marshal Ramon House, wearing chaps and carrying six-shooters, met the Texans at the outskirts of town.

A celebration Saturday night at the Long Branch Saloon in a reconstructed part of old Dodge City was the final item for the trail hands, who planned to return to Texas today with steers unsold at auction.

The trail drive was the idea of the Texas Longhorn Breeders Association.

Trucks were used to transport the cattle most of the way from Texas, with the final lap from Altus, Okla., to Dodge City covered Friday.

In olden days, the cattle would have been loaded at the railroad for shipment East. An 1880 model locomotive, brought by the Santa Fe Railroad from Topeka, stood on the track in Dodge City Saturday as a reminder of the earlier era.

Women Arrested In Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE (AP) —Two Baton Rouge area women were arrested here Friday on Mississippi warrants, sheriff's deputies reported.

The warrants charge the two with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon to commit murder.

Norma Wohlwend, 26, of Baton Rouge, and Mrs. Callie Gentry, 49, of Zachary, were freed on bond following their arrest.

Deputies said Mississippi authorities charged the women in connection with allegedly running down Mrs. Wohlwend's ex-father-in-law as he tried to flag down their car Wednesday.

Mrs. Wohlwend was reportedly trying to take her two children from her former father-in-law's house.

Her ex-husband allegedly has legal custody of the children, deputies said.

MOSQUITO MASCOT

MOSCOW (UPI) —Soviet Antarctic explorers have a mosquito for a mascot, the official news agency Tass said Saturday. Tass described the mosquito as the first one on the Antarctic continent and said no one knows exactly how it got there.

Homer Man Fatally Shot

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP) — Wallace Willis, 23, of Homer, La., was shot to death Saturday night during an argument in a cafe parking lot about 10 miles south of here.

James B. Turner, 45, also of Homer, was held for questioning.

The Union County sheriff's office said Willis began arguing with two men after he was asked to leave the cafe at Dodge City. Turner was one of the men.

No charges were filed.

Jes' Ramblin'

Shows Poise

Mayor W. L. (Jack) Howard, who was called out onto the stage on two occasions to present the "most talented" girl at the Miss Louisiana Pageant showed great poise in the moment of embarrassment when the envelope with the girl's name in it could not be found.

With equal poise, and great showmanship, Bob Evans, the emcee carried the show on until the envelope showed up and the mayor made his entrance for the second time and finally managed to give away the trophy.

Parade Big Feature Of Beauty Pageant

Sally Grunch in "her" 1903 convertible gave spectators a manly grin and almost stole the show as the Miss Louisiana Pageant parade maneuvered through the Twin Cities Saturday afternoon, but competion was too much for the beauty of 1928 and all eyes soon turned back to the 38 beauty queens and the visiting royalty.

The Monroe Jaycees' parade featured community leaders, marching units, a hillbilly band and a Monroe Fire Department ladder truck with the siren sounding.

Leading the parade, just behind the colors, were the 22 Shrine drum and bugle corps. Mayor W. L. Howard and West Monroe Mayor W. B. Hatten rode together in the first convertible, driven by Bill Hargiss, lifetime member of the Monroe Jaycees. Tom R. Lee, executive director of the Miss Louisiana Pageant, followed the mayors.

Lynda Ferguson (Miss Louisiana 1965) followed in a convertible driven by Monroe policeman Charles Brownlee. She wore a turquoise taffeta dress with a sequined bodice.

Miss Florida and Miss Mississippi rode together in a convertible driven by policeman Willie Watson. Miss Florida wore a red printed chiffon dress and Miss Mississippi a white silk dress with sequined bodice.

Miss Alaska and Miss Arkansas were in the middle of the parade in a convertible driven by officer Jim Dimos. Miss Alaska wore Eskimo mudluks and a bright burgundy parka. Miss Arkansas wore a white gown.

Just behind the visiting royalty were the 29 Dixie Dolls of Shreveport, led by director Linda Edge. Next came the beauty contestants, two in each convertible.

Drivers of the convertibles bearing the queens were members of the Monroe Police Department. Drivers were Alten Ezell, Bobby R. West, Sam Harrington, Charles Durham, Johnny Hughes, Bud Slaughter, Gil Payne, Robert Young, Donald E. Gill, E. W. Powell, Virgil Bradbury, Tom Easterling, Jerry Shoemaker, Lawrence Hunnicut, Buddy Laurent, Tommy Poulan, Paul Smith, Larry Bennett and E. A. Porter. All contestants rode in official automobiles, bearing the seal of the Miss America Pageant.

Also in the parade were supervising hostess Ruth Harvey in the official auto of the Newcomer Greeting Service and the four members of the Twin City Jamboree performing from the bed of a truck.

The parade originated at Third and Pine streets in West Monroe and terminated at about 10th and DeSiard streets in Monroe. Large crowds lined the route in both communities. In downtown Monroe, spectators filled the sidewalks for eight blocks.

No rain fell during the parade, although skies were threatening and the air was humid.

As the parade passed the Monroe Jaycees' boxoffice on DeSiard Street in Monroe, Miss Mississippi commented upon the royal robe and golden throne on display in the window. Soon after the parade, the robe and throne were transported to Neville Auditorium for the crowning of Miss Louisiana 1966. The robe displays beaded white, gold and green magnolias and is lined with ermine. The throne is the result of 35 hours of labor by Bobbie Perry and Jean Lee.

France May Seek Meeting With Johnson

PARIS (UPI) —Diplomats speculated Saturday that President Charles de Gaulle would seek a meeting with President Johnson this fall, possibly in the United States. But U.S. and French officials said they had no such indication.

The talk in diplomatic quarters came as De Gaulle himself was again criticizing U.S. police in Viet Nam and hailing the "rapprochement" between France and the Soviet Union resulting from his recent visit there.

De Gaulle told a cabinet meeting Saturday the U.S. air raids against Hanoi and Haiphong fuel depots would make solution of the Viet Nam War more difficult. His exact words were not made known but a government spokesman said after the session France "condemns" the Hanoi-Haiphong attacks.

Diplomats said the possibility of a Johnson-De Gaulle meeting might be raised by U.S. Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen, who returns to Washington on Tuesday for consultations with President Johnson.

De Gaulle leaves for an official visit to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, during the final week in August and later goes to Phnom Penh, Cambodia, New Caledonia and Tahiti in the French Pacific islands.

The French leader also was goind to the site of this country's nuclear test series in the Tuamotu Archipelago. Diplomats said he could return over the Western Hemisphere, touching down at a point convenient for both Johnson and himself.

Northeast Beauty Wins State Crown

Sutton (Miss Jackson Parish and Wednesday swimsuit winner); Sara Jazquetta Lewis (Miss West Monroe and a modern ballet dancer) and Beverly Kay Harris (Miss Louisiana Soybean and a marimbist and dancer) joined the Top Five in the honored positions.

The winner, Miss Northeast, was Thursday talent winner. Miss Greater New Orleans, second runner-up, was Friday talent winner.

Miss Bienville Parish was Thursday swimsuit winner and Miss Claiborne Parish was Wednesday talent winner. Miss Jackson Parish was Wednesday swimsuit winner.

MISS NORTHEAST

Miss Woods laid the foundation for her eventual victory by presenting as her talent selection "Slaughter on 10th Avenue." She first performed the selection on the oboe and later danced a ballet. Accompanying her was the Phares Corder Orchestra. The audience applauded her back on stage for a bow, repeating a courtesy they afforded her when she won the talent competition Thursday.

In the swimsuit competition, Miss Northeast appeared in a white suit with wide straps across the shoulders. She is 5-feet-5-inches in height and weigh 112 pounds. She has a 35-23-35 silhouette, blue eyes and dark brown hair.

Her hobbies are interior decorating, dancing, painting, art crafts, knitting, sewing, bowling, golf, swimming and badminton. The Northeast Louisiana State College student attended Behrman High School and won a music scholarship to NLSC.

Miss Woods holds titles, honors or offices in the Christian Science Organization, NLSC Girl's bowling league, and four symphonic groups. She plays first oboe in the NLSC Woodwind Quintet, and is a member of the NLSC Symphonic Band, the Twin City Symphony and the NLSC Chamber Music Orchestra.

Her ambition is to be a college teacher of oboe and music history and a professional oboist in an orchestra. She was sponsored by the NLSC Student Government Association and her hostess for the pageant was Mrs. Raymond Henry.

MISS CONGENIALITY

Miss Lopes (Miss Louisiana Peach) broke into tears when presented the trophy on stage for Miss Congeniality. The Louisiana Peach Festival sponsored her in the pageant.

MOST TALENTED

Miss Swartz, first runner-up and winner of the award as the most talented contestant, was called back for a second bow after presenting her acrobatic routine to "I Could Have Danced All Night" by the Phares Corder Orchestra.

She was a member of the 1965 Homecoming Court at Louisiana College and of the May Pageant court. She holds titles as 1965 Miss Stock Show and Miss Congeniality and as the 1965 Morehouse Parish Farm Bureau Queen.

Miss Swartz is secretary of the BSU Choir and a member of the Greater Executive Council. The 5-foot-2-inch brownette with blue eyes weighs 108 pounds and has 35-24-25 physical characteristics. Her ambition is to complete her education in business and music for Christian service. She was sponsored by the Bastrop Jaycees.

CINDERELLA

In her farewell message, Lynda Lee Ferguson of Shreveport, Miss Louisiana 1966, described how she used to play "Cinderella" as a child in pigtails and braces, using her mother's best table cloth as the queenly robe. "Now my Cinderella dream has come true," she said. She thanked the citizens of Louisiana for making the year wonderful for her and said she is taking her mother's advice to "never look back."

She asked a favor of the audience. "Always please remember me. I'll always be your girl." During the evening she received three standing ovations from a highly responsive capacity audience.

Special entertainment was presented by Miss Arkansas (acrobatic dance) Miss Alaska (singing "Summertime" and "Dixie,") Miss Mississippi (singing "Unsinkable Molly Brown") and Miss Florida singing ("Rock-a-Bye Your Baby With a Dixie Melody)." Bravos, wild applause and standing ovations were lavished upon all the visiting queens.

U.S. Deplores Nuclear Test In Pacific

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United States officially deplored the French nuclear test explosion in the Pacific Saturday and urged that every nation join the existing test ban treaty.

The State Department issued a statement voicing regrets that France had set off an above-ground blast at a remote South Seas site. A spokesman also confirmed that the United States had stationed Navy ships in the area "to observe the tests."

"This is quite open, routine and to be expected," he told newsmen. "Our ships are instructed to stay well in international waters and they are a good distance from the test site."

The official statement of reaction said: "As a party to the limited test ban treaty, the United States government is opposed to any testing of nuclear weapons in the prohibited environments; that is, the atmosphere, under water or outer space.

"The U.S. government regrets that France has resumed nuclear testing in the atmosphere."

Neither the French nor Chinese Communists have signed the treaty.

Houston Sweeps Redlegs

Mantilla's Homer Nets 2nd Victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Felix Mantilla's three-run homer in the eighth inning gave Houston a 6-3 victory over Cincinnati Saturday night and a sweep of their day-night doubleheader.

The Astros erupted for four runs in the seventh inning of the day game, broke a 4-4 tie and went on to an 8-5 victory.

With the score tied 3-3 in the nightcap, Sonny Jackson got the Astros started with a leadoff single in the eight. Jim Wynn followed with another single, sending Jackson to third.

Cincinnati Manager Don Heffner brought in reliever Ted Davidson at that point and Jackson was thrown out at the plate on Rusty Staub's grounder. Heffner then switched pitchers again, bringing in Don Nottebart. Mantilla followed with his homer into the left field seats.

The loss was tagged on Sammy Ellis, now 5-12.

Deron Johnson's homer helped the Reds to an early lead but the Astros tied it in the seventh on a double by Bill Heath, a sacrifice and Bob Lillis' sacrifice fly.

Lillis contributed the big blow of the seventh inning uprising in the day game, a two-run single. It was his third hit of the game. Lee Maye tripled and Jackson and Ron Brand stroked run-producing singles. The Astros also stole three bases in the inning.

Maye homered earlier for the Astros while Tommy Helms and Vada Pinson connected for the Reds.

Skeet Shoot To Be Held Today

The skeet shooters of the Pine Hills Gun Club will be celebrating the Fourth one day early this afternoon when they blaze away at 100-12 guage registered skeet targets. This will make 400 registered skeet targets that have been offered at The Pine Hills Gun Club thus far since the Spring opening date. The registered targets are most important as they count toward permanent classification.

The trap field will be open for practice but has no definite scheduled program.

The best group of scores of this shooting season was posted at the trap field this past Sunday. Club President, Jess Cobb, was in high gun position by breaking 147 out of 150 trap targets. Toby Bencroft, Sr. broke 98 out of 100 followed closely by Dr. R. W. Dickenhorst and R. T. Lolley with 97 out of 100, Charles Rector came in with a 96, Shooters breaking 50 straight targets included R. T. Lolley, Toby Bancraft Sr., Nat Hamilton and Jess Cobb.

British Open's Field Reduced In Qualifying

Muirfield, Scotland (AP) — Two days of qualifying rounds reduced the 1966 British Open golf championship field to 130 Saturday and all of them were chasing favorites Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player.

Out of the original 250 starters, 85 found places by scoring anywhere from 135 to 144 over 36 holes on the Gullane and Luffness courses adjacent to the Muirfield links where the title play starts Wednesday morning.

Nicklaus, Palmer and Player whipped around Muirfield's 6,887-yard, par 71 layout in a practice round. They kept no cards, but each approximated par.

The qualifying rounds yielded few surprises except the elimination of Ireland's Joe Carr, captain of the British Walker Cup team. He had 148.

Joe Torre, Bill Freehan Added As Catchers For All-Star Tilt

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Torre of the Atlanta Braves and Bill Freehan of the Detroit Tigers were named Saturday as the catchers for the July 12 All-Star baseball game at St. Louis, completing the starting line-ups.

The selection of Freehan, a 6-foot-3, 205-pounder, gave the Tigers three of the eight starting berths on the American League team, exclusive of pitchers. The other Tigers are shortstop Dick McAuliffe and outfielder Al Kaline.

Baltimore is the only other American League team with two. The Orioles had Brooks Robinson at third base and Frank Robinson in the outfield.

Torre is the second Brave to make the team, joining outfielder Hank Aaron. San Francisco also has a pair in first baseman Willie McCovey and outfielder Willie Mays.

The National League vote for catcher by players, managers and coaches was a landslide for Torre, who had been used much of the time at first base in recent weeks. Torre drew 216 votes and Tom Haller of San Francisco, the runnerup, had 27. The only others with 10 or more were Tim McCarver of St. Louis with 21 and John Bateman of Houston with 10. It was the third straight year Torre has been named starter.

Freehan, now in his fourth full season in the majors, was named to the team last year as a reserve. This will be his first start. The Tiger catcher edged Earl Battey of the Minnesota Twins, the 1965 starter by 16 votes, 111-95.

Andy Etchebarren, Baltimore rookie, drew strong support and finished third with 40 votes. Elston Howard of New York with 17 and Jose Azue of the Cleveland Indians with 15 were the others with 10 or more.

The American League pitchers will be announced Wednesday by Sam Mele manager of AL All-Stars and the National League pitchers Thursday by Walter Alston, who'll manage the NL.

The rest of the 25-man squads will be released Friday. Starting pitchers will be picked the day before the game.

All starters, except pitcher, must play at least the first three innings. A pitcher can not pitch more than three innings unless it is an extra inning game.

Rookies Get Chicago Past Boston, 6-0

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookies Lee Elia and Tommie Agee clouted home runs in support of Joe Horlen's six-hit pitching and powered the Chicago White Sox to a 6-0 victory over Boston Saturday night.

The triumph was the third straight for the White Sox as Horlen hiked his record to a mediocre 4-8 although he went into the contest with a 2.27 earned run average, tops for Chicago starters.

Agee helped Chicago break in front in the first inning when he beat out an infield hit, stole second and scored on a single by Floyd Robinson.

A double by Jerry Adair and Elia's homer gave Chicago a 3-0 lead in the second inning before Agee smacked his seventh homer leading off the third.

Chicago added two more runs in the seventh on a pair of singles, two sacrifices and a couple of Boston errors.

The shutout was Horlen's first of the year and the ninth for the Chicago pitching staff.

Mantle Bids For All-Star Game Berth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees, collecting home runs at a two-at-a-time clip, has climbed into the American League homer derby with seven in five games and made a strong bid for an All-Star Game berth — on merit.

The 34-year-old $100,000-a-year outfielder finished sixth in the voting for the AL's All-Star outfield but he figured to be added to the squad by Manager Sam Mele

However, until the beginning of the week, Mantle figured to be a sentimental choice. Now he figures to make it on his play.

Mantle has doubled his home run total since last Tuesday. He hit two homers Tuesday in Boston and added two more Wednesday. He didn't connect Thursday but hit No. 12 against Washington Friday, then added two more Saturday against the Senators.

"He's really hitting the ball well," said Manager Ralph Houk. "Actually he's been hitting the ball solid all season but they seem to be falling in now. He started to go real well in Boston."

Mantle got off to a slow start while recuperating from an off-season shoulder operation. As of June 24 he was hitting only .250.

He has collected 13 hits in his last 25 at-bats — a .520 average — and now is hititng .283 with 14 homers and 35 runs batted in.

He is second on the Yankees in homers — Joe Pepitone has 15 — and is only six behind Baltimore's league-leading Frank Robinson.

Ruston Holds Perfect Record

RUSTON (Special) — T. L. James Contractors edged Crossett in the last inning as Larry Atkins knocked in the winning run with a single.

Larry Smith was the winning pitcher as Dale Rogers took the loss.

Loop Leading Birds Down Twins Twice

BALTIMORE (AP) — Frank Robinson's two-run seventh inning homer in the opener and Boog Powell's run-producing single in the eighth inning of the nightcap gave American League-leading Baltimore a 6-5, 3-2 doubleheader sweep over Minnesota Saturday night.

The victories boosted the Orioles' winning streak to six and their lead over second-place Detroit to 5½ games.

Powell also drove in a run in the sixth inning with a sacrifice fly as the Orioles took a 2-1 lead in the second game but the Twins tied it in the seventh on a homer by Rich Rollins.

The Orioles then came back and pulled out front again in the eighth when Frank Robinson walked, and Brooks Robinson and Powell followed with singles.

Frank Robinson's homer in the opener, with Russ Snyder on base, wiped out a 5-4 Minnesota lead fashioned on a three-run pinch-hit homer by Rollins. It also boosted Robinson's league-leading homer total to 20.

The Twins took a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Harmon Killebrew singled home Zoilo Versalles. A two-run single by Powell and a two-run double by Vic Roznovsky pushed the Orioles in front 4-1 in the sixth. Rollins then tied it.

In the nightcap, pitcher Jim Grant singled in the first run for the Twins in the fifth but the Orioles pulled ahead 2-1 in the sixth on a single by Snyder, Brooks Robinson's double, an error by Tony Oliva and Powell's sacrifice fly.

Grant, who wound up with the loss, now is 5-11.

Felipe Alou's 4-Bagger Helps Braves By Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Felipe Alou's two-run homer in the 10th inning — his 18th of the season and first with a man on base — gave the Atlanta Braves a 3-1 victory over National League leading San Francisco Saturday.

All of Alou's previous homers had been with the bases empty, but he came up with one out in the 10th after Gene Oliver had stroked a pinch-hit single, and slammed a drive over the center field barrier off Frank Linzy.

The victory ended the Braves losing streak at three.

Atlanta's Joe Torre's 18th home run of the season broke a scoreless tie in the seventh inning. Until then, Bob Bolin and Joey Jay had hurled shutout ball.

The Giants tied the score in the eighth. Willie Mays beat out an infield hit with one out and the first pitch to Willie McCovey was wild, enabling Mays to take second.

Manager Bobby Bragan brought Chi Chi Olivo in to relieve Jay, who had allowed four hits. McCovey banged an infield hit off Woody Woodward's glove. The shortstop was playing on the first base side of second. Mays was forced to stop at third.

After Jim Hart walked, loading the bases, Mays scored on Len Gabrielson's roller to Frank Bolling.

The Braves had only four hits in the first six innings and Alou had three of them. Rico Carty had the other one.

Alou has been demolishing the ball at Candlestick Park this year. He went six-for-10 in a two-game series here in April and was four-for-nine in the first two games of the current series.

The Giants had only two hits in the first six innings—a third-inning double by Jesus Alou and a single by Hal Lanier in the fifth.

San Francisco was unable to take advantage of a good scoring opportunity in the sixth. Tom Haller opened the frame with a walk and then, after Willie Mays lined out, the Braves went into an exaggerated shift for Willie McCovey.

The only infielder on the left side was third baseman Eddie Mathews, who was stationed halfway between second and third.

McCovey lifted a pop behind short and Mathews was charged with an error when he was unable to handle the catch. Haller, seeing there was nobody covering third base, kept going and slid into third, evading Jay's tag. McCovey took second on the play.

Woody Woodward then threw out Jim Hart and Len Gabrielson looked at a third strike.

With one away in the seventh, Torre finally broke the scoring ice, drilling a home run over the left field fence. It was the 18th of the season for the husky catcher.

Dodgers Topple Cardinals, 7-2

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Lefebvre's fourth-inning triple drove in what proved to be the deciding run Saturday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated St. Louis 7-2.

Phil Regan pitched 2 1-3 innings of scoreless relief, giving starter Claude Osteen, 10-6, the victory over Bob Gibson, 11-8.

The Cards committed four errors, two of them letting in two unearned runs in the third. In that inning, a double by John Roseboro, errors by Gibson and shortstop Dal Maxvill, and Maury Wills' infield out helped the Dodgers go ahead 2-1.

In the fourth, a single by Willie Davis, Lefebvre's triple and a squeeze bunt by Lou Johnson cost Gibson two more runs.

Jim Gilliam finished Gibson with a two-run single in the seventh and Wes Parker singled in another run in the eighth, extending his hitting streak through 11 games.

Maxvill singled home one of the runs off Osteen and the other came on Orlando Cepeda's 10th homer of the season.

Cheniere Decision

With Paul Martin

A week of decision is ahead for Cheniere Lake improvements plans.

Biologists' recommendations, requested by the Cheniere Lake Commission, were heard and approved by the commission Wednesday night, but this didn't make it official.

Our police jurors, most certainly already aware of likes and dislikes of the recommendations, get a chance to rule for the people when they meet Monday night, July 11, if the jury business schedule permits action then.

The lake is publicly owned by Ouachita parish taxpayers, thus giving the jury right of decision.

Cost of the operation was cited early as an obstacle, but lake commission Chairman E. D. Elmore shot down that argument in a hurry when he said "We've been saving our nickels for this. We're not going to ask the police jury for any money." He said the commission already has $12,000 ready for the project this year and said the work can be spread over five or six years.

Opponents are fighting a proposed annual "draw down" of the water level, fearing it will hurt fishing and not help the lake's growing vegetative menace.

Supporters claim fishing will not be hurt and lake conditions will be vastly improved. Fish biologists maintain the annual fish harvest will be doubled and actually improve during the period of draw-down.

If you are unaware of the recommendations approved by the lake commission, here they are:

Clearing 100 acres at each of the lake's seven recreation areas, cutting 50-foot boat paths connecting the recreation areas, deepening shoreline waters two feet at all park areas, removing spillway screens, continue fish management studies, continue spraying to control undesirable aquatic vegetation, polution control, and continuation of supervised commercial fishing.

Some Short Shots

The North Louisiana Pointer and Setter Club holds its annual business meeting and election of officers Wednesday evening, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, at The Rendezvous here. Current officers are Larry Hudson, president; Bobby Taylor, vice president; Joe B. Zuber, secretary - treasurer.

Federal funds totaling $18,275,000 for fish and wildlife restoration projects became available to the 50 states, Guam, Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico on July 1, Secretary of Interior Stewart L. Udall has announced. The money comes from federal excise taxes collected from manufacturers, importers, producers of firearms, fishing rods and other types of fishing and hunting equipment, and distribution is based on the number of paid fishing and hunting licenses sold in a state.

Louisiana's share in the July 1 distribution was $42,090.55 for fish and $247,384.94 for hunting. The money is to be used for fish and wildlife restoration pojects with states being reimbursed up to 75 percent of costs with this federal tax money. Louisiana's share in the fish division is small because everybody who fishes is not required to have a license.

Coastal fishing interests are centered this week on the Southwest Louisiana Deep Sea and Inland Fishing Rodeo out of Cameron, La., and the Mississippi Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo at Gulfport. Both events, running this weekend, close tomorrow.

Hunters planning to participate in this year's special teal hunting season should not delay making their applications for the necessary permits.

Teal permit deadline is August 17. Waterfowlers who have not obtained permits by the August date will just be too late, because the record of Louisiana permits will have to be returned to Washington, D.C., then for further federal processing.

A postcard request addressed to "Teal Section, Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, Room 305, Old Peabody Hall, Capitol Station, Baton Rouge, La., 70804," is all that's necessary to secure your permit. There's no charge for permits. Each teal hunter will need one. The special season begins at sunrise Saturday, September 17, and closes at sunset Sunday, September 25. Daily limit will be four, either blue or green-winged. Possession limit will be eight from second day.

Thunderbird Set At Charmingdale

Local golfers continue to take chances on winning an automobile today and Monday at Charmingdale golf and country club.

The tournament, held in conjunction with the annual Thunderbird Classic, awards a Thunderbird to golfers who shoot a hole-in-one or win a drawing after defeating the Thunderbird champion on a handicap basis.

Handicaps are awarded prior to play according to host pro Carl Gallo.

Gallo said no tee times are needed and players may make up their own groups or report to the clubhouse to obtain a playing foursome.

The tournament is conducted along the lines of national golf day.

Haas Handicap

Don Giffin defeated Dr. Rayburn Smith, 1 - up, in the Cramer Haas Handicap Tournament at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club Saturday.

Big Blasts Lead Tigers To Victory

DETROIT (AP) — Willie Horton and Al Kaline each hit two-run homers and scored two runs, leading the Detroit Tigers to a 7-3 victory over the Kansas City Athletics Saturday.

Earl Wilson, with relief help from Orlando Pena and Larry Sherry, picked up his third victory in four decisions since coming to the Tigers from Boston.

Roger Repoz hit a solo homer off Wilson in the first inning and Dick McAuliffe slammed one for the Tigers leading off the bottom half of the inning.

A walk to Repoz, Mike Hershberger's first of three singles and an error rgave the A's their second run in the fourth inning.

Horton tripled leading off the fourth and scored the tying run on Jim Northrup's single.

Horton hit his homer in the fifth and Kaline got his 16th of the year in the seventh.

King Gets Wimbledon Net Crown

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Mrs. Billie Jean King—a slimmer and more subdued version of the happy-go-lucky little Miss Moffitt of previous years—brought the Wimbledon women's title back to the United States after four years Saturday with a 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 victory over Maria Bueno of Brazil.

The standard of tennis throughout the final never watched the perfect weather, and not until the last few games of the third set did Mrs. King manage to impose complete authority over her opponent.

She did it by solving the problem of how to handle Miss Buenos's high, kicking second service. From then on she dropped only four more points to rattle off the last three games for the match.

But before that, it was a procession of service errors, poorly timed drives, netted volleys and lost opportunities by both girls in 65 minutes of nervous tennis.

It was Miss Bueno fifth final appearance — she won three times in 1959, 1960 and 1964. Mrs. King was playing in her second final, having lost to Margaret Smith three years ago. Both played, however, as if it was their first sight ever of the famed center court.

Not even near the end, when Maria started to wilt despondently and Billie Jean seemed to grow several inches taller as she scented victory, did the match approach the excitement and tennis seen in the men's final Friday between Manuel Santana of Sapin and Denis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif.

An indication of how little command theonce-imperious Miss Bueno had on the match came in the eighth game of the second set, when Mrs. King, presented her with no less than three double faults yet still managed to win that made no difference to the result, as the brazilian held service the next game for the set.

The California 22-year-old won because her game throughout was more compact and because playing to a prearranged plan —she was able to mix her volleys with accurate lobs to keep Miss Bueno away from the net.

Mrs. King grabbed a service break on the fourth game of the first set for a 3-1 lead which she held to draw first blood with a 3 set, but a double fault—one of her seven during the match—and a mistimed volley that ended in the net lost her the break in the second set and gave Maria a 2-0 lead she kept for the set at 6-3.

All-America Grid Contest Set Saturday

ATLANTA (AP) — Sixty of the nation's top college football graduates are expected to attract a near capacity crowd Saturday night in the sixth annual coaches All-America game.

More than 30,000 tickets already have been sold in this football hotbed for the battle of East and West standouts in Atlanta Stadium, which seats about 51,000.

The game matches two future Green Bay Packer teammates, Illinois fullback Jim Grabowski and Texas Tech halfback Donny Anderson.

Grabowski heads the East backfield, and Anderson and halfback Mike Garrett of Southern Cal will lead the West.

Coaches for the game are Duffy Daughterty of Michigan State, who will guide the East, and Tommy Prothro of UCLA, head of the West. Prothro's team beat Michigan State in last winter's Rose Bowl battle.

Prothro said he doesn't see how the West can lose with Anderson, Garrett and six other All-America players on the squad.

Daugherty also thinks he has a fine team that will put on an exciting show in the game, being played in Atlanta for the first time. The five previous games were held in Buffalo, N.Y., but the midsummer fray was moved in an attempt to boost attendance.

The pregame ticket sale already is bigger than any of the turnouts in Buffalo, according to the sponsoring American Football Coaches Association.

The game, which starts at 9:30 p.m., EDT, will be nationally televised by the American Broadcasting Co.

The East will be quarterbacked by Steve Sloan, who led Alabama to the national college crown last year. Quarterbacking duties for the West will be shared by Randy Johnson of Texas A&I, second draft choice of the Atlanta Falcons, and Gary Lane, who led Missouri to the Sugar Bowl title.

Both clubs boast standout defensive players. The East has linebacker rank Emanuel of Tennessee and defensive halfback Nick Rassas of Notre Dame, and the West has end Aaron Brown of Minnesota, guard Walt Barnes of Nebraska, halfback Johnny Roland of Missouri and linebackers Carl McAdams of Oklahoma and Tommy Nobis of Texas.

All were All-America choices last fall, along with offensive standouts Glen Ray Hies of Arkansas, a tackle for the West; and end Charlie Casey of Florida, guards Dick Arrington of Notre Dame and Karl Singer of Purdue, and center Paul Crane of Alabama, who will play for the East.

Former Monroyan In Vital Space Role

Monroe, La., July 3, 1966 1-B

Among the top scientists connected with the United States' efforts to overcome the problems of space travel is a former Monroyan, J. Cary Nettles, who had a vital role in putting the nation's first space ship into orbit. His discoveries, along with the contributions of other scientists, made possible the development of the Jupiter, Atlas, Titan and Thor missiles.

By TRAVIS MAYO
World Staff Writer

"It's not getting to the moon first that counts, it's getting there best," a White House Space Agency coordinator said June 2, just after the Surveyor spacecraft had planted the American flag on the moon and had sent back a stream of perfect pictures.

Making sure America gets there in the best way is the obligation of former Monroyan J. Cary Nettles, a research scientist and inventor with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and one of the four top scientists who perfected the jet engine, thereby making the missile age possible.

Scientist and inventor Nettles, since the propeller days of World War II, has made many important contributions to aeronautical research in such areas as stress and vibration, turbines and compressors, supersonic inlets and ejector nozzles, as well as rocket base-burning phenomena.

More recently he has specialized in fluid dynamics and has conducted extensive research both by flight test and ground facility on the zero gravity behavior of high energy propellants and space power systems.

He is noted for work in such areas as electric strain gauges, force measuring devices and automatic data reduction devices.

FIRST ORBIT

The former Monroyan had a vital role in putting the first space ship into orbit. Along with three other scientists — John C. Evvard, Marquis D. Wyatt and Wolfgang E. Moeckel — the scientist's discoveries made possible the Jupiter, Atlas, Titan and Thor missiles.

Nettles joined the staff of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at the Langley Research Center, Virginia, in February, 1941. He transferred to the Lewis Research Center in 1943 as an assistant electrical engineer.

He is now deputy manager of the Centaur Project and one of the top scientists stationed at Lewis Research Center, Cleveland, Ohio — one of NASAs three great research centers in the United States.

The Cleveland center has perfected the Atlas-Centaur rocket which was responsible in June for putting the Surveyor spacecraft on its trajectory toward the moon. (Once Surveyor had been given its boost into space by the A-C carrier, the spacecraft became the responsibility of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, operated by the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena.)

Centaur, an upper-stage, hydrogen-fueled space vehicle, is being developed, for lunar and planetary missions. It is the first space vehicle developed by the U. S. employing high-energy liquid hydrogen as fuel.

J. CARY NETTLES

Hydrogen in its natural gaseous state has been known as a major element of our atmosphere for almost four centuries. Men have been trying to use hydrogen to fly since 1766 when English chemist Henry Cavendish announced that hydrogen was lighter than air. Now, as a liquid fuel for Centaur, hydrogen has entered the rocket propulsion scene. It is the best liquid rocket fuel currently usable and has been called the "ultimate" fuel.

Lewis Research Center did much pioneering work in developing liquid hydrogen technology. Project engineers hope to learn more about this problem during flights late in the Centaur research and development program. Zero gravity problems can be studied for brief periods on the ground but most questions can be answered only in actual flight.

FORMER MONROYAN

Nettles is the son of Mrs. Elbert Nettles, 106 West Carolina Avenue, Monroe, and the older brother of William T. Nettles, 604 Fort Miro, Monroe. The 51-year-old scientist is a graduate of Northeast Louisiana State College (then a junior college) and Louisiana State University.

He received his bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from LSU in 1938.

He is married to the former Marabel Adams of Monroe and they live at 23916 Elm Road, North Olmsted, Ohio, a Cleveland suburb. Their 19-year-old daughter, Beverly, is attending Henderson College in Arkadelphia, Ark., studying to be one of the very few female band directors in the nation.

When Nettles retires in four years, he will return with his family to the state of his birth and make his home at Hot Springs, Ark. In a recent letter to his mother, he talked of his future fishing cabin in this resort spot.

Nettles' father was for 50 years a locomotive engineer in this area. It is one of the ironies of life that, after many years of faithful service, he was injured in a 1963 railway accident and later died. Mrs. Nettles was also injured in the accident. Shortly before his death, however, the family was able to be together at the family home in Monroe to help Mr. and Mrs. Nettles celebrate their 50th anniversary.

Mrs. Nettles is a former home economics teacher at Gibson High School and a graduate of Louisiana Tech. She recalls with a laugh that one of her home economics students was a 15-year-old future actress named Claudette Colbert. (Miss Colbert was not the only person in the classroom, it seems, with the "acting bug. Mrs. Nettles these days is constantly in demand at social clubs as a dramatic reader of her original humorous readings on the Old South.)

The Nettles family — to say the least —is overrunning with talent. When inventor Nettles is not conducting scientific experiments in his basement laboratory in North Olmsted, he strums a "jazzy" guitar for his friends — some in distant cities, since he is also a civil defense amateur radio volunteer. He frequently holds jam sessions for his amateur radio friends, including one family acquaintance in West Monroe.

So it may be said that Nettles knows how to enjoy this planet while computing to open the way for man's exploration of other worlds.

LONG STRUGGLE

More Atlas-Centaur successes like the recent Surveyor moon probe may mean that the rocket the Cleveland scientists call their "baby" will be considered for Mariner space shots to Mars and Venus in 1969 or 1970, according to NASA officials.

Scientists are predicting that the United States will establish a moon base by that time and that eight years later the first human-operated spaceship will land on Mars.

But exploration of Mars and Venus seemed like a wild pipe-dream back in October, 1957, when space exploration was launched with the orbiting of the Russian Sputnik 1.

In those days, the eventual replacement of chemically fueled rocket engines by nuclear propulsion as the motivating power in space was being considered. President Dwight D. Eisenhower, in April 1958, was considering a new civilian-controlled space agency, perhaps connected with the Atomic Energy Commission.

Eisenhower proposed to Congress the establishment of a new National Aeronautics and Space Agency to develop "an imaginative and well-conceived space program."

Ike picked the existing National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics (NACA) as the foundation for the proposed NASA. He proposed a civilian director, backed by a board of scientists, technicians and experts, to operate the new unit. Existing space and satellite programs would continue under military direction until the new civilian-oriented agency was ready to take over.

Then on Oct. 21, 1958, Mrs. Nettles here in Monroe received a letter from her son saying "the biggest news here is that there is no more NACA. It is now known as NASA and is to be headed by T. Keith Glennan." (Glennan was later superseded by James Edwin Webb.)

At that time, her scientist son was in charge of the huge wind tunnel at Lewis Research Center. He continued the activities he had managed since the war but gained a new boss and a new importance, for now they were affiliated with the space administration.

To celebrate, Mrs. J. Cary Nettles of North Olmsted, Ohio, fixed turkey and all the trimmings for her husband and fellow-scientists.

Nettles' giant $34 million wind tunnel at Lewis Research Center — the world's largest wind tunnel — could whip up 3,500-mile-per-hour blasts when driven by 150,000-horsepower motors. It was put to use in the late 1950s to test the Jupiter-C missile and other miniature aircraft of unconventional design in an effort to perfect space travel within two decades. Working with Nettles on these scientific projects were his long-time companions, Evvard, Wyatt and Moeckel.

ATOMS FOR SPACE

Purpose of wind-tunnel experiments was to develop the best way for man to get to other planets. As the space program expanded, Lewis Research Center was chosen to develop an atomic aircraft engine. American engineers became convinced that nuclear power was the ultimate answer to space navigation.

The Cleveland center began developing a nuclear reactor in order to harness the fiery force of an atomic explosion to propel an airplane or space ship faster than supersonic speeds.

Scientists at Lewis Research Center began toying with the idea that a spaceship could be lifted into the ether by chemical rockets — then blasted off on interplanetary exploration with nuclear power.

Exploration of Mars and Venus now seemed much more than a wild pipe-dream.

BRAINPOWER ASSET

Although Lewis Research Center in 1958 represented $125,000,000 worth of physical facilities (and much more now), it considered brainpower its most valuable asset. Stationed at Lewis are more than 850 men and women classified as "professional scientific research workers." The laboratory employs more than 2,600 full-time workers.

Dr. Abe Silverstein is present director of Lewis Research Center and Edmond R. Jonash is in charge of the Atlas-Centaur program. Their brains hold some of the nation's most closely guarded aviation secrets.

Dr. Silverstein joined NACA in 1929 and came to the Cleveland unit in 1943. He improved propeller-driven planes and was one of the pioneers in the development of jet aircraft.

Such brainpower put to work on research projects helped NASA to perfect the X-15, the man-carrying rocket launched on high from a B-52 mother plane and able to zoom at a mile a second at altitudes of more than 200 miles. Both the X-15 and the B-70, the intercontinental bomber, were perfected at the Cleveland center.

In February, 1961, Lewis launched its first Aerobee rocket, with Nettles the engineer in charge. Aerobee I was the first of a series of experiments designed to study the behavior of liquid hydrogen under the zero gravity environment. Aerobee paved the way for difficult missions of the future, since both the Centaur and Saturn vehicles use liquid hydrogen. This liquid is also expected to propel the nuclear-powered rockets of the Rover project.

In February, 1961, NASA selected Hughes Aircraft Company to build a soft-landing lunar spacecraft called Surveyor. Surveyor I, the first engineering test spacecraft in a series of seven flight missions, was launched from Cape Kennedy by the 110-foot high Atlas-Centaur launch vehicle May 30 this year.

SOME FAILURES

How Lewis Research Center was assigned the Atlas-Centaur in the first place is a story of both tragedy and success. The Centaur rocket was handed to the team of scientists at Lewis in October, 1962. Along with the obligation came the highest priority in the land and a year's budget of $100,000,000.

Centaur had suffered a long series of difficulties and failures and a critical reappraisal of the whole development program then under Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala., was necessary when on May 8, 1962, an attempt to fly the rocket ended in flaming fury as the carrier exploded in the sky.

Once Lewis took over the rocket from Marshall, the director of Lewis ordered the most complete shakedown ever given a rocket.

Nettles' wind tunnel took on a new look, being revamped with huge vacuum chambers to simulate the void of space. Full-size Centaur rockets and their twin engines were tested, along with the huge Atlas booster used to start it on its mission. The tunnel is now called a space power chamber.

A major flight of the new and controversial Atlas-Centaur was scheduled for Nov. 27, 1963, to demonstrate the structural integrity of the combination and to evaluate the accuracy of its guidance system.

The test version performed well and was the first known instance of hydrogen engines being ignited in space.

As a result of that successful flight, the development of the A-C moved forward with a renewed sense of purpose and direction.

Mrs. Nettles kept up with the rocket's progress by reading articles in national magazines, and through letters home from her son.

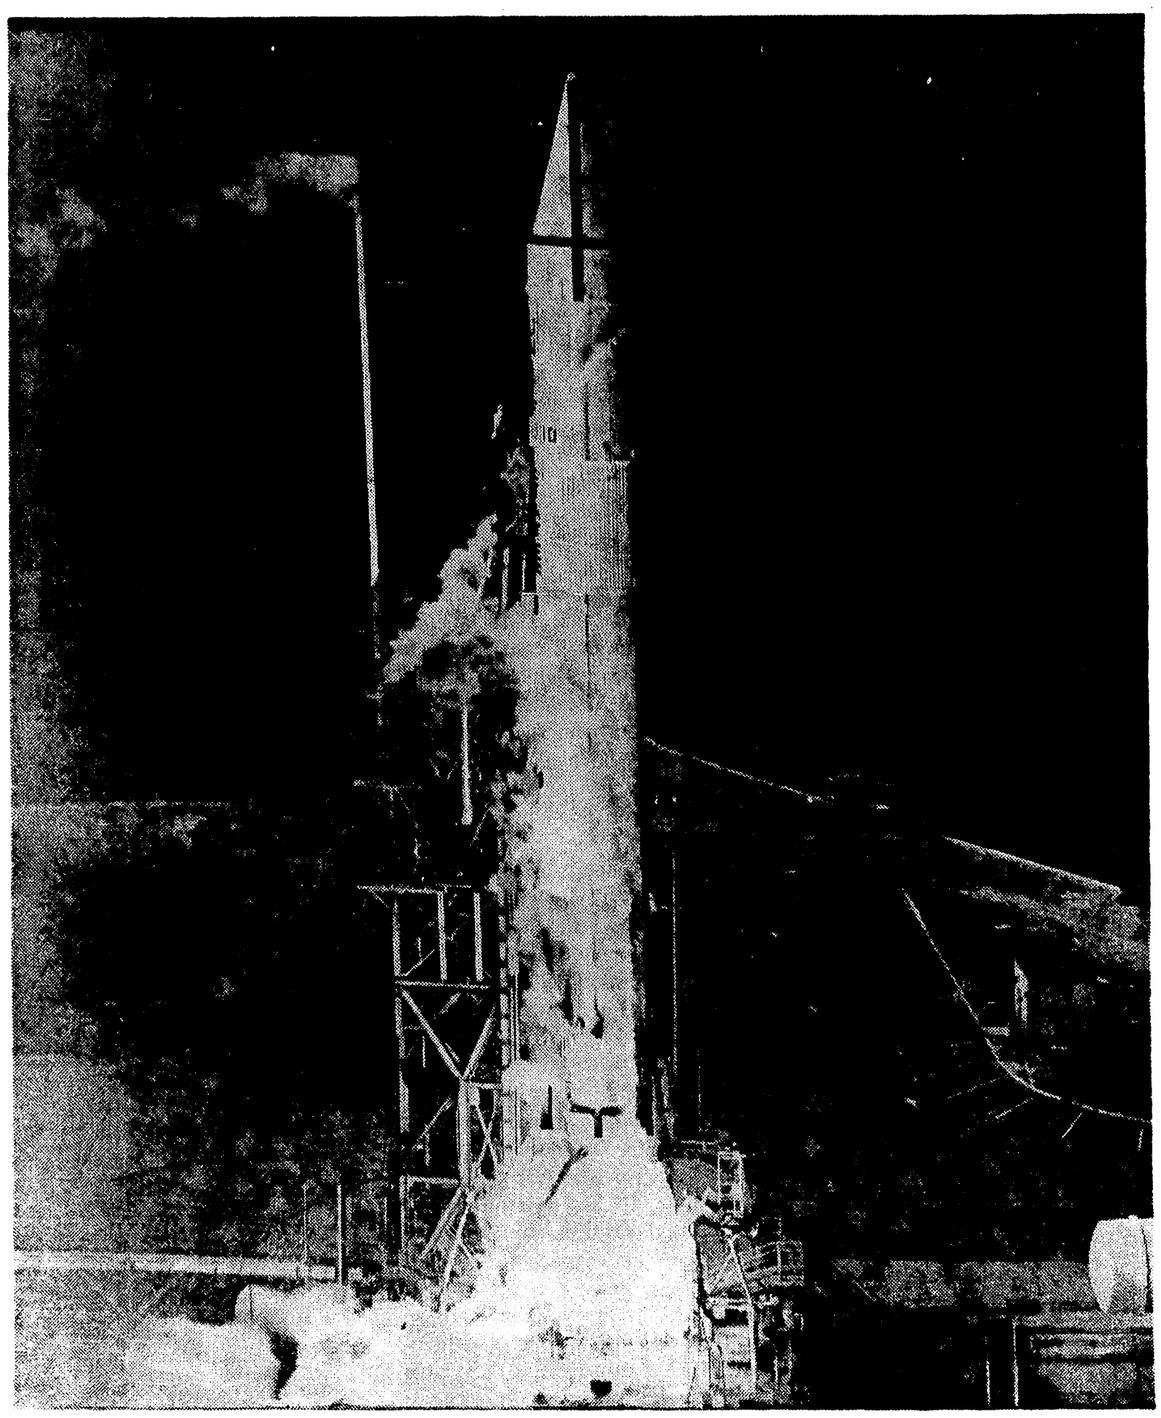
The third Atlas-Centaur flight on June 30, 1964, was not quite as successful, though it did attain the majority of its test objectives. The flight was encouraging, the scientists said, since it provided increased optimism that the Atlas-Centaur was finally on its way toward becoming an operational space carrier. One can imagine their jubilation this June as Centaur helped NASA place an unmanned instrumented Surveyor spacecraft on the moon to pave the way to future manned lunar missions.

Fully developed, Centaur will have the capability of sending 2,300-pound payloads to the moon or 1,300 pounds to Mars or Venus.

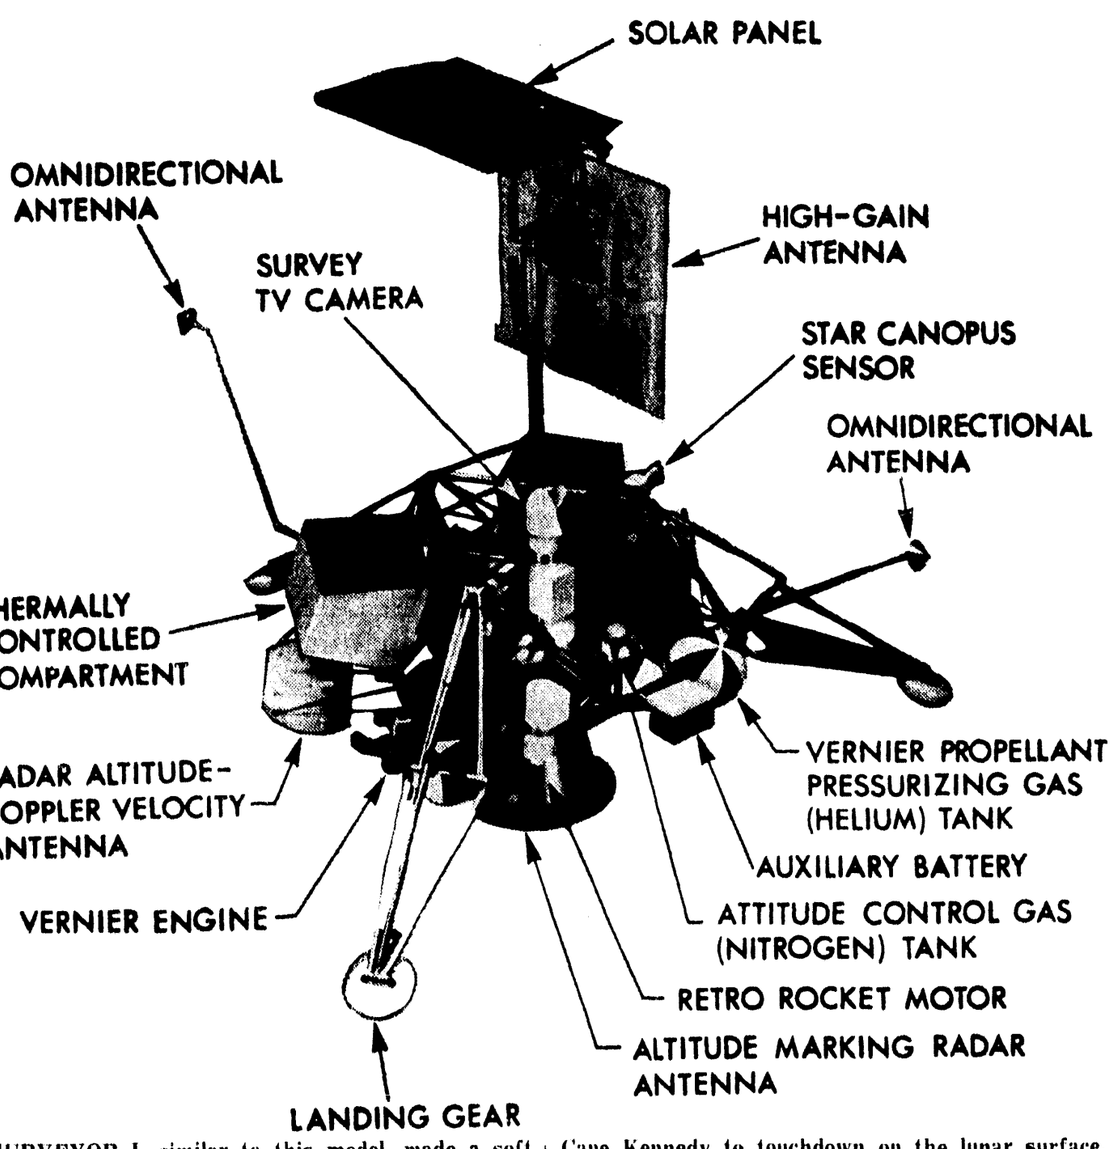
MARS AND BEYOND

While Mars is the principal target of study for future manned flight expeditions, it is not the only planet considered for investigation. At historic meetings in 1963, scientists looked into the feasibility of an Earth-Venus-Mars-Earth voyage, while other studies focused on the practicability of traveling to Mercury, to the asteroids and to the moons of Jupiter.

Officials at the Cleveland center say it is quite possible that the main course of future history will be determined by the scientists at this northern Ohio industrial park. They have already revolutionized the aircraft industry. NASA scientists boast that no American plane or missile flies today without some feature directly traceable to research projects at the Lewis Research Center.

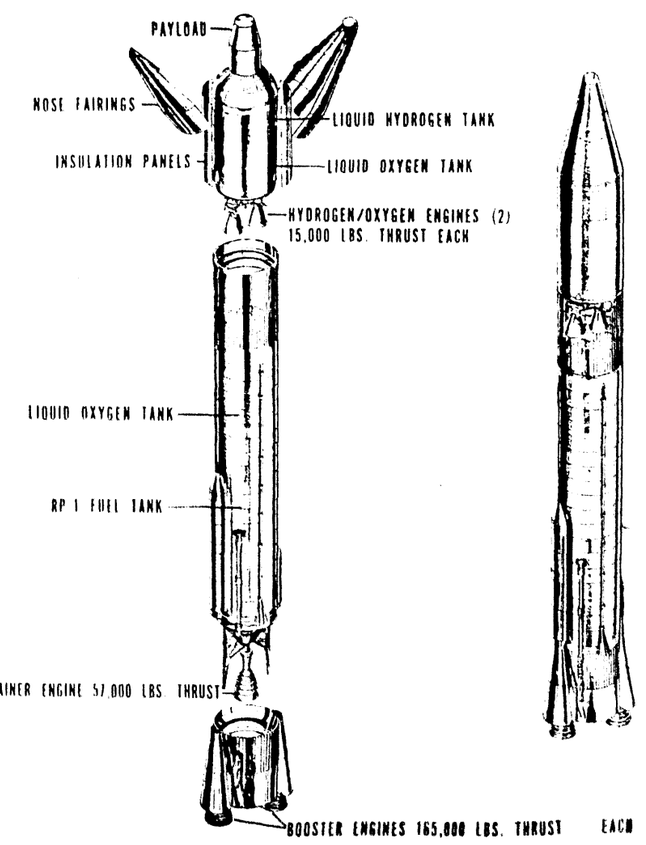


BOUND FOR THE MOON is this Surveyor I spacecraft, atop an Atlas-Centaur rocket, launched by NASA on May 30 from Cape Kennedy. The launch was the first engineering test flight in a series of Surveyor missions designed to achieve a soft landing on the moon.



SURVEYOR I, similar to this model, made a soft landing on the Moon June 1 after a flight of 63 hours, 46 minutes and 37 seconds from launch at Cape Kennedy to touchdown on the lunar surface. It was launched with an Atlas-Centaur May 30.

CENTAUR VEHICLE DESCRIPTION



CENTAUR is an upper-stage, hydrogen-fueled space vehicle developed for lunar and planetary missions. It is the first space vehicle developed by the U.S. employing high-energy hydrogen as fuel. Hydrogen is the best liquid rocket fuel currently usable and has been called the "ultimate" fuel. The sun itself "burns" hydrogen in its internal thermonuclear reactions that provide light and heat to our solar system.

Evolution's Savor Gone

"If salt has lost its savor, it is worthless." That might well be said of almost anything and it is particularly true of arguments over the question of the evolution of mankind. Once the teaching of evolution was considered sacrilegious because it was thought it might destroy man's faith in God or the Supreme Being. Now it is known that man's belief on this question can be no more profoundly influenced by the teaching of some opposing theory than Niagara Falls can be dammed by throwing in a grain of sand.

There is no longer much protest against the teaching of evolution, because all of us realize there is evolution of a sort. Probably not many more people, percentagewise, believe evolution covers the whole of creation than believed it before the theory of evolution was expounded.

Man's belief in a Divine Creation is innate and therefore cannot be taught away. We find this belief among all peoples of the earth, no matter how primitive or how cultured they may be.

Forty - one years after the famous "monkey" or evolution trial in Dayton, Tenn., the legal scales were tipped in the opposite direction and the monkeys finally won a case in court, but it made little difference. Unlike the Dayton trial, which had daily, nationwide news coverage, the more recent case was barely noticed. The monkeys referred to were the ones from which Charles Darwin believed man descended.

In the more recent case, an Arkansas law forbidding the teaching of the theory of evolution was ruled unconstitutional by Chancery Court Judge Murray O. Reed. The judge said the law was "an unconstitutional restraint on the quest for knowledge."

The Arkansas case was against Susan Epperson, a 24 - year - old high school biology teacher, who explained the theory of evolution to her students.

In his ruling, Reed said:

"The engrossing questions relating to the origin of man, the destiny of man and the creation of the universe have engaged the thoughts and demanded the attention of the world's greatest philosophers, scientists, theologians and educators. These questions cannot be answered by the enactment of laws or by decisions of courts."

Judge Reed, whose statement on his ruling indicated his own mind had tried to delve into the question of creation and man's purpose and destiny, worked conscientiously to keep the trial from turning into what was described as "another carnival."

In the Dayton "monkey trial" in 1925, two of the nation's most famous lawyers, along with others, matched wits and eloquence. They were William Jennings Bryan, three times a Democratic nominee for the presidency of the United States, who was known as the "silver - tongued orator," and Clarence Darrow, a noted defense lawyer. Bryan aided in the prosecution of the defendant Scopes and Darrow was chief of defense. In that case, the Tennessee law was upheld and is still on the books. Mississippi is the only other state which has a similar law.

What intelligent man or woman in all the world has not at some time tried to solve, to his own satisfaction, the mystery of life and of a universe so great that trying to comprehend even a little of it staggers the human mind?

No man, in his own mind, has solved that problem and this has led to an ineradicable belief that there must be a Supreme Power that has developed a universe so perfectedly mechanized and synchronized that scientists are able to tell within tenths of seconds how particular phases of it will operate. This synchronized precision, as nearly everyone knows now, is perhaps the most essential part of space flight.

Evolution is taught in all states and is legal in all except two. It has its merits as they relate to progress from the lowest one-cell creatures up to mankind, regarded as next to God in intellect. There is no longer much dispute between evolutionists and believers in the Biblical creation. Believers generally accept the fact that evolution is all right as far as it goes but that it is as nothing compared to their concept. Evolutionists are quieted by the fact that they have "proved their point" to the world but are, nevertheless, not completely satisfied because they have not proved it to themselves. Their minds go on in that endless search which all men have known.

Troops Leave Dominican

American troops are pulling out of the Dominican Republic, a most welcome event in light of the controversial intervention that stirred Latin passions and Congressional critics. Troops from other Inter-American nations belonging to the Organization of American States will follow in three months. This will give President - elect Joaquin Balaguer time to be inaugurated and settled down to governing the island.

There have been no incidents of ill will directed toward Balaguer since his defeat of leftist Juan Bosch, but the agreement to allow O.A.S. troops to remain awhile was a sensible one.

As another disputed chapter in United States-Latin affairs comes to an end, it is constructive to view the outcome in the context of what did and did not happen.

First of all, the quick dispatch of American troops by President Johnson apparently did avert a Communist takeover. At least there were enough Reds mixed up in the uprising aimed at restoring exiled Juan Bosch to power to make the situation too risky to ignore. The provisional government of Godoy provided a stable arena for popular elections, backed, of course, by O.A.S. bayonets. As luck would have it, the man United States officials wanted to win, actually did.

In the short time Joaquin Balaguer has been "unofficially" in office, he has taken steps which indicate he's on the right track in bringing the country around to peace and progress.

Balaguer will place women in top government posts in all 26 provinces in the island. This gesture is a reward for the overwhelming vote the Dominican women gave him. Inside diplomatic sources from the United States claim it was their vote which cinched the election for Balaguer — the ones most responsibe to his peace-and-stability platform.

The President-elect has reduced the presidential salary from $1,500 a month to $750, slashed noncontributory pensions by 50 per cent, and is currently at work on further austerity measures.

The inauguration Friday of the small, one-time cabinet member of the Trujillo government, marks the end of a tumultuous experience in hemispheric police action. Americans can breathe easier now that the guns are silent and peace has been restored.

Youth Writes LBJ

(Editor's Note — The following letter was addressed to President Johnson and a copy sent to this newspaper for publication)

West Monroe, La.

Dear Mr. President:

This letter that I, an eighteen year - old teenager, am writing to you is based on some statements that J. Edgar Hoover has made. He said, "We are at war with Communism and the sooner every red - blooded American realizes this, the safer we will be . . . They have infiltrated every conceivable sphere of activity; youth groups; radio, television, and motion picture industries; church, school, educational and cultural groups; the press; national minority groups and civil and political units. . . We cannot defeat Communism with Socialism, nor with secularism, nor with pacificism, nor with appeasement or accommodation . . .A "soft" attitude toward Communism can destroy us." Sir, I got these statements from the outside cover of the book "None Dare Call It Treason."

Mr. Johnson, isn't it a known fact that the decisions that have been made in Washington in the past and present have been made with a "soft" attitude toward Communism? I am referring to the U.S. involvement in China, Malaya, Indonesia, Algeria, the Congo, Cuba, Iraq, the Gaza Strip, Hungary, Korea, Angola, Burma, Tibet, and Egypt, to name a few. Sir, I was "taught" in American history class that America stands for freedom, and Communism stands for the destruction of that freedom. I have failed to find a sign that we Americans ARE against Communism. The prime example is the billions of American taxpayers' dollars from this "freedom-loving" nation that has and is still being given to the "freedom-hating" nations. Isn't it true that the American money given to the Communists have in turn been used to kill the American people? Common sense tells me that the U.S. Government gives away money to destroy the U.S. Government. It certainly isn't logical for it to be that way; nevertheless, the facts are there for all to see, if they will see.

The observant American will see that America is breaking away from her proud heritage. That American will also see that the American people as a whole are not united like a nation should be that was founded for religious freedom, the basis of all freedoms. Liberalism was not included in the founding of this country; yet, in a recent speech Americans were told how good it is that the U.S. is becoming a liberal and a changing nation. Mr. President, I ask you just what kind of a nation is this one changing to?

Isn't it shocking, Mr. Johnson how men through the ages have been deceived by Satan in believing that they could live without God? Isn't it shocking that men have done all that Satan would have them to do for the reward of power and ambition only to receive the reward of eternal damnation? It really is not all that surprising because the above circumstances have always been and shall continue, but it does not have to happen in America. You and I and everyone else will receive our own reward for the decisions we make in this life, I pray that your decisions will be made through you by God for freedom's sake. I am a stubborn teenager, Mr. President; I will not let the freedoms I hold close to my heart be destroyed by Communists or by any other agent of Satan if I can do anything in my power to preserve and protect the future of America.

C OF C Statements

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

In the June 15th issue of the Monroe News-Star appeared an article that the Firemen's pay bill now in Baton Rouge would hinder the improvements and progress of the City of Monroe.

I am a fireman and have been with the Fire Department for over 5 years. Chamber of Commerce executive, Mr. Jim Williams' statements before the Kiwanis Club were half-truths and statements which he knew very little about.

How in the world can a pay raise for the city firemen hinder the city's improvements? A bond issue was passed for the Capital Improvements Program. This money is already earmarked for this program and cannot be used elsewhere so that statement is totally false.

Mr. Williams also compares insurance rates paid in 1954 under a Class 6 rating Fire Department with those paid in 1957 when the city advanced to a Class 3 rating Fire Department. The premium saved by Monroe residents was a total of approximately 5½ million dollars or a cut of about 35 per cent. I ask, who is responsible for this — the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis Club or the Monroe Fire Department? Even now the City Fire Department is striving for a Class 2 Fire Department, which very few cities in the United States have. This also is an accomplishment of the Monroe Fire Department and its personnel. Yet Mr. Williams blasts the firemen for trying to get a pay raise. He makes some mention of the National Board of Fire Underwriters survey of the city in 1968 for a Class 2 rating I will tell Mr. Williams that there is no such thing as the National Board of Fire Underwriters. It was abolished over a year ago.

He also makes mention of the Firemen's Pension Fund. Since we do not pay Social Security, we have set up our own pension system, which is owned and operated by Monroe City Firemen. His even mentioning the pension fund is stupid, as it serves no purpose for him and has nothing to do with the raise.

I, being a fireman, am very displeased with people because they don't like the present bill pending in State Legislature, talking about the firemen and the Fire Department, because I feel they are talking about me.

Whether I get a raise or not, I'm still a fireman employed by the City and am proud of my job. I also have some personal pride.

Communists Longing To Seize Democrats

THE NATIONAL convention of the Communist Party USA has called on its members and supporters to organize their political action "in and around the orbit of the Democratic Party." Their purpose is to capitalize on what they consider a "revolt" in Democratic ranks against the Johnson Administration's policies in Viet Nam.

By an unfortunate coincidence, the New York Times reported a day after the Communist pronouncement that some New Jersey Democrats were counseling a full break with President Johnson on the Vietnamese war and calling for de-escalation of the conflict.

I mention this not to imply that the Democratic Party and the Communist Party are working in tandem or similarly motivated but to make a comparison. Had the John Birch Society's stand on any issue been followed so closely by Republican agreement—or had the society's leader, Robert Welch, told the membership that they should orbit around the GOP — every Republican candidate or spokesman on television interviews and in press encounters would have been asked all over again to disavow the Birchers and to "explain" the coincidence of like policies.

IN TIME, THE chorus of questions would become so deafening that the casual bystander would come to believe that the John Birch Society and the Republican Party were, in fact, somehow linked. That in many areas — the suburbs of Washington, D.C. being just one — the Birchers are overwhelmingly Democratic would never be brought into the debate.

Yet there has not been, and will not be, any barrage of questions about the Communists and the Democrats as a result of the CPUSA's edict.

I am not saying that there should be. But it strikes me as indicative that the Republicans are repeatedly called upon to embroil themselves in controversy over Birchism while the Democrats, under more aggravated conditions, remain unharassed.

It would be pertinent in certain districts of New York for "peace" candidates to Congressional office to be asked if they repudiated Communist support—or to be taxed with the similarity of their stand on Viet Nam with that of the Communists. These questions are not asked because it would be considered McCarthyism.

But the baiting of Republican conservatives, which some have called "McLiberalism," is an accepted practice on television and at the press conference. The Republican Party is no more dominated by the John Birch Society than the Democratic Party by the CPUSA. But Communist activity is certainly of more concern to the voters — or should be — than the workings of the John Birch Society.

FOR ONE THING, the Communist Party USA is the creature of a foreign government and has been convicted in a Federal Court of being Soviet-dominated. It is therefore a part of the great Soviet onslaught against the United States. Its hatred of American institutions needs no documentation today, and it has been the seed bed for espionage agents who have preyed on this country.

The John Birch Society, however one may differ with its political creeds, is an assocation of American citizens whose activities are all within the law. Those who disagree with the John Birch Society's analysis of the American scene — as I do — or who find it repugnant, have the right and the duty to engage it in debate and to expose the flaws in is logic. But to debate the Communists is a waste of time. It is not the ideas they propound — completely wrong though they are — that are pernicious. For the Communist Party is, as the socialist Harold Laski wrote in one of his more lucid moments, a "secret battalion" dedicated to the "organization of catastrophe," under the banner and with the support of a foreign government which has threatened to bury us.

As such, the very objective of Communism's leaders to organize their political action "in and around the orbit of the Democratic Party" certainly should be more newsworthy.

It is ironic that the people who must deplore the "conspiracy theory" of the Birch Society invoke it themselves when they claim to see a conspiratorial alliance of Birchites and Republican conservatives. By branding right-wing Republicanism as a dupe of the Birchites, any understanding or debate of conservative principles is spoiled. But that debate is necessary today just as a public analysis of Liberalism is long overdue.

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

Senator Fulbright's Speeches Don't Jibe

WHAT HAPPENS in the current issue of The Reporter Magazine is an event of considerable psychological significance. It was greatly overdue, but one cannot help but hope that the process, finally launched, is well and finally underway. A tough-minded British journalist, Mr. Henry Fairlie, has written an article ("Old Realities and New Myths") analyzing the intellectual, historical, and emotional content of Senator William Fulbright's two most famous utterances of the past years, his speech in 1964 ("Old Myths and New Realities"), and his lectures this spring at Johns Hopkins University.The Senator does not survive the examination.

Consider, for instance, the most blatant, though not necessarily the most striking, of the Senator's inconsistencies. In 1964 he said: "To the best of our knowledge there is no evidence that wars are necessary and inevitable consequences of human nature." But in 1966, not much having happened to human nature in the interval, the Senator intoned at Johns Hopkins: "We must recognize, first of all, that the ultimate source of war and peace lies in human nature."

MR. FAIRLIE goes on to analyze a number of historical analogies offered by Senator Fulbright in warning the United States against the "arrogance of power." Fulbright reported that "an exaggerated sense of power and an imaginary sense of mission" caused the Athenians to attack Syracuse, and then Hitler to invade Russia. The journalist Fairlie patiently explains to the former university president and Rhodes scholar Fulbright that the Athenians were dominated by a centrifugal ethos utterly alien to America's current and thoroughly anti-Wilsonian distaste for ideological imperialism; and that Napoleon and Hitler were moved by a fanatical desire to pursue power for the sake of it, again utterly unlike the United States' tortured role in Viet Nam, a theater we entered as ambivalently and indecisively as Hamlet undertaking to reorder the affairs of Elsinore Castle.

Not only the inapposite historical analogies but the insecure and contradictory grasp of revolutionary history and metaphysics Fulbright in 1964 seemed to be saying that our interference in foreign revolutionary situations, though often justified by the vital interests of the country, should be measured against our capacity to wield power — which is certainly correct. But then in 1966 the Senator takes the position that revolutions are inevitable and follow predictable patterns, eventually reaching Thermidor (the stage at which the moderates, having executed their Robespierre, domesticate their revolution); that Russia has reached Thermidor, and so probably has Cuba. That Red China hasn't, but that there isn't much to be done about that, except to wait.

HENRY FAIRLIE shows that the dialectic of the Senator's two general positions reduces to this lesson: "Thus, American must not undertake the full responsibilities of its power, otherwise it will court ruin as surely as Athens and Napoleon and Hitler; and America must not search for ways of encouraging peaceful and democratic changes of government, because revolution, and especially contemporary revolution, will probably be violent and undemocratic." And Fairlie concludes: "Between 1964 and 1966, then (Fulbright) seems to have moved to a position from which he regards it as all but inevitable that the consequences of exercising world power must be ruinous; all but inevitable that revolutions must be violent and undemocratic; and all but inevitable that war follows from human nature. Such a formidable construction of inevitability," sighs Mr. Fairlie, "is, of course, a traditional argument for withdrawal from action."

Such detached analysis of Senator Fulbright is long overdue. That it should be published in a magazine whose featured speaker on the occasion of its tenth anniversary was Senator William Fulbright is not merely piquant, but greatly reassuring to the cause of intellectual courage. A syndicated liberal journalist, Mr. Pete Hamill, writes that the article's publication "will not change Washington's ideas about Fulbright, because (Washington) is inhabited by people who prefer to believe in the idea they have constructed of a man, rather than face uncomfortable truth." But then there are those who do not find it all that uncomfortable a truth that such an apodictic scholar - moralist as William Fulbright is, much of the time, talking through his chapeau.

Military Chieftains And Johnson At Odds

FOR THE SECOND time in less than a month the Johnson-McNamara administration is at odds with its military commanders. And it has been revealed that it is not above flatly misleading the public over questions of national defense.

The double - barreled revelations came during testimony before the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee.

First, the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Harold Johnson, testified that the Joint Chiefs of Staff had urged President Johnson to call up the reserves three times — the spring and fall of 1965 and again early this year. They were turned down each time.

Now it is clearly the prerogative, and sometimes even the duty, of the President to veto requests by the military. There is no argument with that, even though there may be substantial argument with the decision he reaches.

I feel strongly that the President's refusal to call up reserve forces and to rely instead upon the unsound and highly ineffective system of drafting schoolboys was motivated by political considerations. On the other hand, to give the President his due, his stated reason, that such a call-up would send "shivers and tremors" through the rest of the world, is unquestionably true.

JUST TO HIT that one another lick, however, I question his judgment as to whether the world needs such shivers and tremors. This is not a time for complacency anywhere in the world. A renewed sense of mission, unity and dedication — which might be helped by admitting that we are at war — could be just the ticket.

Sunday Thought

I sometimes think that never blows so red
The Rose as where some buried Caesar bled;
That every Hyacinth the Garden wears,
Dropped in her Lap from some once lovely head.

—Rubaiyat

The 4th Of July

Some 190 years ago this Monday — known to all as the Fourth of July — a new nation — the United States — was created on the American continent. It was a new venture into government — and regardless of what anyone might think today — there has never been a government before as good as the one created — nor has there been one since.

FROM A fearful beginning, this nation — under that form of government — has grown to be the greatest power in the world — not only militarily, but in the field of science, religion and health. In reality, the United States is a "milk and honey" land.

How long it is to remain that way, is the question that is facing the nation today — as another Fourth approaches with Americans again dying on foreign battle fields.

No one phrased it better than Alan Seeger in "I have a Rendezvous with Death" when he wrote:

"I have a rendezvous with Death
"At some disputed barricade . . .
"And I to my pledged word am true,
"I shall not fail that Rendezvous."

Tomorrow as most of us go our way without a thought about it, some Americans will meet death — either in a jungle ambush, on the blue sea or high in the silvery sky as the Viet Nam war takes an increasingly higher toll.

Should we be there in the first place?

THERE are many arguments to that question. The fact remains we are there and we are committed to see it through.

While defending their right to do so, we do not believe like Senator William Fulbright, Senators Wayne Morse and Robert Kennedy and in their bitter attacks we can see only aid and comfort for the enemy. In fact, our guess that it is statements such as they have made and are making that help to prolong the war.

We can see it only one way. Since we are in the war — right or wrong — we should win it and win it as quickly as possible with whatever means it requires.

FOR THE first time the past week we agreed with President Johnson in his conduct of the war, and we believe he will find that the vast majority of good Americans will back him on what TV commentators, and some liberal writers, with tears in their eyes, have termed a "fatal" step — the bombing of key military installations in North Viet Nam.

Our regret — it has been so long in coming.

We can only hope this is just the beginning of an intense attack on the Reds of North Viet Nam. If necessary we should go all out — including the bombing of cities. In our books the entire population of North Viet Nam is not worth the death of one American that can be prevented.

AGAIN we must say the President acted like a real leader. He came out fighting — both in the war and against his "dove" war critics at home. We can only hope he keeps his fighting clothes on as long as necessary.

If he does, maybe American troops in Viet Nam won't, for long, have to say with Shelley:

"Death is here and death is there,
"Death is busy everywhere,
"All around, within, beneath,
"Above is death — and we are death."

Maybe we should be reminded there would have been no Fourth of July to celebrate without 56 men who pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor in creating this nation, which obviously was the greatest act of history.

DANGER and debt were the lot of most of those who pledged their lives. For many others there was heartbreak, oblivion, lonely graves, prison, ruin, disgrace and even murder.

Since they were willing and in many cases did, we should do no less.

Maybe a good way to celebrate would be to rededicate ourselves to that golden dream. Above all we should vote what is best for our country — not what is best for me or for "what I can get out of it."

As Thomas Paine so aptly put it:

"This is the time that tries men's souls; it is no time for the weak at heart or the sunshine patriots."

For as Longfellow put it:

"There is a Reaper, whose name is Death,
"And with his sickle keen,
"He reaps the bearded grain at a breath,
"And the flowers that grow between."

'Violent Self-Held'

In their dissent from the recent Supreme Court decision that even a voluntary confession of wrongdoing is inadmissible as evidence, Justices White, Harlan and Stewart expressed concern that "this new version of the Fifth Amendment," will so further handicap law enforcement officials that law-abiding citizens may find that they "can only engage in violent self-help with guns, knives and the help of their neighbors similarly inclined."

This is a grim warning, indeed, and not only because the police are increasingly handicapped by Supreme Court decisions. All across the country, well-qualified policemen have been resigning or retiring. The New York City force lost 6 by resignation and early retirement in the first 17 days of June this year, as compared with 70 in the same period last year. Smaller communities have similar problems. One hears of a midwest community in which the entire 5-man force resigned; the same with a 17-man force of a town in an eastern state. Undoubtedly there are many others. Yet who can blame any man for quitting when it becomes clear that he cannot do the job he was hired to do and which his conscience tells him needs to be done?

Have we no course other than the "violent self-help," alone, or with our neighbors, which Justices White, Harlan and Stewart have suggested? This would mean a return to vigilante law, such as was commonplace in western territories in the frontier days of this nation. Our dictionary defines "vigilance committee" as "a body of men self-organized for the maintenance of order and the administration of summary justice in communities where regular authority is lacking or inefficient."

We dread the consequences, if it comes to that. For however well-intentioned the vigilance committee, the basic nature of vigilante law opens the way for gross abuses and the "summary justice" that goes along with it is almost certain to result in some grievous and unredeemable miscarriages of justice.

Yet we think it will come to that, unless something is done at once to restore the freedom of local authorities to cope with local criminal elements. Since the U.S. Supreme Court is the prime element undermining those authorities, it appears to us that only the U.S. Congress is in position at this stage to reassert the rights and best interests of law-abiding citizens.

The World's Week In Focus

Enemy Oil Depots Bombed, Medicare Begins

By Oland Silk

ON JUNE 18 President Johnson said cryptically, "we may have to raise the cost of aggression." On Wednesday of last week a Pentagon officer told newsmen, "The price of the war has gone up."

He was referring to the 46-plane bombing of North Vietnamese oil complexes close to Hanoi and Haiphong, a step long advocated by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Republican Coordinating Committee, and various "hawks" in Congress. The raid was miraculous in its precision: at least 60 per cent of the fuel centers were destroyed. The targets were within two miles and three miles of downtown Hanoi and Haiphong, respectively.

THE TACTICAL aim of the raid — followed by consecutive strikes Thursday and Friday — was to restrict the fuel supply to an ever-growing buildup of motorized troops pouring into South Viet Nam. The larger, hoped-for goal was to make the war more costly for the enemy and to push him near the peace table.

JOHNSON ordered the raids (he approves personally every target before the go-ahead in Viet Nam) after 21 months of sustained bombing had failed to halt the flow of men and supplies South. Secretary of Defense McNamara said in each case, the increase had been well over 100 per cent in the last few weeks.

As expected, the air strikes caused an outcry in Congress and the world.

HIGH ranking Senators who opposed the escalation were Fulbright, Morse, and Mansfield. Fulbright and Mansfield said they made peace negotiations more difficult to come by, although no one thought to ask "what negotiations?" Morse branded the action as "outlawry" and said the "biggest threat to the peace of the world is the United States."

THOSE giving the Administration top marks were Senators Everett Dirksen, Russell Long, Richard Russell, and Rep. Mendel Rivers. Sen. Russell of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, advocated bombing "each and every target in North Viet Nam that can contribute to the war in South Viet Nam."

THE International line-up went this way:

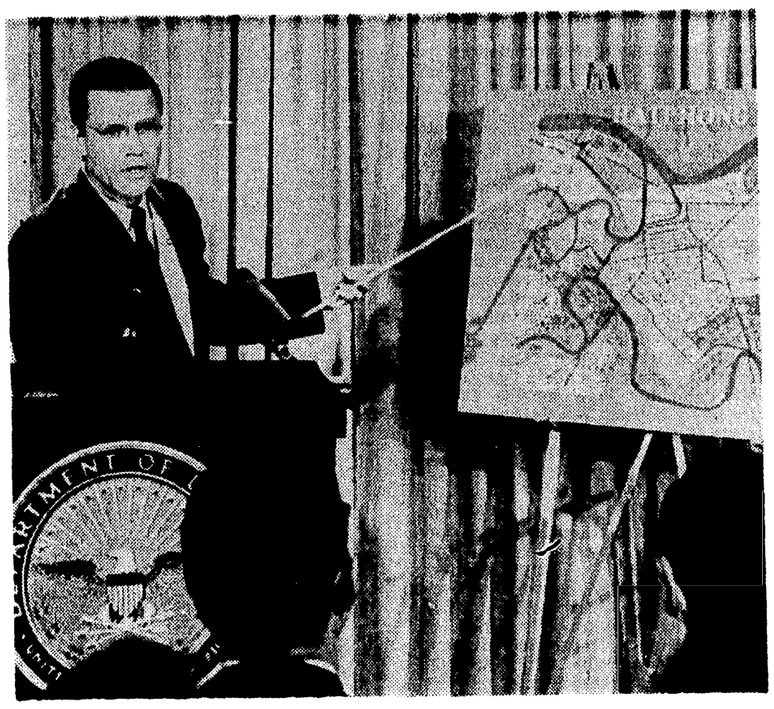
Russia, North Viet Nam, Yugoslavia and other Communist countries labeled the bombing "barbaric." Britain "disassociated" itself from the escalation. The Vatican expressed regrets. India was critical as was the United Nations.

Japan, Australia, and Thailand favored it, or saw few alternatives under the circumstances. Even President De Gaulle refused to sign a joint statement with his Russian hosts condemning U. S. policy in Viet Nam.

THE IMMEDIATE question for millions was: Will this bring nuclear war with Red China or the Russians? Vice President Humphrey was reassuring — and then he wasn't. He said he didn't think Chinese would directly intervene, either on the ground or air, and then said, "no one knows what Red China will do."

Peking's newspapers belatedly let fly with a charge that "immoral U. S. bandits" were causing a serious escalation of the war, but they stopped short of threatening a Korea-type intervention.

Meanwhile, the President went on a barnstorming tour of the Midwest, rooting for his war decisions, telling the Communists the United States would never give up in Viet Nam, and courting Democratic votes for the November contests. Opinion polls have shown his popularity waning in the Midwest farm country.



Defense Boss McNamara Points Out Target . . . . After Long Deliberations

PIGS FORTUNATELY can't vote, or the poll graphs would show a further descent after Johnson's exhibition at a Duroc, Iowa feeding pen. He chased a litter yelling "sooey, sooey," and when they got underfoot again called out, "haw git up, boys." — and they did.

Before leaving the Iowans at one stop he said that if they were worried about inflation to vote Republican — then they could stop worrying, because it would be on them for sure.

HE WAS TO spend the week-end on the Pedernales and await word from Hanoi.

Medicare And AMA

DOMESTIC AFFAIRS centered on the beginning of Medicare. But other events set off sparks, political and otherwise.

FOR EXAMPLE, Senator Robert Kennedy planted his ambitious nose smack in the middle of a probate judge's race in New York City. He not only gave his candidate the margin for victory, but in so doing, became the most powerful Democrat in the state.

Kennedy's hand-picked candidate was Samuel J. Silverman. Together they defeated the regular Manhattan organization candidate, Arthur Klein. It was an open test of Kennedy's strength. He is now in a position to pick the man to run against Gov. Rockefeller.

ON SUBURBAN Long Island, a Goldwater supporter, Steven Derounian, won the GOP nomination for congress over moderate William Casey. Derounian will face Democrat Rep. Lester Wolff in November.

CIVIL rights organizations were embroiled in fiscal and ideological conflict. The chants of "black power" that so disturbed white Mississippians two weeks ago was disturbing Negro "moderates" too. The theme of black power was coined by the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC). Last week, a former chairman and officer in SNCC, John Lewis, resigned. He would not say the militants had caused it, but did say, "I don't know if the Mississippi march did more harm than good." Lewis added the Meredith March did not receive much financial or any other kind of support.

Earlier, Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, decided to "go it alone" in the Mississippi summer campaign because it had to pick up $17,000 of the estimated $30,000 cost of the march.

KING FELT that the black power talk blunted the impact of the march and said SNCC, led by Stokely Carmichael, has "gone down a wrong path." Negroes must have power, he said, but it must be "shaped power", meaning within the framework of the white majority.

RACIAL troubles beset Cordele, Georgia the second time this year. Although the town of 11,500 is desegregated whites and colored staged a shoot-out that forced officials to clamp on a tight curfew. The shooting flared between two filling stations, one owned by a Negro, the other by a white man. Four whites were arrested for carrying firearms. No serious injuries were reported. Cordele has 3 Negro policemen on its force, and 70 per cent of the town employes are Negro. Officials were puzzled by the turn of events.

COED EDITOR Annett Buchanan was convicted of contempt for refusing to divulge the names of marijuana smokers on the University of Oregon campus.

A story she wrote carried their remarks, but no identification. She was fined $300 and given 12 days to pay it. Her lawyer may seek a new trial or appeal the conviction to the Oregon Supreme Court.

THE HOTEL Astor, maiden aunt of New York's Times Square, closed to make way for a 40-story office building. The hotel was for years home to presidents and show business people.

THE HOUSE JUDICIARY Committee voted to exempt home owners who sell their own homes from a proposed open housing proposal in the Administration's new civil rights bill. The compromise, adopted by a bipartisan vote of 21-13, cleared the way for final committee approval of the whole bill. The Administration wanted a sweeping ban on racial discrimination in the sale and rental of all housing.

Under the compromise plan — the brainchild of Rep. Charles Mathia, R-Md. — owners of homes up to 4-family units in size, who sell or lease the property themselves, would be exempt. Realtors and brokers would be prohibited from engaging in discriminatory practices. But if an owner engages a realtor or broker and instructs him not to sell to a Negro, the broker would also be exempt. An owner could make only two such transactions a year, however.

SOME 19 MILLION senior citizens became eligible for medicare hospital insurance Friday. Doctors and patients reserved any prognosis, but President Johnson praised it as expected. About 91 per cent of all the country's 7,374 general hospitals opened their doors for the insured care of any American aged 65 and over.

The nonparticipating hospitals were mainly in the South, Mississippi being the most reluctant. The government ruled Thursday night that federal hospitals may be used for critically ill medicare patients in emergencies.

Generally speaking, the Public Health Service was surprised at the acceptance in the South. One official said, "And more hospitals will be desegregating when they begin to feel the pressure from unhappy local residents, both white and black."

Twenty-three states entered medicare with 100 per cent participation.

IN MISSISSIPPI hospital participation was 33 out of 133, South Carolina, 46 out of 93, Louisiana, 78 out of 144, Georgia, 107 out of 176, just to name a few.

MEANWHILE, back at the American Medical Association convention, doctors passed a resolution recommending that doctors bill patients directly for services under medicare. This would permit doctors to set their charges at any amount they choose, leaving it to the patient to seek reimbursement from the medicare "intermediary" — usually Blue Shield. The intermediary would reimburse for only 80 per cent of what it considers a "reasonable charge" for the treatment given. The patient would have to absorb the difference, however large.

DOCTORS have fought medicare as socialistic and disruptive of doctor-patient relations. Former Vice-President Nixon received a standing ovation at the AMA convention when he urged more doctors to enter politics as a way of fighting the medicare program. He also won warm applause when he said, "I want a doctor who is working for me, not one who is working for the government.

NIXON ALSO addressed the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce in Chicago. He called for a victory in Viet Nam before 1968 when Red China will have nuclear capability. Other speakers were Vice President Humphrey and Gov. George Romney of Michigan. A 45-minute private chat between Nixon and Romney, current GOP frontrunners, produced nothing for the public except coy jokes.

THE SENATE Ethics committee recessed its probe into the activities of Senator Thomas Dodd, Connecticut Democrat. The silver-maned lawmaker took the stand to deny an "errand boy" role in his relations with lobbyist Julius Klein, a registered agent of West German interests. Dodd admitted using Klein's Essex House apartment on several occasions, denied personal use of his car, denied receiving gifts of major value, admitted he put occasional Klein pieces into the Congressional Record, and spoke of Klein's great worth to only one German, Conrad Adenauer, on his trip to West Germany on committee business. Hearings will resume July 15 when Klein will take the stand. The committee will also look into the charges of misappropriation of campaign funds by the senator. Thus, the answer to the question, "Is Dodd Dead?" must await further developments.

Argentine Coup

DEMOCRACY BIT the dust again in Argentina. A lightning, bloodless coup toppled the government of President Illia. Three army officers led the palace plotters. They installed former Army commander, General Juan Carlos Ongania, as provisional president, and dismissed the national and state legislatures, courts and provincial governors. Signs pointed to a lengthy militarist reign, probably for 10 years.

ILLIA'S DOWNFALL was blamed on fears of a Peronist victory in upcoming elections and economic conditions. Juan Peron, one-time dictator of Argentina now living in exile, his a passionate hold on the peasants and labor unions. When Peronists win elections in the provinces, the military begins to get edgy — especially if Buenos Aires Province is in question. The junta moved quickly with guns and tanks, placing a 75-MM. recoilless rifle directly at the front door of the palace. Illia relented, but not without extended "debate." He was not arrested, but his brother and the Mayor of Buenos Aires were.

PRESIDENT De Gaulle returned from a tour of Russia armed with agreements for a "hot line" between Paris and Moscow, and in technical and spatial fields. He may have opened up a "new era of good feeling" on the continent, but major problems remained unsettled.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Confucius, 2,500 years ago, had a reputation for clarity of statement, but he may have goofed when he described a wise man as one who "knows that he knows what he knows and does not know what he does not know."

However clear that is to an Oriental mind, a Westerner was one up on the Sage of Shantung in defining a little knowledge as a dangerous thing. In this light and from the standpoint of detached observation, last week's top local and area news threw some dangerous curves.

The chief reference is to a Fifth District sales tax in the Legislature, with prominent nods to two bills affecting the local school boards, their composition and taxing authority.

TYLER

As to the former, keeping abreast of the legislation's form at a given moment, its meaning and who stood where with regard to its provisions was itself a severe tax on the simple skills of at least one local news writer.

Ouachita Parish was amended from the bill, permitting a vote in the district on a one-cent tax to support school salaries. Then, in the Senate, Sen. Jamar Adcock of Monroe had the parish in again, this time with a new proposal on distribution of anticipated surpluses.

The fresh split of the excess collected in Ouachita — previously estimated at $1.8 million after salary implementation — won the support of Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard, though the city council opposed the original bill. Monroe would get 75 per cent, West Monroe 22 per cent and Sterlington three per cent. As well, a new statement was due from the Monroe School Board, another opponent of the bill, as these notes came to deadline.

But, before all this, the West Monroe Chamber of Commerce, on record against the measure as written, was on record again asking the return of Ouachita to its coverage, plus the return of a "fair amount of revenue."

And if the Ouachita Police Jury seems left out of the developments, it's because the jury apparently was left out of the Adcock amendment on distribution. This fact aroused the consternation of a quorum of jurors Friday, while the bill was passing in the Senate, as they insisted that if other political subdivisions were to benefit, the jury should too.

So the matter stood, an Asian puzzle worthy of Confucius, with Senate and House approval in different forms and almost certainly bound for a conference committee to resolve those differences.

Also mildly befuddling to some spectators was action on the two school bills, both introduced by the Monroe senator — one to remove Monroe residents from the Ouachita School Board, the other to "freeze" the Monroe board's tax boundaries. The one enjoyed excellent good health, while the other, submitted on the vigorous request of the parish school board, died in a House committee at the suggestion of Sen. Adcock. The issue of so-called encroachments by the city, through annexation, into maintenance taxes being received by the parish, therefore, will not see the constitutional ballot this November.

CLOSE TO HOME

In events exclusively close to home, there was a column's-worth last week.

New city administrations, for example, took office Friday in due course after June's general elections in West Monroe and Sterlington. Sworn by Judge John McCormick was Mayor W. B. "Bert" Hatten and his West Monroe aldermen, Charles Anding (the lone returnee), Roland Nix, Truett Thorn, Jeff Caldwell Jr. and Dr. E. S. Blackmon. On the ascendancy in Sterlington were Mayor Marvin Brantley, Marshal Jess Cain and aldermen Baxter Sinclair, John Plunket, J. E. Barton, James Rainwater and Dr. H. E. Jones.

Hatten pledged a "tightly-knit program of progress" for West Monroe in informal sessions with the board prior to installation, but conceded large problems just ahead. He solved one temporarily, asking Charles Traylor and Charles Joiner to remain 90 days as city attorneys. Traylor presently is an assistant district attorney.

The police jury also was active in ending and starting administrations, as it regretfully accepted the resignation of Parish Engineer Herbert Collier and hired Monroe Dunlap, assistant Fifth District highway engineer, as his replacement. Collier leaves July 15 for Baton Rouge, with Dunlap due to switch on Aug. 15. Parish Road Supervisor Hardy Wells will serve as engineer in the interim. The changeover was effected with little friction, by a 13-4 vote, the opposition being directed toward the need for any parish engineer at all and at Dunlap's salary of $1,250 a month.

UNAFFECTED

Strictly unaffected by all the foregoing, however, was the opening and run of the annual Miss Louisiana Pageant in Monroe, sponsored by the city's Jaycees. The four-day spectacle, by every account, was predictably lovely, as were the 38 contestants and other beauty visitors from Alaska, Arkansas, Florida and Mississippi. Neville auditorium, where it was held, was predictably air-conditioned, which was an important point to those who recalled the previous years' shows. The peculiarities of these lines, penned late Friday, unfortunately do not allow disclosure of the winner's name. That information is available on today's page one.

The step from beauty pageants to construction projects being obviously so short, it becomes logical to proceed to an accounting of major building underway or contemplated.

Construction of the plant at Selman Field by the City of Monroe for lease to the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation was listed during the week as approximately 50 per cent done. Delayed early by rains, work on the $708,000 facility is under full steam, aimed at completion in some 60 days.

Plans were nearing completion on the renovation as a state office building of the Virginia Hotel. A contract will be awarded soon afterwards and 11 agencies were designated last week as the first tenants. Ultimately, about 300 state employees will be based in the Virginia.

Also shaping up were the second plans for a $1.7 million, bond-financed expansion and renovation of the Ouachita courthouse, a project torpedoed by initial bids that ran almost $250,000 over the money. The work will be readvertised, with changes drafted to puncture the cost.

On the Jonesboro Road, where contracted time on major rebuilding and repair is running out, highway officials pledged a successful conclusion to the work "this summer" and an end to "inconveniences" caused residents and business people. It could represent the end of an originally one-man attack on "dragging" work along the route launched by Rep. Lawrence Gibbs of Monroe.

LOSS OF LIFE

Tragically, last week's local and area news was even more deeply etched than usual by the accidental loss of life and property.

A 21-year-old West Monroyan, Gary Mac Burkgart, died of injuries received when his car crashed and overturned about seven miles out on Louisiana 15, hospitalizing two companions. Hardie Lee Joy, 59, of the Blade community, was killed when an automobile failed to complete a curve and struck him as he walked along U.S. 84 near Jena.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Maxine Vail, 30, wife of a serviceman stationed at El Paso, Tex., drowned in the Ouachita River during a visit to relatives at Bonita, and Juan Guerrero Jr., 19, was killed by lightning while working in a cotton field Wednesday near Columbia.

In Monroe, a 14-year-old Negro boy, Henry Nash, died as he leaped onto the side of a moving truck, slipped and fell between the wheels.

Newellton officials could be grateful at least that no lives were lost, but estimates of damage wrought by the blazing inferno which swept through that city's downtown early Monday evening, leveling five businesses, reached $225,000. One of the establishments destroyed, a theatre, would have been filled with patrons had the fire occurred two hours later than it did. The flames, shooting 70 feet upwards, drew firefighters from Waterproof, St. Joseph, Tallulah, Winnsboro, and Mangham, and their help, with outstanding, unsolicited aid from Newellton's Negro community, prevented a far worse holocaust.

DISASTER PREDICTED

Disaster of another kind was being predicted in some quarters during the week as the federal Medicare program took effect across the nation. With medical facilities in many sections already being used to capacity, the wonder was where an expected influx of older persons taking advantage of their new capabilities could be placed.

In the Twin Cities, only the E. A. Conway Memorial Hospital had qualified as a participating institution as the program's first effective day arrived Friday. St. Francis Hospital and Glenwood Hospital officials announced non-participation several days before, stating, in essence, that the likely patient load of Medicare would result in imparied service.

Other dealings with Washington boding unhappy results occurred during the week when it was revealed that officials there have turned thumbs down on the proposed 21-parish North Louisiana Economic Development District as being too large in scope. Ouachita would have been the district's headquarters parish and the police jury had, in fact, paid $1,500 dues, which will be returned. Though the unit may be reorganized into several smaller districts, plans for the channeling of federal assistance are conceded to have been set back by at least six months.

The jury was receiving still other recommendations during the week, this time from the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission. Eleven suggestions were put by wildlife biologists to the parish's Cheniere Lake Commission — including one to lower the lake level by six feet. Activating the proposals would require jury approval, with money expected to be a problem, though it was a forecast the action could double the lake's fish harvest.

ALSO OF INTEREST

Also of interest on the week's calendar of happenings and plans for the immediate future was this lineup, or rundown, as you please:

— Monroe Jaycees were planning to make July Fourth memorable in the Twin Cities as they announced the renewal of their holiday "Picnic in the Park," in conjunction with the customary fireworks display at Neville stadium. Not held since 1962, the Jaycee-sponsored public outing at Forsythe Park will include all manner of games, starting at 11 a.m., plus political talks, band concerts and other entertainment. Simultaneous with that announcement, the American Legion and the Daughters and Children of the American Revolution were urging flag-flying and bell ringing in honor of the nation's 190th birthday.

—Dr. Douglas William Greve became director of the Monroe Regional Mental Health Center, lately known as the Monroe Area Guidance Center, his appointment being announced by board chairman Hilton Lytle.

— The Monroe unit of the Louisiana National Guard returned home from two weeks' summer training at Fort Chaffee, Ark.

— T. L. Gaddis was appointed coordinator of distributive education at the Ouachita Valley Vocational-Technical School in West Monroe.

— Civic club presidents were installed, including Dr. Ralph Einhorn of the West Monroe Rotary Club and Ivan Calk of the North Monroe Lions Club, while Monroe policeman Ansley Reed was elected first vice president of the Magnolia State Peace Officers Association at its convention in New Orleans.

— Bernie Van, Ward 3 Ouachita police juror, was recovered from the severe electrical shock sustained the previous week on a construction job at Sterlington.

— The Ouachita Sheriff's Department opened a campaign to halt the passing of worthless checks, distributing precautionary posters throughout the area.

— Forty-nine new members were enrolled by the Ouachita Better Business Bureau, as the organization's membership drive total reached 79.

— West Monroe lawyer, J. Carl Parkerson, one of three qualified to run in August for Ouachita-Morehouse district attorney, withdrew from the race, leaving only incumbent Albin P. Lassiter and challenger Tom Fowler.

— Monroe's first home-owned river barge, the Betty M of Moore Terminals — a 200-footer, was in use, docking with 500,000 gallons of diesel fuel from New Orleans.

— The Louisiana Alumni Council, made up of alumni association delegates from colleges under the State Board of Education, met in Monroe and opposed additional appointive powers for the governor in education.

— A special day, July 11, was set to honor H. K. Thatcher, executive director of the Ouachita River Valley Association, in El Dorado, Ark., marking his 16th year in his post, his 51st wedding anniversary and his 75th birthday.

— Ouachita Valley Council Boy Scouts made news as the council executive board announced the purchase of a building at 1011 N. 11th, Monroe, to be remodeled for use as a Scout Service Center. It will be headquarters for Council Executive Lavon Smith.

— Meantime, 79 scouts from all over northeast Louisiana were at the Kiroli reservation near West Monroe for summer camp.

'Christ Of Ozarks' Statue Towers Above Eureka Springs

The Elna M. Smith Foundation project on Magnetic Mountain is seven stories tall, centered in a beautiful scenic area of Arkansas.

By TRAVIS MAYO
Staff Writer

Man's desire to leave some record of his sojourn on earth seems to have been instinctive with the human race from the beginning. Fortunately for modern man, the records have survived to tell us what our ancestors were like and what they held in high esteem.

It appears also that, since the beginning, man's attempt to express his feelings through his art has met with mixed emotions. A work of art has always inspired some and baffled others. It may be held in the highest critical esteem in one generation and dismissed as mawkishly sentimental in the next.

To see this human trait in action, we need only to look at expressionist art — condemned as degenerate in the early part of this century, but highly praised today.

BASIS OF VALUE

So art, in the final analysis, depends greatly upon the conception of the artist and the goal of the sponsor. In the case of sculpture, the works value depends upon its permanence and upon how clearly it expresses the character of the person or event that it is meant to honor.

Perhaps Mr. and Mrs. Gerald L. K. Smith of Tulsa, Okla., had posterity in mind when they ordered the construction of "The Christ of the Ozarks," the massive statue of Jesus Christ which now towers seven stories high on Magnetic Mountain overlooking Eureka Springs, Ark.

Whether they mean only to perpetuate the memory of the King of Kings or whether they may also have one eye on the modern tourist is a point of controversy among those currently discussing the value of the work.

VARIED VIEWS

Some skeptics are saying that Smith, the controversial former Disciples of Christ minister and Louisiana political figure, is thinking primarily of the ever present tourist and sightseer.

Others say the statue was built to last 3,000 years and to be an inspiration to mankind long after the present tourist-minded Eureka Springs has crumbled into dust.

They point out that it is a violation of the rules of the Elna M. Smith Foundation (which has built and paid for the statue) for anyone to solicit funds or sell merchandise on the grounds surrounding the statue, which include 167 acres, seven of them within the city limits of the long-time touristic mecca in northwest Arkansas.

POLITICAL FIGURE

Efforts have been made to keep Smith's political background disassociated from this monumental statue in the Ozarks. Students of Louisiana history recall Smith as an associate of Huey P. Long in the 1930s who carried on Long's "share - the - wealth" political philosophies after the governor was assassinated. Smith later ran for president.)

It would be an error to associate with the work of art any impressions one may have of the sponsor of the work. If political opposition had been grounds for scorning the art as well as the artist, much of Michelangelo's masterpieces would have been condemned. Michelangelo's life was one of extreme political distraction and he often labored under a political atmosphere most unfavorable to art.

(One will also recall that Michelangelo was commissioned in 1514 to do a statue of the risen Christ. This work now stands in the Church of Saint Maria Sopra Minerva at Rome.)

The Christ of the Ozarks, commissioned by the Smith Foundation, is the work of sculptor Emmett Sullivan of Rapid City, South Dakota.

Sullivan assisted Gutzon Borglum in some phases of work on the Mount Rushmore Presidential Monument in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

DINOSAURS SCULPTOR

The sculptor was commissioned a year ago to do the Eureka Springs sculpture of Christ. Perhaps his fame as the sculptor of the largest group of dinosaurs in the world prompted the Smith Foundation to search him out.

Sullivan carved the gigantic figures at Dinosaur Park in Rapid City which are visited by a million and a half persons annually. One of the figures, Brontosaurus, weighs 185,000 pounds and is visible for almost 50 miles on a clear day. It is located in the hills at an elevation 500 feet above Rapid City.

The adopted son of a Sioux Indian tribe, Sullivan has also sculptured more than 100 busts of famous Plains Indians.

He was the chief engineer and artist in charge of "Christ of the Ozarks," and says that "The basic statue is strictly an engineering job, while the rest is artistry."

The sculptor, working in a studio in Eureka Springs, chiseled the hands and the front mask from blocks of concrete and mortar. They were then trucked to the mountain and hoisted into place.

The statue, which can be seen 15 miles away, is on an altitude of 1,500 feet. It weighs one million pounds, not including a base of 250,000 pounds of concrete, plus reinforcing steel.

CHRIST OF ANDES

Upon first mention of the Ozark statue, one is reminded of "Christ of the Andes," a similar heroic - size statue in Uspallata Pass in the Republic of Chile.

"Christ of the Andes" was erected in 1902 to symbolize peace between Chile and Argentina and to commemorate the settlement of the boundary dispute between the two nations. The governments joined in erecting on their common boundary the famous statue of the risen Christ.

If "Christ of the Ozarks" serves no such commemorative purpose, it does symbolize peace to those who took part in the dedication June 25 on Magnetic Mountain.

Eureka Springs Mayor Jan Bullock told persons gathered at the base of the statue that "'Christ of the Ozarks . . . should mean a great deal more to everyone who views it than just an artistic monument."

A statue of Christ, the mayor said, should "remind each one of us of the tenets He taught." Mayor Bullock recalled Christ's "teaching of the brotherhood of man . . . a lesson each of us should strive to practice."

To fit the description of monumental sculpture, the work must perpetuate the memory of a person or an event. "By following the teachings of Christ," the mayor said, "we can overcome ignorance, dispair, hatred, envy, loneliness, distrust and lack of Christian tolerance." If the statue inspires these virtues in man, it will certainly perpetuate the memory of Christ. It will be monumental art in the strict sense of the term.

Structural engineer McKinley Weems recently discussed the "Christ of the Ozarks" in terms of a tourist attraction. "They come up here by the carload every day," he said. People, he said, are anxious to see a statue half as large as the Statue of Liberty and twice the size of the famous bronze "Christ of the Andes."

Townspeople in the shadow of the outstretched arms understandably look upon the statue as a powerful drawing card. Eureka Springs, the "Little Switzerland of the Ozarks," is an 86-year-old community, and many believe it has passed its zenith as a tourist attraction.

The statue is being promoted in pamphlets and bulletins that serve the sightseer. This, strictly speaking, is no violation of the desires put forth by the Smith Foundation that the statue remain free from commercialism.

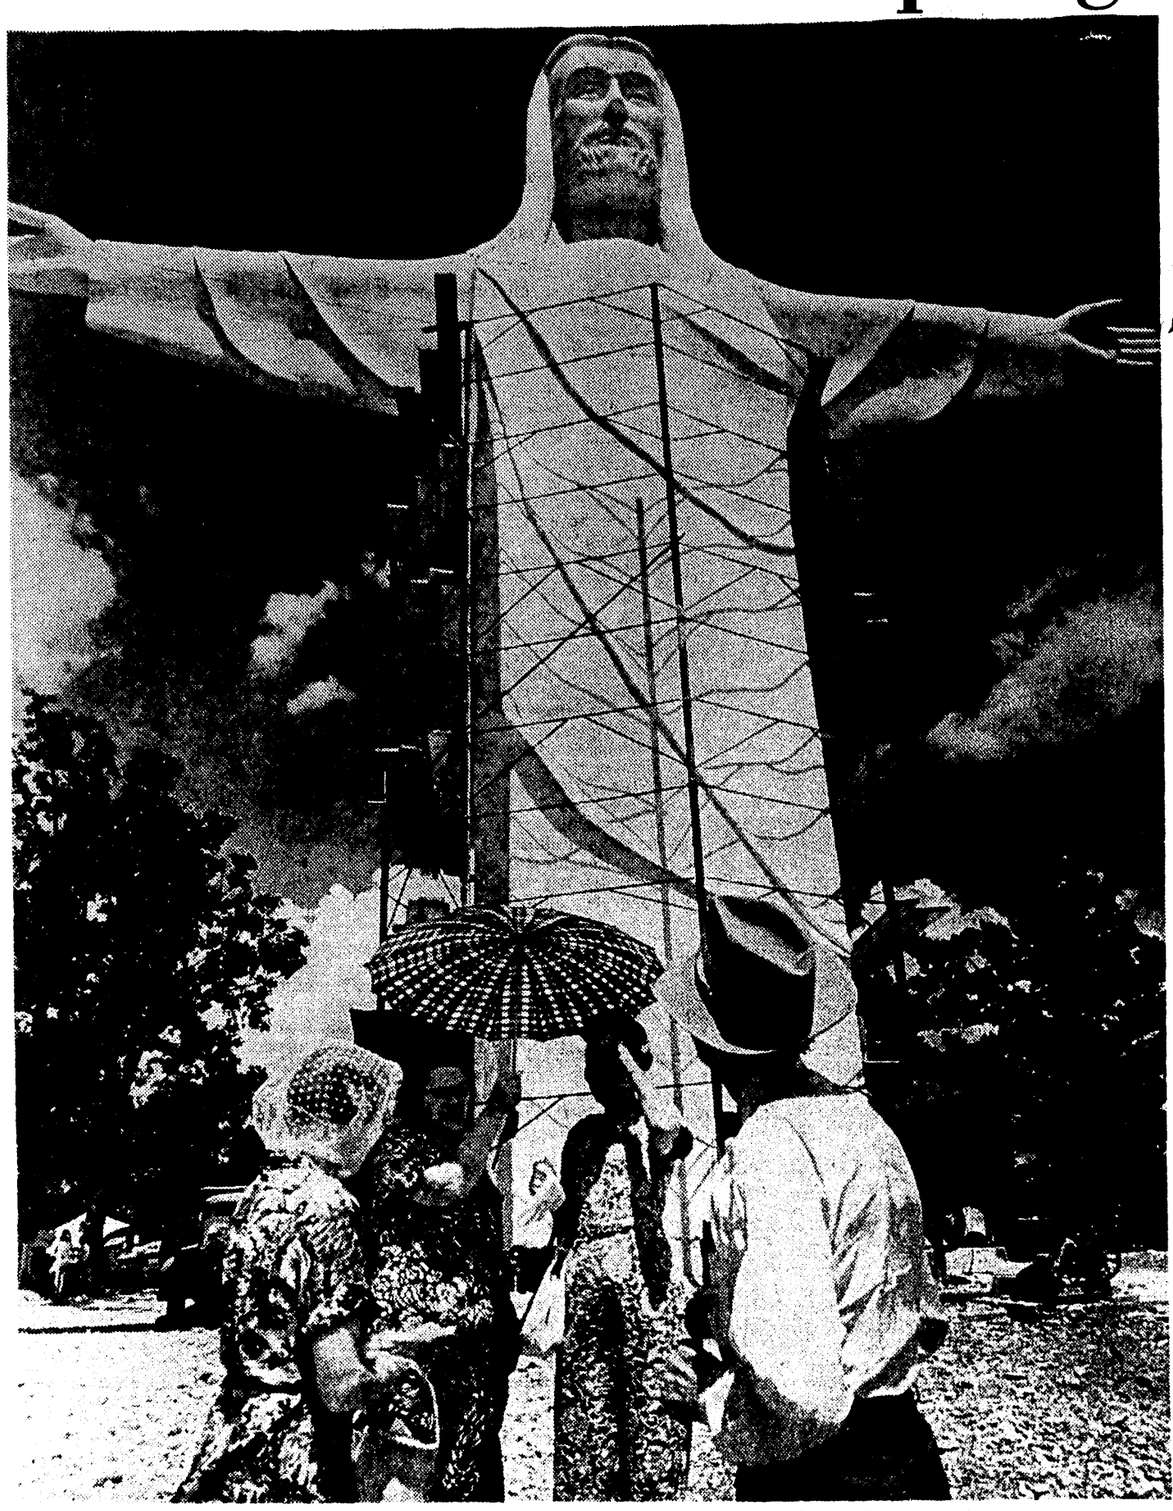
COST NOT REVEALED

Smith has declined to give the cost of the project, except to state that it was three times the original estimate. It has been erected without debt to persons outside the Smith Foundation.

Maintenance of the statue, the officials of the Smith Foundation believe, will be provided by a trust fund formed from contributions and receipts from the "Christ Only Art Gallery" in Eureka Springs.

The foundation has also established the art gallery, which includes a variety of portrayals of Christ. The objects number over 100 and include wood and ivory carvings; oil on canvas, copper and porcelain; French enamels, sculptured marble, mosaics and needlepoint. An admission fee is charged to the gallery and receipts are deposited in the city's bank and dedicated to maintenance of the gallery and the statue.

At the recent dedication, Mrs. Smith disclosed that she and her husband had elected to be buried in a two-grave, fenced plot within the shadow of the statue. The monument is isolated from commercial encroachment on 167 acres of land. Below the statue is a running spring near which is being constructed a drinking fountain for hikers. The spring is to be known as Living Water Springs and a shrine is to be located beneath an overhanging rock which is to be called "The Rock of Ages."



SCAFFOLDING attests to the newness of the massive statue of Jesus Christ, dedicated recently by officials of the Elna M. Smith Foundation. The statue towers seven stories high atop Magnetic Mountain overlooking Eureka Springs, Ark. These spectators, shielding themselves from the sun beneath the giant monument, are like many others who view the work with mixed emotions.

Noise Taking Increasingly Heavy Toll In Irritability, Fatigue, Damaged Hearing

By ARTHUR EDSON

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — This is a nice backyard, on a dead-end street 12 miles south of the White House in what used to be known as a quiet neighborhood.

Lovely, giant oaks hem in the yard on all sides. Ferns and rambling roses and Virginia creepers give it grace. It's pleasant to loll and watch as a catbird bathes daintily and a bullying bluejay muscles aside a cardinal so it can gobble the sunflower seed.

Only one thing is wrong with this yard, and what is wrong with it is wrong with almost every yard in urban and suburban America.

NO BARRIER

Shrubs or fences can insure visual privacy, but there's no way to shut out the unceasing noise from heaven and earth, an inescapable fact in these summer months of outdoor living and open windows.

In nearby yards three power lawnmowers — so useful, but so annoying — angrily sputter. Chief, the white German shepherd dog who lives next door, barks excitedly. A teenager proves his virility, or something by heavy footing the accelerator of his sports car in a mad dash to the intersection, 300 feet away, and then squalling his tires on the sharp turn. A radio rock 'n' rolls monotonously.

Suddenly these assorted nuisances are overwhelmed by that prince of peace disturbers, the jet airplane, whining in to land at the nearby airport.

A day in the city is a day spent with noise — sometimes called music — in elevators and restaurants; with police and fire sirens screaming; with dynamite blasts shaking the earth as the new buildings go up; with auto horns dinning away in traffic jams; with the ubiquitous transistor radio blaring through walls.

Cities have always been noisy, but there was a time you could move away from it all. Now traffic surges into and around cities by beltways, throughways, freeways, railways and airways. In a nation becoming increasingly citified, there is no escape.

HEAVY TOLL

Minds are so used to the eternal clatter that it requires a conscious effort to sort out individual sounds — possibly nothing would shock a great city as much as unexpected, complete silence. But experts say ears keep on listening, and that the din demands a heavy toll, in irritability, in fatigue, in damaged hearing — and that it may affect hearts and sanity.

If today is bad, tomorrow will be worse.

People are squeezed in more tightly. Automobiles and airplanes grow more powerful and more numerous. And, finally, there's that supersonic plane with its sonic boom that may cut a reverberating swath 70 miles wide along each flight from coast to coast.

Bo K. O. Lundberg, since 1948 director general of the Aeronautical Research Institute of Sweden, claims the global supersonic racket will be catastrophic.

"We have arrived at one of the most important crossroads in history," Lundberg says, "not merely for the aviation people but for all mankind."

President Johnson, who travels by jet, by helicopter and behind screaming sirens, and who campaigns with a bullhorn, has come out against noise, especially airplane noise.

"There are no simple or swift decisions," Johnson has said. "But it is clear that we must embark now on a concerted effort to alleviate the problems of aircraft noise."

The Federal Aviation Agency has a new director of noise abatement, Raymond S. Shepanek.

Some industries and some communities are valiantly struggling to cut down excessive sound.

And congressmen, goaded by their constituents, are making a racket as they extoll the virtues of silence.

Rep. John W. Wydler's district is in the traffic pattern for New York's Kennedy Airport. Wydler, a Garden City, N.Y., Republican, sadly says: "At this time of year noise is the No. 1 issue, even greater than Viet Nam."

Noise is defined as unwanted sound, which helps explain why is it so difficult to control.

Tolerances to sounds vary enormously —what's music to a 16-year-old daughter may be unbearable to her square father — and when and where the sounds occur will influence judgments.

Arnold P. G. Peterson and Ervin E. Gross Jr., observe in their "Handbook of Noise Measurement:" "No adequate measures of the annoyance levels of noises have yet been devised."

George G. Thiessen, head of the acoustics section of Canada's National Research Council, points to a further complication.

Speaking of Americans, Thiessen says: "As homeowners, they would like to enjoy an evening out of doors in peace and quiet, but as motorists they want the maximum power to give maximum acceleration even if the tires squeal. They like to hear the vroom, or at least some of them do."

But other nations like to hear the vroom, or its equivalent, too, so much so that the World Health Organization lists noise as a global problem.

Measures of sound use incredibly complex equations.

Even an attempt to define terms isn't easy, as you'll see from this, by Rep. Theodore R. Kupferman, a New York Republican straight from noiseville, downtown Manhattan:

"The decibel — known as dB — is a dimensionless unit used to describe levels of acoustic pressure, power and intensity. It is a logarithmic ratio between two sound pressures. In other words, a difference between two sound pressure levels of 10 decibels means a relative increase of sound energy of 10 times the lower level, not an arithmetic increase of 10 points. A doubling of the apparent noise level means the sound energy has been multiplied by 10."

But nevertheless let's take an unscientific look at familiar sounds on a decibel chart:

35 decibels — All right for a schoolroom.

55 — Acceptable in a restaurant.

60 — Difficult to talk on a telephone.

80 — Impossible to talk on a phone.

84 — Noise made by the average truck.

90 — Tolerable if of short duration.

100 — Physical discomfort, or the amount of racket that can be created in a kitchen with all gadgets running at once.

110 — Loss of hearing, if prolonged.

130 — About what a jet air liner makes in an airport, and the maximum for human ears.

The New York Noise Abatement Commission has been in business since 1929, and Rep. Kupferman says: "Evidence from the commission's studies supported findings that excessive noise destroys efficiency, interrupts minimum requirements of sleep, can cause deafness, severely strains the nervous system, is extremely costly, inhibits the normal development of infants, is the cause of accidents, and interferes with school programs."

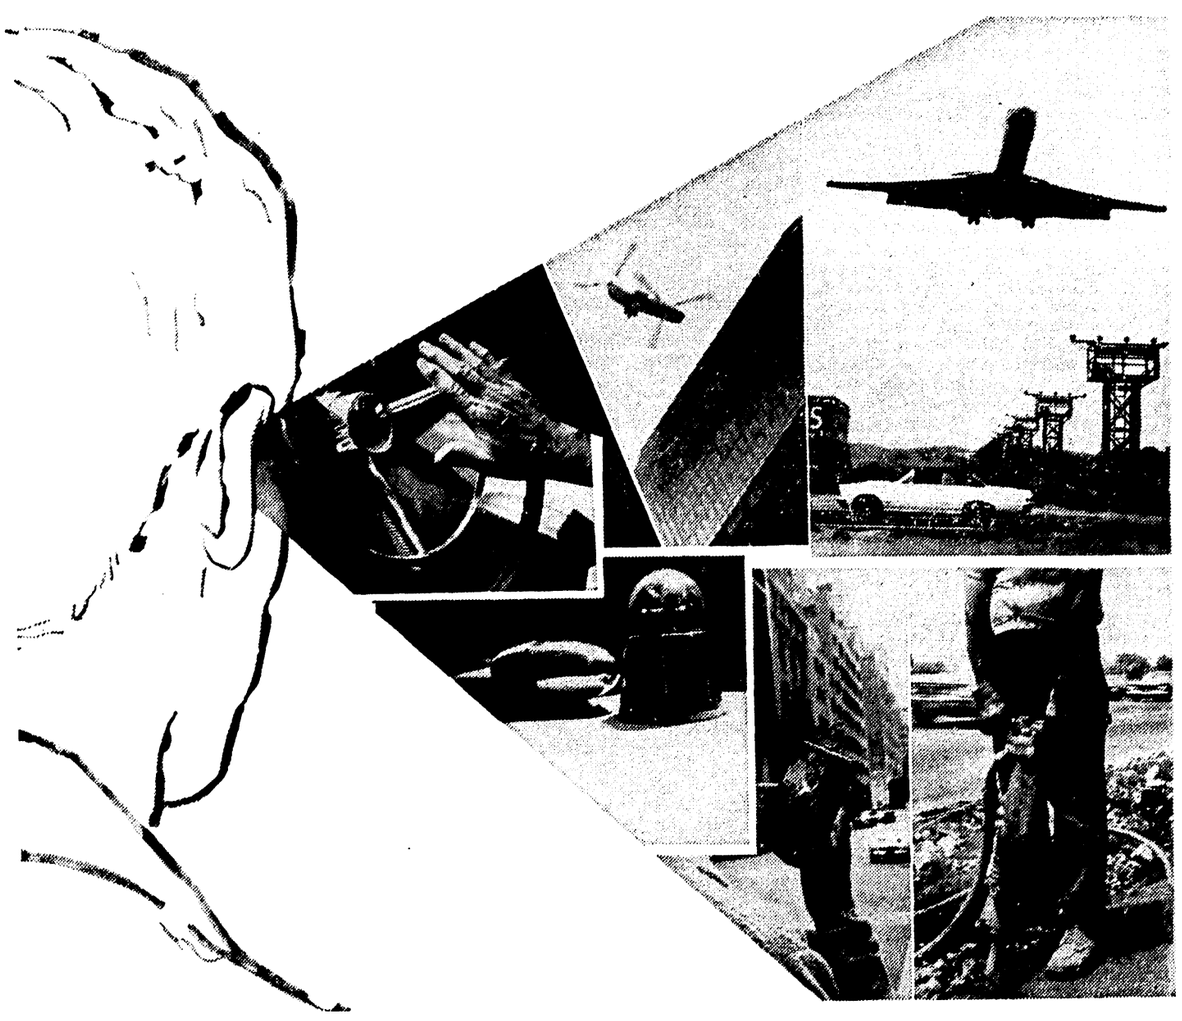
Other studies have suggested that noise can cause sterility, or temporary color blindness, or inflammation of the stomach.

Why should noise affect health so adversely?

Well, the life of primitive man depended on his hearing; he had to respond immediately and purposefully to unexpected noises.

An English physician, Dr. John Anthony Parr, explains it: "A sudden loud noise spells danger and we react. In fact, we automatically get ready either to defend ourselves or for flight. Our muscles tense and we jerk, our abdominal blood vessels contract to drive extra blood to our muscles and this produces that feeling of the stomach turning over, and in an instant the liver releases stores of glucose to provide fuel for the muscles which may have to fight or run.

"This internal upheaval, if repeated again and again, is exhausting phsyically and mentally, and ultimately can cause a nervous breakdown."



NOISE IS GETTING noisier, nerves are getting edgier, Suburbia no longer provides an escape from city noises — and what's to be done? Auto horns and police sirens, power machines and transistor radios, helicopters and pets are only a few of the noise-makers which assault the ear and, say doctors, the heart and other organs. In several years supersonic jets with their widespread sonic boom may bring us to crisis point, warn experts. Congressmen, among others, are trying to find a noise abatement method — but thus far all the noise about lessening the noise has just been a lot of sound. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

TO THE American colonies and the world they gave the ideal of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." But for many of the eventual 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence 190 years ago, the reality brought early death, financial ruin, desertion by disapproving friends, even murder, in a train of tragedies. The causes included the act of signing the document. Seen here is a copy of an engraving of the famous painting of the signing in Philadelphia. The traditional date is July 4, 1776, but the actual signing took place on and after Aug. 2, according to historians. (AP Newsfeatures photo)

Declaration Of Independence

Many Of Original Signers Suffered Disgrace, Prison

EDITOR'S NOTE — In one of the greatest acts of history, 56 men pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor in creating a new nation on the American continent 190 years ago. In pursuit of their dream many of them suffered personal tragedy. Here is an account at this time of July 4 celebrations.

By JOHN MULLIGAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — A train of tragedy followed the men whose faint brown signatures are on the Declaration of Independence enshrined here in the National Archives.

For others of the eventual 56 signers, there would be disgrace, prison, ruin, heartbreak, oblivion, lonely graves and even murder.

William Ellery of Rhode Island watched his fellow singers closely because he was "determined to see how they all looked as they signed what might be their death warrants."

Nine would never live to see independence and only four would outlive King George III, whose "repeated injuries and usurpations" filled most of the Declaration.

The Rev. John Witherspoon, president of what is now Princeton University, who vowed he would rather die "by the hand of the executioner" than not sign, saw his campus turned into a battlefield and lost his son in the Continental army.

New Jersey signers Abraham Clark, Richard Stockton, Francis Hopkinson and John Hart also suffered. Clark's two soldier sons were taken prisoner and one was starved because of his father's signature.

Stockton, betrayed and imprisoned, died in ill health, his property plundered, a misfortune shared by Hopkinson, designer of the American flag, and Hart, hunted like an animal.

Another fugitive was Thomas McKean of Delaware, deserted "by those who ought to have been my friends."

Delaware's Caesar Rodney and George Read were plagued by illness but Rodney rose from a sickbed to gallop 80 miles through a storm to sign the Declaration.

Those whose properties also were pillaged or who were plunged into debt by the fortunes of war included Josiah Bartlett of New Hampshire; Francis Lewis, Lewis Morris and William Floyd of New York; Robert Morris, George Clymer and James Wilson of Pennsylvania; Richard Henry Lee, Carter Braxton, Benjamin Harrison and Thomas Nelson Jr., of Virginia; William Hooper of North Carolina and Lyman Hall of Georgia.

Lewis Morris' "Morrisania" was looted by both sides; Francis Lewis' wife was imprisoned and Floyd began anew as a pioneer in the upstate wilderness at 69.

Wealthy Robert Morris, "Financier of the Revolution," died a pauper with three years in a debtors' prison after the war.

Harrison's home was plundered by turncoat Benedict Arnold and Nelson called down artillery fire on his own home, chosen as headquarters by Cornwallis in the war's final major battle at Yorktown, Va.

Almost a quarter served in the military, with William Whipple of New Hampshire, who left a leg at Newport, R.I., and Oliver Wolcott of Connecticut becoming generals.

The invalided soldier, Thomas Lynch Jr., of South Carolina, was lost at sea. Gov. Button Gwinnett of Georgia was fatally wounded in a duel with an American general less than a year after the signing.

Four signers became prisoners of war. Georgia's George Walton was taken after being wounded at Savannah. Thomas Heyward Jr., Arthur Middleton, and Edward Rutledge of South Carolina were confined in the old Spanish fortress at St. Augustine when Charleston fell.

Years after the war, the impoverished Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts was saved from Potter's Field by public funds; George Wythe was poisoned by an heir apparent, and Samuel Chase of Maryland, an associate U. S. Supreme Court justice named by Washington, was impeached in 1804 but acquitted in 1805.

Whatever their fates, the signers were proud of the Declaration. John Morton of Pennsylvania, the first to die, wrote that the friends who made him an outcast would one day remember the signing was "the most glorious service that I ever rendered to my country."

And Thomas Jefferson, whose debts rose to $100,000 before he died exactly 50 years to the day of the signing, wrote to a friend shortly before death that the Declaration "was intended to be an expression of the American mind."

By his own will, his tomb at Monticello carries first the title, "Author of the Declaration of American Independence."

Heat Wave Smothering East Cities

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A two-weeks-old summer heat wave in the East boiled above the 100-degree mark Saturday, setting record high temperatures in some cities.

The weather provided an ovenlike atmosphere for the Independence Day weekend activities in the middle Atlantic region as the mercury zoomed to 100 degrees in New York City and Philadelphia.

Residents of Harrisburg, Pa., sweated out a record high for the date of 101 while Baltimore, Md., shattered a record high for the date with a sizzling 99.

The 100 reading in Philadelphia marked only the second time in nine years the temperature has hit the 100 mark.

The Midwest also sweltered in heat. Lansing, Mich., set a record high for the date when the mercury jumped to 97. Temperatures soared as high as 98 as far north as Traverse City, Mich.

Weather forecasters blamed vigorous tropical easterlies for the early summer heat wave in the eastern half of the nation. These winds usually are confined to the Gulf and Caribbean regions, pushing northward through the Gulf states in the summer.

These tropical winds now are as far north as the Great Lakes and are pushing temperatures into the 90s as far north as Hudson Bay.

The heat was accompanied by unseasonably cool weather in the West. Cool winds from the Pacific spread gray skies and wet weather across the Pacific Northwest and northern Rockies.

Northeastern Montana was deluged with three to four inches of rain in less than three hours. Subsequent flooding washed out a bridge on Montana Highway 13 about 33 miles south of Wolf Point and caused other damage. Hailstones pelted ranches and farms in the area.

A weakened tropical disturbance that moved up the western coast of Florida caused rain from Arkansas to the Carolinas.

Large Letter Costs $38.60

TRACY, Calif. (AP)—Clinton G. Keller, a crusader against juvenile delinquency, dispatched to President Johnson Saturday a giant letter measuring 5 by 8 feet.

He paid $38.60 in postage for registered mail delivery to the White House of his message, written on plywood, asking President Johnson to inaugurate a program of presidential guidance letters for American youth.

Keller, a furniture dealer, has written to all 50 state governors and attorneys general asking support of his plan to combat delinquency, school dropouts and crime.

Policeman Gets Man By Scooter

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Rookie Patrolman Douglas Gavinski got his man Friday night—on a commandeered motor scooter.

Gavinski was walking his beat when he saw a motorist hit a parked car and drive the wrong way on a one-way street. The officer flagged down a passing motor scooter, asked to borrow it, and gave chase.

Several blocks later he caught up with the motorist and ticketed him for failure to leave his name at the scene of an accident and driving against traffic.

Japanese Hold Embassy Picket

TOKYO (AP) — Some 40 Uome 40 university professors and students sat down in front of the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo Saturday when their request for an interview with Ambassador Edwin O. Reischauer was rejected.

The demonstrators wanted to hand Reischauer a written protest note on U.S. bombings of the Hanoi-Haiphong area and the talk with him. They were told the Ambassador was out of town.

Police later dispersed group.

Huge Air Freight

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The U.S. Air Force announced its combat cargo deliveries in June to about 80 air strips serving the American and allied forces in South Viet Nam had amounted to more than 100 million pounds. The carrier is the 315th Air Commando Wing commanded by Col. Robert T. Simpson of Florence, Ala.

Solons Work 'Up To Snuff' Chief Claims

BATON ROUGE (AP) —Gov. John McKeithen's administration had done by Saturday about all it set out to do in the 60-day legislature.

"We are just about up to snuff," McKeithen said as he looked back over the sometimes hectic session.

The legislature, emotions sometimes on edge, worked through Friday in one of the toughest weeks in the session, and quit for the July 4th holiday weekend until Tuesday.

The House returns at 11 a.m. Tuesday to three remaining big items of interest to the administration. The Senate comes back two hours later with little left to do other than iron out any differences with the House.

The big issues left unfinished are the governor's domed stadium for New Orleans, congressional redistricting and Senate reapportionment. They will be taken up in that order Tuesday.

Ahead of McKeithen lay one of the oddest political games in years, a watch over public opinion concerning the constitutional proposal to allow him to seek an unprecedented second straight term. The voters will decide Nov. 8 whether he and governors after him may serve two consecutive four-year terms in office.

McKeithen's legislative forces whipped direct and indirect threats to the constitutional amendment.

The House scuttled two Republican proposals, one to restrict two terms to governors after McKeithen and the other to allow only him two terms.

Most of a 27-bill package on governmental reform cleared the legislature, and the handful left may be passed in the short last week which ends Thursday.

These were born of McKeithen's wish to ease public fear of a Baton Rouge-controlled political machine that could stay in power for a long time. A special study committee came up with 37 proposals, and the governor ran with 27.

Governors Gathering For Meet

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —The nation's governors began gathering Saturday for a 48th annual meeting likely to be marked by "soul searching" on the stepped up Viet Nam War and perhaps a fresh statement of support for President Johnson.

Gov. John H. Reed, Maine Republican and chairman of the governors' conference, personally endorsed the President's action in ordering bombing of oil depots around Hanoi and Haiphong.

He also told United Press International that, while none was at hand, he would "not be surprised" if a new statement of support of the President is offered by someone.

"There will be a lot of soul searching," host Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California told a reporter when asked about the prospect of such a declaration. Brown reserved any other comment on the bombing policy move.

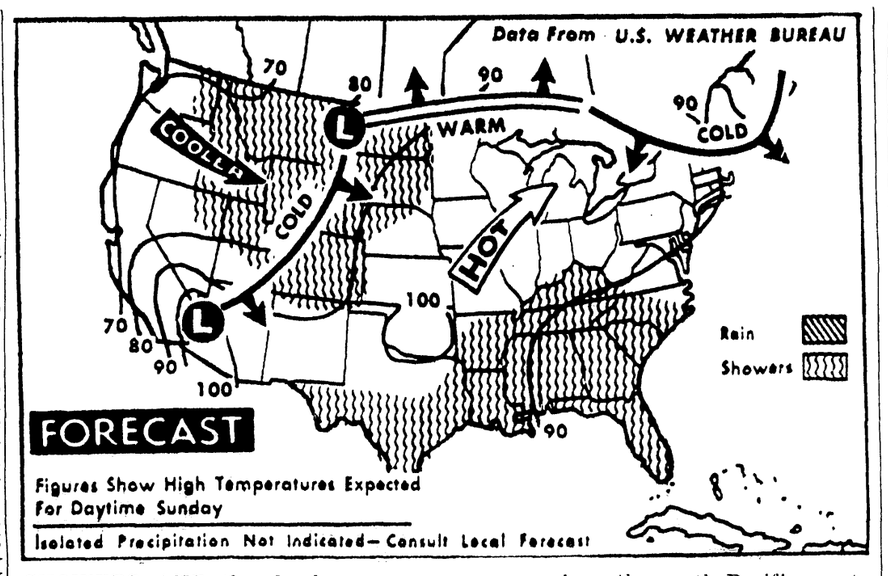
The agenda for this election year conference makes no mention of the Viet Nam conflict. Opening formally Tuesday, it deals instead with such topics as the "integrity of American society," federal state local relations and law enforcement.

Both Reed and Brown said there was no real expectation that President Johnson will appear at this year's conference. But there was an informal understanding that Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, who speaks at the national convention of the NAACP here Wednesday, will also address the governors' conference.

"I hope the President does come," said Reed, "but at the moment it looks unlikely."

The newly renominated Maine governor said Johnson's decision to knock out oil installations close to the North Viet Nam capital and the port city of Haiphong was a "reasonable policy change," as long as it remained restricted to military targets.

"If this hastens the end of the war, I'm for it," Reed said. He added that he believes that a majority of Maine's voters feel that the U.S. commitment in South Viet Nam should be backed by such action.



SHOWERS AND thundershowers are forecast for the northern Plains, northern and central Plateau, southern Texas, the Gulf coast and the Southeast today. The rest of the nation will have clear to partly cloudy skies. It will be warmer along the north Pacific coast, cooler in the Great Basin, central Rockies and northern New England, with little change elsewhere. (AP Wirephoto Map)

South Vietnamese Need Much More Pacification

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson has been told by a top aide that the South Vietnamese "still have a long way to go in truly pacifying the countryside." Johnson was urged to increase American support of the effort.

Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers made public Saturday excerpts from a report submitted to Johnson by Robert Komer, his special assistant charged with keeping tabs on moves by the Saigon government to promote social and economic reforms.

Komer, who returned from Saigon Wednesday, generally was enthusiastic about progress that has been made but said "even this is not enough." Komer concluded:

"We should be helpful and realists. Our Vietnamese allies, with our support, still have a long way to go in truly pacifying the countryside, ending the Viet Cong terror and providing Viet Nam's war-ravaged people with security and a better life."

The Saigon government, he reported, plans to step up its civic action program.

He also said Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and Deputy Ambassador William Porter "join me in recommending further actions to strengthen our own support of this program." He said these recommendations would be forwarded to Johnson "in the days and weeks ahead."

Komer said the June 18 devaluation of South Viet Nam's currency "should help to contain inflation." Although some price increases followed, he said, "prices should soon level off."

On Johnson's orders, Komer said, he assured the Saigon government that if Congress agrees, "we would continue to back it up with the high level of economic aid needed to offset the impact of war."

Komer said "there is visible evidence of progress in fisheries and agriculture." He said the country's fish catch, with the help of American foreign aid supplies, increased from 165,000 tons in 1963 to 368,000 tons last year.

"Some 66,000 acres were improved by irrigation and water control in 1965 alone, to bring the amount of newly irrigated land to 550,000 acres," he told Johnson.

Komer cited "as one key indicator of the impact of our military and civil efforts on Viet Cong morale" the results of an effort to encourage defection from the Communist ranks.

"In 1965 there were over 11,000 Viet Cong defectors," he said. "There have been about 10,000 in the first half of 1966 alone."

MRS. JACK C. FRYDAY

Marcia Service, Jack Fryday Wedding Held In Home Setting

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Siddons S. Service, 1001 Speed Ave., was scene of the ceremony Saturday, July 2 in which their daughter, Miss Marcia Lee Service became the bride of Jack C. Fryday, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Fryday, 1017 Park Ave.

Rev. Fred S. Flurry performed the double ring vows at 2:30 p.m. Forming an improvised altar against a background of double louvered doors was a sunburst arrangement of white gladioli, stock, agapanthus and pompon chrysanthemums in a large cathedral urn mounted on a pedestal.

For her wedding the bride wore an original model of ivory silk, with overlay bodice of imported lace on net, featuring a jewel neckline and elbow length sleeves. The bell-shaped skirt was in afternoon length. A circlet of matching ivory silk with back bow held her short veil of ivory illusion. She carried a nosegay of white miniature roses and stephanotis with variegated ivy set in a background of lace and satin ribbon.

Miss Sarah Siddons Service, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a two-piece ensemble of moss green silk comprising a sheath and jacket with draped neckline. Her shoes were of matching shade and she carried a nosegay of May Day roses with touches of rose foliage and satin ribbons.

Ralph Fryday served as best man for his brother.

Mrs. Service was wearing for her daughter's wedding a gown of dusty rose chiffon over crepe styled with bateau neckline and overdrape at the back hipline. Her corsage was of white cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Fryday, mother of the groom, chose a powder blue ensemble with matching lace overblouse and a corsage of white cymbidium orchids.

RECEPTION

Mr. and Mrs. Service were hosts at a reception from 3:30 until 5:30 p.m. when they entertained at Bayou DeSiard Country Club.

Magnolia blossoms in a cupid epergne were used in the entrance hall where guests were greeted by Mrs. Briscoe Trousdale Jr., Mrs. Raymond Talley, Mrs. Marcus Mapp and Mrs. Calvin Folds. A duplicate of the arrangement for the home ceremony formed a background for the receiving line.

The refreshment table, covered with a white organdy cloth, was centered with a silver and crystal epergne holding twin tapers and an arrangement of all white stock, roses, asters and chrysanthemums. The table was garlanded with boxwood roping. A Madeira cutwork cloth covered the bride's table which held the wedding cake, encircled by garlands of boxwood and summer blossoms. A miniature of the bride's bouquet crested the cake which was served by Mrs. Grayson Guthrie, Mrs. Doyle Hamilton, Mrs. Thomas Houghton, Mrs. Fred Kelso, Mrs. Ed Lohan, Mrs. Jack C. Campbell, Mrs. Jesse McDonald and Mrs. John Ferguson.

Guests registered at a table covered with an organdy and lace cloth and decorated by a three branch silver candelabra with a garland of foliage and white blossoms. Sitting at the guest book were Mrs. Howard Sheppard, Mrs. T. J. Mankin, Mrs. Harry Frazer and Mrs. William H. McKelvey.

Groom's cake, decorated with green grapes and foliage, was served from a glass top table on the porch of the club, by Miss Betty Jean Campbell, Mrs. Ed Holloway, Miss Nancy Beckman and Mrs. William Brodie.

Punch was served by Mrs. William Halonen, Mrs. John Salisbury, Mrs. E. E. Latham and Mrs. Harry Bell and presiding at the coffee service were Mrs. Richard Bright, Mrs. I. C. Davis, Mrs. Travis Brown and Mrs. George Rorex.

For their wedding trip to Florida the bride changed into a powder blue crepe dress with matching accessories, with which she wore her mother's corsage. The couple will be at home in Houston, Texas where Mr. Fryday is associated with the NASA program. The bride is a senior at Louisiana State University where she is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. Mr. Fryday was graduated from Northeast Louisiana State College and received a master's degree from Louisiana Tech.

ENGAGEMENT of Miss Mary Louise Schempf, daughter of Mrs. Martin Schempf, 304 Medorah Drive and the late Mr. Schempf, to Harold Donald Beacht, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hendrix, 135 Fairlane, West Monroe, is announced by her mother. The wedding will take place at 7:30 p.m. August 18 in Trinity Lutheran Church, 1301 Oliver Road with Rev. Arthur Betz officiating. Miss Schempf is a student at a local beauty school. Mr. Beacht, a graduate of Ouachita high school, has just completed four years with the U.S.A.F. and is employed by a local firm.

Miss Zoe Diana White Wed In Florida Church Ceremony

In a candlelight ceremony in All Saints Episcopal church, Fort Lauderdale, Florida, Miss Zoe Diana White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. White III of Monroe, became the bride of Douglas Stokes Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cook Jr. of Fort Lauderdale and Freeport, Grand Bahama Islands.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Grace at 5 p.m. June 21. White tapers in four brass candelabra and two tall urns of white blossoms formed a setting at the altar.

Mr. White gave his daughter in marriage. The bride wore a floor length sheath gown of white silk organza, with an aisle wide train of silk organza billowing from the back waistline. The bodice of peau de ange lace was designed with a portrait neckline and Dior length sleeves. Her short bouffant veil of English silk illusion fell from a crown of lace and pearls. She carried a prayer book topped with a white orchid surrounded by cascades of white roses and stephanotis.

Miss Pamela A. White, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Sally Cook, sister of the groom and Miss Toni Cerniglia, Miami, Fla. Their floor length gowns of maize chiffon featured bodices of lace with bracelet length sleeves and flowing lace panels. They wore matching Dior bows and carried bouquets of yellow tea roses.

Mr. Cook served his son as best man and groomsmen were Ed Stewart of Fort Lauderdale and Charles Burns of Freeport. Ushers were Randolph and Jesse White, brothers of the bride.

For the occasion Mrs. White wore a pink chiffon gown with matching accessories and an orchid corsage. The groom's mother selected a beige chiffon model with an orchid corsage. Mrs. J. O. Willett, Monroe, grandmother of the bride, was wearing a dress of mauve pink chiffon in afternoon length with accessories to match and an orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Sheraton Hotel. A mass arrangement of summer blossoms in yellow and white centered the bride's table, around which were placed the bridesmaids' bouquets. The tiered wedding cake was served from one end of the table with the punch bowl opposite.

When the couple left for a wedding trip en route to Grand Forks, North Dakota, where they will be at home the bride was wearing a beige linen dress with orange trim and beige accessories. The bride is a graduate of the Academy of the Assumption in Miami, Florida.

Mr. Cook was graduated from Kemper Military Academy and the University of Oklahoma. He is presently with the United States Air Force, stationed at Grand Forks.

MISS LINDA KAY TRUETT

Announcement Tea Reveals Engagement Of Linda Truett

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Truett, 1100 Cole Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Linda Kay to John Michael Maynard, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Maynard, 1403 Emerson.

Groomsmen-ushers will include James Ernest Truett, brother of the bride-elect; James Patrick Maynard, brother of the future groom; Mike Despenza, Frank Crouch, and Larry Dalton and Randy Broxson, both of Beaumont.

Miss Truett, who attended Northwestern State College, is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jefferson Fitch of Oak Ridge and the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Truett, Olla, Ark.

Mr. Maynard was graduated from Lamar State College in Beaumont, and is presently attending Louisiana Tech majoring in industrial engineering. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Maynard of Nacogodoches, Texas and the late Dr. and Mrs. James M. Rogers of Center, Texas.

MRS. BOBBY CHARLES FEAZEL

Feazel-Letterman Nuptials Performed By Candlelight

Fan shaped arrangements of white gladioli on tall white columns against a background of southern smilax and cathedral tapers in wrought iron candelabra formed a setting in New Chapel Hill Baptist Church for the wedding Friday, July 1 of Miss Frances Lee Letterman and Bobby Charles Feazel.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William L. Letterman and Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Feazel, all of West Monroe.

Rev. A. Calvin Cantrell performed the double ring vows at 7:30 p.m. with appropriate wedding music provided by Mrs. Larry Parker, organist and Miss Martha Rose Rutledge.

Candles were lighted by Miss Becky Anding and Miss Charlotte Feazel and Miss Windi McEnery, niece of the groom, acted as flower girl.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown comprised a skirt of peau de soie and bodice of Chantilly lace featuring long tapered sleeves and scalloped neckline. The back waist was defined by a bow of peau. Her triple tiered veil of illusion fell from a crown of pearls and she carried a white Bible crested with a white orchid and several varieties of white flowers.

Miss Patricia Ann Guraedy, maid of honor, wore a dress of pink brocade with matching accessories. Her headpiece was a full blown rose of matching peau de soie with bouffant tulle veil attached. Also dressed in pink brocade gowns with matching accessories were Mrs. Ted McEnery, sister of the groom, as matron of honor and bridesmaids, Miss Claudia Roberts, Miss Sandra Lutrick, and junior bridesmaid, Miss Cathy Letterman, sister of the bride. Their headpieces were pink peau de soie roses set on bows attached to bouffant veils. All bouquets were pink pompons in a cascade design accented with pink babies breath.

Mr. Feazel served his son as best man. Groomsmen-ushers were Gerald Griggs, Barry Feazel, cousin of the groom; Johnny Williams and Ted McEnery. Ring bearer was Jerry Glen Griggs Jr., cousin of the groom.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a pink boucle crepe suit with white accessories and an orchid corsage. The groom's mother wore a blue raw silk A-line dress with lace trimmed bodice, bone lizard accessories and a whimsey headpiece. Her corsage was also an orchid.

Miss Linda Horn presided at the guest book in the church foyer and Mrs. Frederick S. Roberts was in charge of the book at the reception in the social room of the church.

A mass arrangement of pink and white summer flowers in a cherub container flanked by white tapers in cherub candle holders centered the bride's table which was covered with an imported satin embossed cloth. Mrs. J. M. Feazel and Mrs. Andrew A. Plaia served the wedding cake and alternating at the punch bowl were Mrs. Charles Guraedy and Mrs. Donnie Letterman.

Tea girls were Misses Janice Feazel, Becky Anding and Charlotte Feazel and presenting rice bags to the guests was Miss Dina Anding.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip the bride was wearing an off white suit of boucle knit, trimmed with cream lace and gold buttons. Her accessories were beige. The couple will be at home in Houma, where Mr. Feazel is employed. A graduate of West Monroe high school the bride is a junior at Northeast Louisiana State College and will continue her education at Nicholls State College in Thibodaux. Mr. Feazel also graduated from West Monroe high school and graduated in January from Louisiana Tech with a degree in civil engineering.

MRS. CHARLES JASPER ARCHIBALD

Judy Faye Clark Becomes Bride Of Charles Archibald

Memorial Methodist Church was scene of the candlelight ceremony Friday, July 1 which united in marriage Miss Judy Faye Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ovid Arnold Clark, Willow Drive, in Town and Country, and Charles Jasper Archibald, 1706 Shannon, Monroe. He is the son of Earnest J. Archibald and the late Mrs. Archibald of Archibald.

A mass arrangement of white gladioli, stock and majestic daisies was placed on the altar beneath the cross, illuminated by cathedral candles in black wrought iron candelabra, entwined with English ivy. A white prie dieu completed the setting.

Mrs. Harvey W. Nelson, organist and Mrs. Estelle Schulze Sanders, soloist, presented a program of nuptial selections preceding the double ring ceremony performed by Rev. Ira Flowers at 7:30 p.m.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage the bride was wearing a gown of imported silk organza featuring a fitted bodice, scalloped neckline and long petal point sleeves accented at the wrist with Alencon lace. Appliques of the lace encrusted with pearls embellished the bodice and the bell skirt with criss cross front fell into a chapel train of the organza also embellished with lace appliques. A pillbox of lace and pearls held her veil of English illusion. She wore a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom, and carried a bouquet of white roses, ivy and a removable white orchid, atop a white Bible.

Mrs. Richard Abraham, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and Miss Janet Beard, maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Loretta Cader, Yazoo City, Miss., and Miss Susan Moore, Montgomery, Ala., cousins of the bride. They wore identical bell-shaped gowns of ice blue peau de soie in floor length with open crown picture hats of matching peau. Their bouquets of Majestic and Springtime daisies with ivy were in semi-crescent design.

Junior bridesmaids, Miss Kathy Clark, sister of the bride and Miss Suanne Archibald, cousin of the groom, wore floor length gowns of ice blue peau de soie with gathered skirts and velvet sashes and hair ribbons. They carried miniature replicas of the bridesmaids' bouquets.

Leonard B. Archibald attended his cousin as best man and groomsmen-ushers were Richard D. Abraham, John W. James, Monroe; James E. Hendrix, Mangham; Stuart Campbell, San Angelo, Texas and Ted McKay, Fort Smith, Ark. Bob and Jim Archibald, cousins of the groom, were ring bearer and train bearer.

For the occasion Mrs. Clark selected a sheath of aqua lace embroidered with pearls and crystals, featuring a side drape of aqua organza. She wore matching accessories and a corsage of yellow cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Ruby Peaster, grandmother of the bride, wore a blue silk linen ensemble with a corsage of yellow cymbidium orchids.

The bride's parents were hosts for a reception following the ceremony in the social room of the church. A round table covered with white tulle over blue taffeta and appointed with silver candelabra held the tiered wedding cake. The punch table was covered with a cutwork cloth and centered with an arrangement of stock, candytuft and daisies.

Mrs. Harry Moore, Montgomery, Ala., and Mrs. Hugh Rushbrook of Thornton, Miss., served the cake and presiding at the punch bowls were Mrs. Robert Cader, aunt of the bride, Yazoo City, Miss., and Mrs. Leonard Archibald of Archibald. Miss Annie Bea Hughes of Rayville, presided at the guest book and tea girls were Misses Ina Kay Rushbrook, Thornton, Miss., Jacqueline Mitzner of Atlanta, Ga., Rosemary Mallet and Helen Patterson of Monroe. Harry Moore and Bob Archibald presented rice bags to the guests.

When the couple left for a wedding trip to Dallas, Texas the bride was wearing a blue silk linen suit with bone reptile accessories and an orchid corsage. They will be at home in Monroe. The bride is a senior at Northeast majoring in home economics education, and is a member of Phi Mu. Mr. Archibald received his B. S. and master's degrees in business administration from Northeast. He is a member of Pi Sigma Epsilon professional sales management fraternity.

FORTHCOMING MARRIAGE of Miss Lana Cloydette Campbell and James Marshall Butler is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Campbell, 100 Pear, West Monroe. He is the son of Mrs. Verta Mae Butler, Wells Road, West Monroe, and James H. Butler, also of West Monroe. The wedding will take place at 7:30 p.m. July 28 in the home of the bride's parents with Rev. James B. White, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, officiating.

LUXURY CARPET

A basic function of carpet padding is to provide comfort underfoot. That is why latex foam carpet paddings are becoming so popular — nothing feels more luxurious under the carpet. Even low pile carpets achieve a "walking on air" feel from a latex foam pad.

Jill Marx, Michael Kantrow Wed In Temple B'Nai Israel

Miss Jill Ann Marx, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Sackman Marx, 2005 Stuart, Monroe, became the bride of Michael Jay Kantrow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Kantrow of Baton Rouge, in a candlelight ceremony Sunday, June 26 in Temple B'Nai Israel.

Rabbi Sylvin Wolf performed the double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m. with Mrs. Eloise Stanhope as organist.

The altar was centered with a nine branch candle tree which held lighted tapers and a mass arrangement of white gladioli, stock, agapanthus, carnations and chrysanthemums. Spiral candelabra were at either side and cathedral candelabra were placed in plateaus highlighting the altar. All were garlanded with Southern smilax. White satin ribbons and foliage marked family pews.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of white peau de soie, featuring a bateau neckline and short bell sleeves, embroidered in pearls and crystal beads. The A-line skirt joined the fitted bodice at an empire waistline, accented by a back bow from which the full chapel train was released. Her veil of silk illusion was held in place by a crown of pearled and lace points. She carried a family heirloom prayer book, crested with a bouquet of stephanotis blossoms and white bridal roses centered by a white cattleya orchid.

Miss Janet Moses, Monroe, was maid of honor and Mrs. Byron Kantrow Jr., Baton Rouge, matron of honor. Bridesmaid was Miss Sally Ensminger, Monroe and junior bridesmaids were Miss Linda Marx, Palos Verdes, Calif., cousin of the bride and Miss Barbara Marx, sister of the bride. They wore two tone empire effect linen gowns in floor length with kabuki sleeves, featuring eased sheath skirts of green and bodices of mimosa pink. Flowered ribbon highlighted the empire waistline. Their headpieces were green linen bows and they carried bouquets of large duchess roses in pink with long green velvet stems.

Lee Kantrow, Baton Rouge attended his brother as best man and groomsmen were Byron Kantrow Jr., also his brother; Sidney M. Blitzer Jr., Baton Rouge, his cousin; Joe E. Marx III, cousin of the bride and Paul Marx, her brother. Candlelighters were Gary Marx, Monroe and Howard Marx Jr., Palos Verdes, Calif., both cousins of the bride.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Mrs. Marx, mother of the bride, received her guests wearing a full length gown of mint green silk crepe, fashioned with shirred sleeveless bodice and slim skirt with matching draped jacket. Her corsage was of white Japhet orchids. Mrs. Kantrow wore a formal gown of pistachio silk crepe in "Eugenie" styling. The illusion bodice was encrusted with chalk beads, white paillettes and rhinestones, and her corsage was also of white Japhet orchids.

Centering the buffet table from which guests were served, was a huge arrangement in pyramid style, of white stock, gladioli, lily of the Nile, white roses, carnations and pompons. In the center of the pyramid was a five branch silver candelabra holding tall white tapers. The table was garlanded with boxwood roping. A white organdy and lace cloth covered the bride's table with the white agapanthus encircling the cake. Miss Ronnie Shushan of New Orleans served the cake and presiding at the guest book was Miss Phyllis Freeman.

Guests registered at a small table adorned with a five branch silver candelabra garlanded with roses and chrysanthemums. Conversational areas on the glassed - in porch were decorated with six branch candelabra holding green votive candles and white blossoms. Rice bags were presented guests by Miss Linda Kaplan and Miss Rosyln Kaplan, Alexandria.

After a wedding trip to Nassau the couple will be at home in Baton Rouge. For going away the bride wore a silk linen costume in shades of apricot and sand beige, comprising an empire dress with A - line skirt and new length "pea" jacket in double breasted style. Her corsage with a white orchid.

Mrs. Kantrow was graduated from Neville high school and attended Newcomb College and Northeast Louisiana State College. She is a member of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority. Mr. Kantrow was graduated from University high school in Baton Rouge and from Tulane University. His fraternity is Zeta Beta Tau.

A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merril advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peaches-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion - beautifying cold water smooth on a little tropical oil of Olay. This oil is rather scarce and expensive but your drug store should be able to get you a small supply.

Tent Dresses Sweep Onto Fashion Scene

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
AP Fashion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Are aisles wide enough for the glamorous sweep women will make in their tent coats and dresses next season?

Are their figures slim enough for slide-and-glide silhouettes, or so called sweater dresses that do almost as much for a girl as Lana Turner's sweaters did for her?

Are masculine egos strong enough to tolerate the new "her" trouser suits that match his? Or are husbands' wallets fat enough to accommodate the glittering season of jewel-encrusted dresses coming up?

Yes or no, some of these styles are already in packing boxes destined eventually for women's wardrobes across the nation. Examples have been saved out, however, to be previewed here this week by more than 200 newspaper, radio and television style reporters.

The first of two fashion press weeks, the New York Couture Group' 47th semi-annual review of styles, opens with a sparkling diamond dinner Tuesday. Its Sunday closing date, July 10, overlaps with the beginning of a four-day program of style previews presented by the American Designers Group and arranged by Eleanor Lambert.

Modish men in the American version of mod fashions, cute tots in mite-sized clothes like their mothers wear, fabulous furs, goofy jewelry, the latest in face paint and topnotch millinery will also be a part of the two programs.

But each group will emphasize the changes this year in the evolution, and sometimes revolution, of women's apparel.

For better or for worse, the fashion reporters will record these specific tends.

The tent — The capacious shape which promises to make a world of women look on the verge of a population explosion. Designers are pitching tents two ways: they are narrow at the shoulder and huge at the hemline, or they are turned upside down, beginning slim at the knees and arriving full blown at the shoulders and sleeves.

The cover up — This sounds paradoxical, too, considering the number of transparent dresses over form-fitting ones still on the scene. But this term refers to leather boots that fit like gloves and wild and woolly stockings under thigh high shifts that mix or match the leggy jazz.

Pants suits — Yes, herringbone wool jackets complete with lapels have their own creased trousers to match, just like the costumes of the man of the house.

And when the pants mad miss wants to go dancing, she slips into her black sequinned trousers with matching jacket, like a show girl about to break into a soft shoe.

Evening wear — the spectacular floor length ball gown bouncing with feathers or glittering with jeweled embroidery still has its place.

The status symbol dress this year, however, is a short gown, saturated with gems from stem to stern, and seemingly weighing a ton.

If it appears to cost a fortune, it is only because it does.

West Monroe Jaycee Jaynes Schedule Bi-Monthly Meets

A program of work for the ensuing quarter was discussed at a meeting of the West Monroe Jaycee Jaynes Monday night in the First National Bank Social room.

Miss LaLuce Thompson, home service representative for Louiana Power and Light Co., gave a talk on "The Value of Milk," in conjunction with June Dairy Month.

During the business session conducted by the incoming president, Mrs. John Cordaro, several new chairman were named and it was decided to hold two meetings a month, on the second and last Mondays. The next meeting will be held July 11.

Refreshments were served at conclusion of the evening to Mrs. Ronnie Bayles, Mrs. Roscoe Holcomb, Mrs. Gene Schempf, Mrs. Ray Jones, Mrs. Cordaro, Mrs. Ray Calloway, Mrs. Jimmy Wilson, Mrs. Dan Doughty, Mrs. Bill Hoover, Mrs. Robert Dutschke and Mrs. Jimmy Burk.

Use Of Glass Bottles Grows

NEW YORK (AP) — The world's first glass bottles were manufactured in Egypt about 3,500 years ago. Those bottles, used to hold rare perfumes and other treasured items, are museum pieces today. But the modern versions of these ancient treasures are used today by the billions to package everyday household items.

The Glass Container Manufacturers Institute reports that some 28 billion bottles and jars were produced in 1965 for consumer products. That was more than double the number just 15 years ago. Allowing for the fact that many bottles, such as those for beer, milk and soft drinks, are used over and over again. It is calculated that U. S. housewives make more than 70 billion purchases a year of glass-packed items.

Carpenter-Tolbird Wedding Is Double Ring Ceremony

Vows uniting in marriage Miss Linda Joan Tolbird, Monroe and Philip Benson Carpenter of Bastrop, were solemnized Thursday, June 30 in Bethel Baptist Church at 7 p.m. The bride is the daughter of Donald Graves Tolbird of West Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas Carpenter of Bastrop.

The Rev. P. Lionell Crowell performed the double ring ceremony before an altar banked with urns of white gladioli and stock. Seven branched candelabra holding white tapers were placed against a background of greenery.

Wayne Green, organist, played traditional wedding marches and accompanied the soloist, Rev. B. K. Miller.

Wearing a gown of ivory silk peau de soie enhanced with appliques of Alencon lace and clusters of seed pearls, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The skirt terminated in a sweeping chapel train. Her veil of illusion, overlaid with a lace mantilla, also extended the length of the train, and was held in place by a satin wedding ring. She carried a bouquet of lily of the valley, stephanotis blossoms and a white cattleya orchid.

Attending the bride were Miss Louise Gray, Minden, maid of honor; Mrs. Dennis L. Joseph, Monroe, matron of honor and bridesmaids, Miss Deanna Furlow, West Monroe and Mrs. Charles M. Wade, Monroe. Their identical sleeveless gowns of pale pink crepe in floor length were fashioned on princess lines, appliqued around the neckline with pink lace daisies. Self fabric bows defined the waistline. Their headpieces were large crushed self fabric bows attached to pink tulle veils. Each carried a long stemmed pink rose tied with pink satin ribbon.

Miss Rosemary Carpenter, sister of the groom and Miss Karen Sue Tolbird, sister of the bride, served as candlelighters. They wore dresses identical to those of the other attendants, in afternoon length, with wrist corsages of pink roses.

Miss Shawn Diana Greer, West Monroe was flower girl and wore a floor length frock of pale pink crepe in empire style, accented with pink velvet ribbon and lace appliques of daisies. She carried a basket of pink roses and white bridal flowers.

Serving as best man was Thomas Guy Parker of Mer Rouge. Groomsmen were E. L. Lewis, Bastrop; Jackson Duggins and Charles M. Wade, Monroe and ushers were Dennis L. Joseph, Monroe and Jack Fava, Huntsville, Ala.

For the occasion Mrs. Carpenter, mother of the groom, was wearing a dress and jacket costume of coral Italian silk with bodice appliqued in seed pearls and crystals. Her hat and other accessories were of matching coral and she wore a green orchid corsage.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the Holiday Inn. The bride's table, covered with a white organdy cloth, and garlands of satin streamers was centered with a silver epergne holding white gladioli, stock and brides roses. Also covered in white organdy, the refreshment table held a decorated silver punch bowl and matching candelabra with lighted tapers. A round table draped in a white organdy cloth held the tiered wedding cake which was served by Mrs. Joseph Amman and Mrs. T. P. Kelly, aunts of the groom. Alternating at the punch bowl were Mrs. Donald Duffey and Mrs. J. V. Futch. Mrs. Ed Callier and Mrs. John N. Jones, also aunts of the groom, presided at the guest book.

Tea girls were Miss Marcy Taylor, Miss Ann Tolbird, cousin of the bride and Miss Marge Pettyjohn.

After a wedding trip to Hot Springs, Ark., the couple will reside temporarily in Monroe where Mr. Carpenter will graduate in August from Northeast Louisiana State College with a degree in business administration. He is immediate past president of his fraternity Kappa Alpha Order. The bride will be a senior in the fall at Northeast where she is a member of Phi Beta Speech and Music fraternity.

For going away the bride wore a sheath of red and white stripe with a white linen coat, stitched in red, with white accessories and a white straw hat, trimmed in red. Her corsage was a cattleya orchid.

Designer Believes Hat An Adventure

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

James Wedge is devoted to reforming the image of English hats, an image which has always been frankly awful.

The 28 - year - old Londoner bravely took up a dead cause, as the young girls regarded hats as a badge of middle age.

Wedge has gotten rid of the "flower pots," done knitted helmets and spy thriller caps that appeal to the young. Wedge believes a hat should be an adventure.

Also a graduate of Monticello high school, Mr. Burgess is currently attending Northeast Louisiana State College.

Virginia Kay Gilliland Is Fiancee Of John N. Thomas

...On Dit...

by Marillyn Taylor

This weekend we celebrate that most American of holidays, the Glorious Fourth. The very words "July the Fourth" connote hot weather, brass bands, flags and bunting, stirring oratory. And, on the social side, picnics, boating parties, barbecues, and such all-American outdoor type activities.

Patriotic motifs make for a gala luncheon table, too, as evidenced at the twin parties given Thursday and Friday at the Paragon by MYRTLE CARTER. A long runner of red, white, and blue extended the length of the table. Red carnations, blue agapantha, and white stock formed the centerpiece. Places were marked with white cards ornamented with tiny American flags. Sixteen attended the party on Thursday; twelve, on Friday.

Several parties this week have honored out of town visitors. MARY LEE LaCOUR of Opelousas was named guest of honor at a luncheon given by VICKY HILL Thursday at Bayou DeSiard country club. Mary Lee, who will enter Gulfpark College as a freshman this fall, is here with her grandmother, MRS. A. S. TIDWELL. Ten guests of the college set were invited to the party. A bouquet of pink rosebuds centered the table. The menu included fresh fruit cup, chicken salad in tomato shells, and fresh peach parfait.

Several members of the young married set, "back home" this summer, enjoyed a reunion visit Tuesday afternoon when DIANE WEST HERRINGTON entertained complimentary to GAY HARGROVE JOYCE. Colorful Mexican paper flowers in a brass bowl centered the refreshment table, and a bouquet of daisies were noted on a side table . . . . Others here for this party included KATIE TRIMBLE THEUS, home from Baton Rouge; and LINDA LADNER LEAKE, who now lives in St. Francisville.

Gay who was here with her parents, VIRGINIA and HANK HARGROVE, for about two weeks, left for home in Yuma, Arizona, on Thursday . . . . Prior to her departure, her grandmother, BELLE HUSTED complimented her Wednesday with a luncheon at her home on Emerson street. Ten guests were seated at a table decorated with roses in varying shades of yellow and orange. Another visitor at this party was ANN LaGRANGE of Lake Charles, who was the guest of NANCY CROSSLAND this week.

Belle's meal was beautiful as well as delicious: for the first course, a circle of cantaloupe filled with fresh pineapple and dark cherries; chicken loaf with mushrooms on the plate with pickled beans and apple rings; and for dessert, lemon angel pie.

BETTY and JIMMY MOORE entertained two different groups for boatrides this week. Last weekend Betty's mother, MARGARET MIDDLETON, had as her guests her cousins, ORA MAY BRIGHT of Jackson, Miss.; and EVELYN BARBOUR of Vicksburg. The Moores invited a group of about sixteen of their contemporaries for a ride upriver Saturday at the dusk-dark hour, with supper served later.

On Thursday, Betty and Jimmy, assisted by their son JAMES, complimented MARY LOU MYATT and SALLY BREARD with a boatride. The girls, who will be entering college this fall, are leaving soon for a tour of Europe. Forty-five members of the college set attended. Fried chicken supper was served after dark upriver.

It's always a pleasure to "welcome home" former Monroyans. Last weekend CINDY and BENTON WAKEFIELD, with their children, WAKE and WALTON, were here for a few days at the Admiral Benbow. The Wakefields, who lived in Monroe over ten years, now make their home in Munster, Indiana. . . . . On Friday, MARGARET LAND complimented Cindy with a luncheon in the Garden room at Bayou DeSiard country club. A cutglass compote holding blue hydrangeas, hosta, and ivy centered the table for eight.

It's an annual family weekend for LOUISE and ED SEYMOUR; ANNA CLAIRE and ED SEYMOUR JR., and their children, CLAIRE, LOUISE, and EDWARD; and PRENT SEYMOUR. They are guests of Anna Claire's parents, AVONIA and RUPERT CAMPBELL of Shreveport at their camp on Lake Bisteneau. Also in the party are ELLEN FERGUSON, and FRANCESCA OAKLEY of Monroe; KAY and CHIP CAMPBELL of Shreveport. They went over yesterday, plan to return home Tuesday.

Another annual affair is the Fourth of July house-party at the home of JEWEL RIVERS on Lake Hamilton near Hot Springs, Ark. Jewel's guests this weekend are MAMIE DAVIS, ALLYNE and FRED PETTY of Monroe; the W. G. BURTS of Kingston Plantation near Shreveport.

Home again are MARY LEE and RALPH KING and their children, ANN and MARY WINSTON, who went to Six Flags over Texas last weekend. They were guests at the Inn of the Six Flags, and report a fabulous time for all ages.

Members of Satellite Riding club enjoyed an all day party Friday at the home of the J. W. PERRYS at Perryville. The schedule included an early morning ride through the countryside, followed by a swim in the lake before lunch. The picnic lunch included fried chicken, potato salad, and assorted sandwiches, with bottled drinks and cookies. About thirty-five attended.

An old fashioned barbecue is planned tomorrow evening for members of Bayou DeSiard country club. Events get underway in the late afternoon, with swimming competitions for younger club members. Supper will be served at poolside beginning at six p.m.

July is shaping up to be a full month for lovers of the musical theater, with several events on tap in the next few weeks. "Maggie's Magic Teapot," first musical for children ever to be presented by a local group, opens a week from Friday at Strauss Playhouse. This production is sponsored jointly by Little Theater of Monroe and Northeast Louisiana State college. The cast includes JEANNIE TAYLOR in the title role of Maggie; WAYNE GREER, GEORGE BRIAN, KERRY MURPHY, GEORGE STEWART, KEN GARRISON, and MURRAY BURFFORD. The show promises to be a treat for all ages, with songs, dances, and magical effects. It will be presented at three matinee performances, at 2:30 Friday through Sunday, July 15-17.

"Bells Are Ringing" will be seen at air - conditioned Neville auditorium, Saturday evening, July 16, at 8 p.m. This, a profession presentation by Trio Productions of Houston, will be seen at one performance only. It is under the auspices of Junior Charity League of Monroe, Inc., and proceeds will go toward the League's many local charities.

July Fourth weekend is indeed an ideal time to bring up "The Music Man," scheduled for late July at Strauss Playhouse. This rollicking musical is a Valentine to mid-America; a picture of pre-World-War-I Iowa. Settings, costumes, and music evoke brass bands in the park, country fairs, and dances at the armory . . . . it is, in short, an ideal selection for a summer community musical. Long time Little Theater favorite V. P. DALRYMPLE will be seen in the title role, with MARILYN LEWIS as Marian the Librarian.

Tomorrow marks our nation's birthday, the 190th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. Members of Lt. Joseph Bowmar society, Children of the American Revolution, remind us to celebrate "Happy Birthday, USA," by flying our American flags.

Today, in lieu of a poem, let us quote from the document that started it all:

"When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

Doublefaced Wool New Bonded Process

Technological exploration and development are extending the natural potentials of wool, the American Wool Council reports.

For fall, a new bonding process permits the creation of doublefaced wool fabrics of a sort that cannot be produced by rather loose hopsack, for example, in a gray or neutral tone can be bonded to a bright, tightly-woven, crisp gabardine.

MR. AND MRS. MANUEL G. CANALES

Blue, White Theme Featured At Canales-Sturgeon Wedding

A blue and white color theme was reflected in the background setting and the bridal party's gowns for the wedding of Miss Marianna Sturgeon and Manuel G. Canales, which was solemnized Saturday, June 25 in Jackson Street Church of Christ.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Sturgeon, 116 Maple and Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Canales, 510 McKinley Ave., all of Monroe.

The double ring ceremony was performed at 8 p.m. by the minister, Billy Helms before an arch of magnolia foliage and white flower clusters. Flanking the arch were seven - branch candelabra and baskets of white gladioli, tied with blue ribbon.

Nuptial music was provided by Kenny Smith and Mrs. Ronnie Stevens, organists and soloist was Ronnie Stevens.

Mr. Sturgeon gave his daughter in marriage. The bride's gown was of traditional design in summer sheer and Chantilly lace. The Sabrina neckline was outlined with lace and seed pearl details. and the bouffant skirt was of semi - redingote design with banded lace appliques, and terminated in a chapel train. Her veil of silk illusion fell fingertip length from a bridal wreath of orange blossoms and snow flowers. She carried a cascade of feathered carnation and ivy with lily of the valley, which comprised a removable corsage.

Wearing floor length sheath dresses of powder blue peau de soie, featuring lace bodices, were the bride's attendants, Mrs. David Sprague, matron of honor; Mrs. Leslie Sturgeon, Mrs. Gaston Alvarez and Miss M'Lou Smith, bridesmaids. Their headpieces were blue crowns with short blue veils and they wore matching slippers.

Junior bridesmaid was Miss Lilia Canales, who wore a short frock of powder blue with matching veil and white shoes. All attendants carried bouquets of white pompons with blue ribbon streamers.

Regulo Garza served as best man and groomsmen were Leslie Sturgeon, Benny Canales and Gilbert Garza. Junior groomsman was George Canales and ushers were Lionel Canales Jr. and Gaston Alvarez.

For the occasion Mrs. Sturgeon wore a powder blue dress with white accessories and a corsage of white chrysanthemums with blue ribbon. The groom's mother selected a rose colored suit with beige accessories and a corsage of chrysanthmums tied with rose ribbons.

At the reception which followed in the social room of the church the bouquets of the brides and her attendants formed the central decor for the refreshment table which was covered with a white cutwork cloth. At opposite ends of the table were the tiered wedding cake adorned with blue bells and roses, and the crystal bowl of blue punch.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to the Ozark Mountains the bride was wearing a pink suit with white accessories and a corsage from her bouquet. The couple will be at home for the summer in New York where Mr. Canales will be employed. They will return in the fall to reside at 602 Morris Avenue, while he continues studies at Louisiana Tech where he is a senior. Mr. Canales previously attended Texas A & I in Kingsville, Texas, where he was a member of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity. The bride was graduated from Ouachita Parish high student at Northeast.

MISS HELEN HOLTON

Evelyn Newsom, Houston Man Exchange Vows

Of interest to Monroe friends is announcement of the marriage on Saturday, June 25 of Miss Evelyn Jeanette Newsom, formerly of Monroe and Rodney Vincent Altenbaugh of Houston, Texas.

The wedding was performed by the Rev. Thomas H. Dailey of the Holy Rosary Catholic Church of Houston, at 4 p.m.

After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home in Houston where both are employed.

September Vows Planned By Couple In West Monroe

Engagement of Miss Helen Holton and James Eads is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. Holton of West Monroe. Parents of the future bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eads, West Monroe, formerly of Oklahoma City, Okla.

The wedding will be solemnized on September 8 at 7:30 p.m. in Rock Hill Baptist Church.

Chosen as maid of honor is Miss Sharon Holton and bridesmaid will be Miss Mary Ann Holton. Both are sisters of the bride-elect. Mr. Eads has selected Bobby Bryant of Monroe, to serve as best man and ushers will be Ronnie Wills of West Monroe and Ronnie Fretwell of Calhoun.

Miss Holton was graduated from West Monroe high school. Mr. Eads finished his schooling in the United States Air Force and attended Northeast Louisiana State College. Both are employed in Monroe where they will be at home after their marriage.

Pamela Sue Gatlin Becomes Bride Of Fred P. Riser Jr.

First Methodist Church in West Monroe was scene of the ceremony Thursday, June 30 which united in marriage Miss Pamela Sue Gatlin and Fred Price Riser Jr. Rev. Kenneth G. McDowell performed the double ring vows in a candlelight setting at 7:30 p.m.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mrs. Vaughan Owen Allen Jr., with whom she made her home at 102 Sholars, West Monroe, and is the daughter of the late Sue Allen Gatlin. Mr. Riser is the son of Mrs. Fred Price Riser, New Natchitoches, Road, West Monroe and the late Mr. Riser.

Tiered branched candelabra holding lighted tapers formed a background for a center and two side arrangements of white stock and daisies, behind the chancel rail. An open Bible was placed on the altar.

Mrs. Earl Cox sang appropriate selections and was accompanied by the organist, Mrs. Jack Willis, who played traditional wedding marches.

The bride was escorted to the altar by Clinton Parnell, who gave her in marriage. Her gown of white peau de soie featured a straight front panel with appliques of French lace embroidered with seed pearls. Back fullness of the floor length skirt fell into a short train. The bodice was topped with a scalloped lace jacket, also embellished with seed pearls, and featuring bell shaped sleeves. Her mantilla style veil of double silk illusion, bordered with embroidered Chantilly lace matching her dress jacket, extended the length of her train and was held in place by a lace-covered circlet. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and English ivy.

Miss Sharon Susan Turner, maid of honor, wore a gown of white embroidered organdy over pink taffeta, featuring an empire waist accented by a pink taffeta bow, and bell-shaped sleeves edged with lace. She wore a wide brimmed open crown horsehair braid hat with a pink taffeta bow at the back. Dressed identically to Miss Turner were Miss Dawn Elizabeth Gatlin, sister of the bride, as maiden of honor and bridesmaids, Miss Peggy Ann Mann, Miss Mary Margaret Bubb, Miss LaJuana Kay McDowell and bridesmaids, Misses Celia Marie Parnell and Christy Denise Parnell. Each attendant carried three long-stemmed pink roses.

Stephen Earl Riser was best man for his brother and groomsmen were Billy Ransom Golson Jr., Larry Gaston Rutledge and Benny Ecle Gewin. Serving as ushers were George Emile Lobrano and Francis Plummer Cobb III.

Mrs. Allen, the bride's grandmother, wore a pink cut chiffon gown with blouson bodice and slim skirt. Matching accessories, a small pink flower hat and short white kid gloves completed her attire. Mrs. Riser, mother of the groom, chose a green crepe model with green flowered hat, green accessories and white gloves. Their corsages were of orchids.

A reception followed in the church parlor where guests were greeted at the entrance by Mrs. Henry Mann. Mrs. Jane Garrett, Mrs. John M. Parker, and Mrs. E. N. Thompson served the bride's tiered cake from a round table, garlanded with ivy and flowers. Brass candle holders flanked the chocolate cake which centered the groom's table, covered in a gold cloth. His cake was served by Mrs. J. E. Dupuy Jr., and Mrs. J. L. Rodgers, sisters of the groom. Mrs. Clinton Parnell and Mrs. Ryder Gore served punch from a long net covered table with a center arrangement of white stock, daisies and roses flanked by white tapers in crystal candelabra.

Mrs. Billy Golson Jr. presided at the guest book and presenting rice bags to the guests were Misses Kathey Koserog, Laura Craig and Polly Craig, Tea girls were Misses Jamie Corley, Kathey Pate, Faye Parker, Cynthia Deal, Brenda McMullen and Darla Butler. Others assisting were Mrs. Edward Koserog, Mrs. James O. Evans, Mrs. Eva J. Gewin and Mrs. D. E. Owens.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to Houston, Texas the bride donned a turquoise and olive green suit with white hat and black patent accessories. Upon their return the couple will be at home in West Monroe. Both graduated from West Monroe high school and the bride is attending Northeast where she is a member of Phi Mu. Mr. Riser attended Louisiana Tech and is now a student atNortheast.

MISS DONNA LYNN DUFFY'S engagement to William M. Guyton, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Guyton of West Monroe, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Duffy, 2420 N. 9th, West Monroe. The wedding will take place Sunday, August 7 at 2 p.m. in Ridge Avenue Baptist Church. Both are graduates of West Monroe high school and attended Northeast Louisiana State College and following their marriage will be at home in Port Sulphur, where Mr. Guyton is employed.

Hints Given On Purchase, Proper Care Of Pearls

Elegant, luxurious, flattering — pearls are always in fashion and they enhance almost any style of dress. But to retain their luster and brilliance, pearls must be properly handled. And of course they must be chosen carefully in the first place.

Acid perfumes and cosmetics are the pearls' worst enemies. Aside from dulling the pearls, they seep into the string and weaken it. If you wear your pearls often, re-string them once a year.

Perspiration harms the color of pearls. To remove it, along with face powder or dust, simply wipe the pearls with a soft cloth after each wearing. It is simply not true that handling or wearing pearls improves their luster.

A satin-lined box is the best place to keep them; don't put them with pins or earrings which could nick or scratch them.

Wherever you buy them, however, these are the factors you will consider in making your choice: shape, size, color and luster.

If possible, compare pearls under natural light from a north window. Strong direct sunlight, electric light and especially fluorescent light will be reflected by the pearl and will tend to hide any flaws or blemishes.

Color is usually a matter of personal preference, but pink pearls command a slightly higher price. The more perfectly spherical a pearl is, the better it is. Both color and luster are determined by the thickness of the nacre, the substance which the oyster builds around an irritant-nucleus in forming a pearl. Natural and cultured pearls are of course formed by the same process, except that in cultured pearls the irritant is scientifically inserted.

Since pearls are the only jewel formed by a living process, no two are exactly alike. Necklaces in which pearls are of almost identical size are therefore more costly than graduated strands.

MISS GWEN ANN MILLS

Mississippi Girl Engaged To Wed Paul Hayne Johnson

Mr. and Mrs. Glendon O'Neal Mills of Jackson, Mississippi announce the engagement of their daughter, Gwen Ann to Paul Hayne Johnson III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hayne Johnson Jr. of Minden, formerly of Monroe. The wedding will take place August 27 in Trinity Presbyterian Church, Jackson at 7 p.m.

Miss Mills is the granddaughter of the late Mrs. John Wesley Turner of Phoenix, Ariz., and the late Willie L. Ruth of Memphis, Tenn. Her paternal grandparents are Mrs. Claude Albert Mills and the late Mr. Mills of Memphis.

Mr. Johnson is the grandson of Mrs. Walker Roberts Littleton and the late Mr. Littleton of Jonesboro, Ark., and the late Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hayne Johnson of Monroe, North Carolina.

Both the bride-elect and her fiance are graduates of Murrah high school in Jackson. Miss Mills attended Millsaps College and obtained her Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Mississippi where she was a member of Chi Omega sorority and Phi Alpha Theta honorary history fraternity. She is now a candidate for a Master of Arts degree in history from the University.

Mr. Johnson received his Bachelor of Business Administration degree in accounting from the University of Mississippi in June. At the university he was treasurer of his social fraternity, Phi Delta Theta and of the 1966 senior class; a member of the Student Judicial Council and president of Beta Alpha Psi honorary accounting fraternity.

He was also a member of Beta Gamma Sigma, scholastic honorary, Omicron Delta Kappa leadership and scholastic honorary and will be listed in the 1966 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. Mr. Johnson plans to attend Harvard Law school at Cambridge Massachusetts in the fall.

Trinity Baptist Church Scene Of Smith-Morrow Vows

The wedding of Miss Pamela Morrow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack H. Morrow, 122 Vancil Road, to James Gary Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Smith, 102 Halsell Drive, all of West Monroe, was solemnized June 18 at 6 p.m. in Trinity Baptist Baptist Church.

White carnations decorated the altar where the double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. James B. White. Music was provided by Mrs. Larry Parker, organist.

The bride was wearing a white linen short-sleeved dress with short A-line skirt, highlighted by a band of white lace from the neckline to hem with narrow blue ribbon inserted. She wore powder blue shoes and a white pillbox with short lace veil. Her bouquet was of white carnations with powder blue ribbons.

Miss Glenda Morrow, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor and wore a pale gray whipped creme dress with eased skirt and ruffles encircling the hem. Her accessories were white and she carried a single red rose.

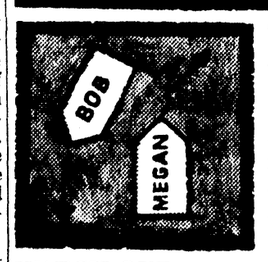
Larry Glen Luginbill attended Mr. Smith as best man and ushers were Roger and Rodney Morrow, brothers of the bride.

Mrs. Morrow chose for her daughter's wedding a powder blue polished cotton dress with bone accessories and a white carnation corsage. The groom's mother was wearing a pale yellow whipped creme dress with white accessories and a white carnation corsage.

Following the exchange of vows a reception was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Griffin, Wallace Dean Road in West Monroe. Miss Eloise Horton served the tiered wedding cake and Miss Judy Martin presided at the bowl of blue punch.

After a short wedding trip the couple is at home in West Monroe.

Why Bob Watson and Megan O'Brien missed each other:



They're both defensive drivers And they know the only way t beat the law of centrifugal force is to slow down before enterin a curve. So they do. It's a de fensive driving technique tha can save you from a head-o collision. Are you a defensiv driver?

Your Problems

Parents Right To Lower Boom On Far-Out Styles

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter is 14 and driving me out of my mind because of her obsession with what she considers up-to-the-minute style.

I have gone along with Lois up to now because I haven't wanted her to feel different from the rest of the girls in her crowd. But things have gotten out of hand. The girl is getting herself up to look like a comic. I feel I must draw the line somewhere — but WHERE?

Lois has hemmed up all her dresses so that they hit her about four inches above the knees. She wants everything tight around the hips and the louder the colors and patterns the better.

She goes around both day and night wearing sunglasses as large as coffee cups. Her hair (which she irons on a board) hangs in her eyes and looks ghastly. I am happy that she is allergic to eye makeup and cannot wear it. For several months last winter she looked like a raccoon.

My husband and I have had some serious talks about what to do but we just don't know where to draw the line. Will you please print this letter not only for us but for other parents who must be equally baffled? — ADRIFT WITHOUT ANSWERS

DEAR Adrift: Styles DO change — and they will continue to change because it's good for morale and good for business. But some of the stuff I've seen lately — not only on teen-agers, but on their mothers — may be considered fashionable, but it strikes me as positively indecent.

The op look and the pop look and the ironed hair and the kooky glasses — o.k., if a girl keeps herself clean. But those skin-tight, thigh-high skirts are vulgar. There's nothing left for a girl to do to attract attention except to set her hair on fire.

Parents not only have the right but they have an obligation to say, "This far — and NO further!" There comes a point at which respectability must take precedence over "trend"— and, so help me, over "what everybody else in the crowd is doing." When you feel that your teen-ager is getting too far out, step in and lower the boom.

Dear Ann Landers: I was 18 when I fell madly in love with a married man. I waited for him three years, until he could get a divorce.

We have been married 14 months and have a son who is six weeks old. The baby is sickly and cries a lot. My husband says his other children never cried at night and he doesn't see why this one has to. According to him it is my fault.

He criticizes my housekeeping and says his first wife was wonderful that way and he isn't accustomed to anything else. He knew I hated housework before I married him but he said it didn't make any difference.

Last night he made a mean remark about my figure and it really hurt. I explained that it takes a woman about three months to get her shape back after a baby. He said his ex-wife got her shape back in three weeks on four different occasions.

I'm very unhappy and afraid he is, too. What happened to the most exciting love affair in history? —NO NAME

Dear No.: It was legalized.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents . . . if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By-Parents? How To Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of Monroe Morning World enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SUEDE PRICES RISE

Suede suit you? Then you'd better buy your suedewear now. Women's Wear Daily, that bible of the fashion industry, foresees higher prices for next fall's suede coats and jackets and blames it all on the zooming prices of New Zealand lambskins.

Psychologist's Study Favors Strict Parents

NEW YORK, — A distinguished psychologist's research based on interviews with 1,700 children and their parents gave new support today to parents who are consistently strict and firm with their youngsters.

The study by Dr. Stanley Coopersmith, chairman of the Department of Psychology at the University of California at Davis, in an article just released, showed that such parents tend to have children with a high degree of self-esteem which many psychiatrists have become convinced is "an essential but all-too-often neglected ingredient in every child's development."

Dr. Coopersmith's tests and interviews with the fifth and sixth-grade students and with their parents showed that the parents of children with high self-esteem "were much more likely to believe in the need for firm rules than mothers of children with medium or low self-esteem," the article said. "Almost all of them reported that the firm rules set in their families were enforced carefully and consistently."

"Many of the mothers of medium- and low-self-esteem children, in contrast, reported that there was relatively little enforcement of rules in their homes," the article reported.

Parents whose children ranked highest in self-esteem, "are firm and strict; they set high standards; and they consistently enforce family rules. Yet they rarely punish their children and often let them have their own way. They recognize the child as a person worthy of respect and consideration.

"But some parents, the evidence indicates, prefer to keep their children meek and submissive . . . They reveal an almost compulsive need to belittle their children in various ways," the article said. "They tell visitors, for example, while their children are present, about the children's mistakes and shortcomings.

"Children who are thus belittled while they are small are all too likely to carry a crippled outer world," said the article.

SANDRA KAY JAGGERS

Miss Leachman, a graduate of Downsville high school, is now a junior at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute. Mr. Banks is also a graduate of Downsville high school and is now employed by Western Electric Company.

NEW SHOES

Cue for testing new shoes at home: wear a pair of clean socks over the shoes. Then, if you want to return them, the soles still will be immaculate, the Cleanliness Bureau says.

From Gibson Girl To Go-Go New Lingerie Is 'With It'

The Gibson Girl measured her petticoats by the yard. The more ruffles, the better!

The Go - Go Girl goes by the inch. And daily, the inches diminish.

We females make fashion, and fashion is fickle — ever changing, ever challenging not only to the wearers but also to the producers of the "in" styles.

Pity the poor male. If he's merely an observer of our feminine foibles, he's lucky. Standin' on the corner watchin' all the girls go by, he can say "aye" or "nay" to the current rising of hemlines. But if he happens to be in the fashion business, he has to figure out now what we ladies will consider the "in" styles next season.

It's amazing, really, how the gentlemen do it!

Take the lingerie industry, for example.

Not now — today — but months ago, lingerie makers had to arrive at their decision to slash skirts. They had to create demi - slips and chemise lengths. Their designers not only had to design the styles short, they also had to know what colors — what prints, plaids and posies — we ladies would want in our wardrobes.

Think how much easier it was to be a lingerie manufacturer in the days of the Gibson Girl wearing the shirtwaist! All of those yards of ruffles were white. They were cotton. They swept the ground.

Now colors change, new fabrics are constantly being developed, and with hemlines, it's up one season, down the next, up, and again up! Or will 1967 be 1947 again, with another "New Look" that's a long look? It doesn't seem likely.

It's interesting to consider what's happened to hemlines since the turn - of - the - century Gibson Girl wore them down to her toes.

By 1913, skirts had become straighter, but still they were ankle length. And so they remained until the mid - twenties when flapper styles bared the knees. Then in the early thirties, down again went the hemline.

World War II restricted yardage — and shortened our skirts. Rosie the riveter wore coveralls, everyone else wore a knee - length shirtwaist dress. What a relief when the "New Look" made females look female again by putting us into full skirts and cinching our waistlines! By the early fifties we all looked like Baby Dolls in our crinolines. Then, for a decade, we accelerated to a new silhouette almost every year: the sheath, the chemise, the trapeze — each with variations.

In the early sixties we settled into an easier, more natural shape — and that's pretty much the shape we're in now. We're just shortening our skirts. Buying shorter slips and prettier petti - pants. And rejoicing that the gentlemen who produce underpinnings anticipated that once a woman shortens one dress, she'll shorten them all!

Shoe Heels Appear In Varied Shapes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lots of shapes in little and lowered heels is one of the major trends in women's shoe styles, according to E. E. Joiner, styling director-general manager of a shot manufacturer.

The shapes range from curvy, Louis heels to stacked heels to the geometric slants and angles of modern art, Joiner says. These shapely, lowered heels are necessary for proper balance and proportion with short, short skirts and textured stockings, he noted.

Fashion Flashes Noted For Fall

LOOK FOR . . .

. . . the undershirt dress, summer cooler for the young, a shift with top cut out like a man's undershirt, its surface a geometric puzzle.

. . . coming for fall, with short dance dresses, legs in gilt mesh stockings, in jeweled and embroidered hoisery, sometimes on just one leg.

. . . The sandal-foot look for summer shoes, with closed toes but open backs and stripling sides, in two or even three colors for white dresses.

Catholic Church, Red Nations Nearing Closer Existence

EDITOR'S NOTE — In Stalin's day it would have been incredible, but in April a Soviet minister met with a Catholic Pope. After decades of strife, there's a new mood in relations between the two titans. Barriers still remain, but further ties between Moscow and the Vatican now seem in prospect.

By GERALD MILLER

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church and the Communist world are heading for closer coexistence.

Despite the denunciations that still come from both sides, despite setbacks along the way, relations are steadily improving.

The mood between the Vatican and the Kremlin has never been as good as it is now. The signs are it will get even better, despite many still existing barriers.

The new mood was captured by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's meeting at the Vatican with Pope Paul VI in April. For the first time a Pope received in the sacred headquarters of the church a government minister from a Communist country.

QUIET APPROACH

With an eye to the touchy political situation in Italy, where the big Communist party has been gaining votes in every major election since the war, the Vatican staged the meeting with no preliminary fanfare. The audience was not officially announced and the Vatican issued no pictures of the Pope and Gromyko together.

But it was still a momentous encounter that moved the developing Church-Communist dialogue a major step forward. Gromyko and the Pope talked face to face for 45 minutes and agreed on the need to work together for peace.

They had had their first fleeting contact in New York, when Pope Paul went there to address the United Nations last October. When Gromyko came to Italy on an official visit in March, Soviet officials in Rome quietly passed the word to the Vatican that he would like to see the Pope again. Pope Paul quickly agreed.

Such a meeting would have been impossible in the old days of Stalin and Pope Pius XII.

In their world there was only scorn and contempt for the Church on the one side, fear and loathing of communism on the other.

CYNICAL QUERY

The Kremlin's contempt for the Church was summed up by Stalin's cynical query, "How many divisions does the Pope have?"

Pius gave as good as he got. He excommunicated Communists, and coined the dramatic and cutting phrase "Church of Silence" Catholics living under Red repression. That kind of unrelenting antagonism has changed.

Not that the Church has gone soft on communism, as some critics of the new Vatican policy charge. Nor that communism has abandoned its belief that religion is a narcotic to tranquilize the masses.

But Stalin and Pius have long since passed on. The successors of the dictator in the Kremlin and the stern ascetic in the Vatican have turned to new policies to meet the conditions of a vastly different world.

The new Popes and the new party leaders have concluded that the old hostilities will no longer serve, that for their own purposes the Church and communism would do better to seek a way to get along in a modern world beset by problems so dangerous they overshadow ideology.

In the long years of bitter conflict, a lesson had been learned: Antireligion did not kill the Church in Communist countries; neither did excommunication and condemnation banish communism.

PARAMOUNT CONCERN

For the Church the problems of how to ease world tension in a nuclear bomb world and improve the position of the 65 million Catholics behind the Iron Curtain have become a paramount concern in its approach to communism.

For Communist countries striving to acheive higher living standards and to minimize internal opposition, an accommodation with the Church and with Catholics within their borders has become a desirable course.

Many Communist leaders have come to admit that communism's anticlericalism and open opposition to faith have failed. A result of this is the new Communist willingness to deal with the Vatican. In Pope John XXIII and his successor, Pope Paul, they found pontiffs ready to deal with them.

Pope John started. He abruptly ended the anti-Communist polemics that marked the reign of his predecessor Pius. He initiated the Vatican's open door policy of closer ties with men of all kinds, whatever their religion, whatever their political credo.

PROCLAIMED

In the five years of his reign never once in a public address did John use the words "Church of Silence." His encyclical "Pacem in Terris" — Peace on Earth — looked past ideological differences and proclaimed that for the sake of peace Catholics could work with Communists.

In March 1963 he received in private audience Alexei Adzhubei, Nikita Khrushchev's son-in-law and then director of the Soviet government organ Izvestia. This caused a sensation. Angered and in Italian political groups blamed the audience for the improved showing the Communist party made in Italy's national election the following month.

But the Adzhubei visit accomplished what Pope John probably had in mind. When the more important Gromyko met with Pope Paul three years later it was less of a sensation. There was less negative reaction. By now it was no surprise that Vatican doors were open to Communists.

THAW DEVELOPED

As this policy took form; a simultaneous thaw developed on the lower working levels. One month before Adzhubei was received, secret negotiations produced the release of Ukrainian Catholic Primate Josef Slipyj after 18 years of Soviet confinement.

In September 1964 the Vatican and the Budapest government marked a notable step toward normalizing Church-state relations in Hungary by signing an accord allowing the Vatican to appoint bishops to a number of blocked sees.

Five months later the long-confined archbishop of Prague, Rome Beran, was allowed out by the Czech government to come to Rome to be made a cardinal.

Diplomatic relations between the Vatican and Yugoslavia are expected to resume soon, ending a 14-year break and once more giving the Vatican formal ties with a Communist country.

Eventual ties with Moscow and other Red capitals are now considered a growing possibility, along with a papal trip behind the Iron Curtain despite the collapse of Pope Paul's recent plans to visit Poland.

Compared to the situation in the days of Stalin and Pius, these steps mean enormous changes. More major changes are on the way. But great barriers remain.

Despite the improvement in Hungary, for example, no real Church-state rapport can come until the case of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty is resolved.

FOR YEARS Communist countries campaigned against religion — but people still go to church. At the same time the Roman Catholic Church fought Communism — but it lives on. Now, in a tense world over which hangs the atomic bomb, the Church and Communists are moving toward better relations, without relinquishing their philosophical differences. Lutherans Elect Slate Of Leaders

The Rev. Dr. Edgar W. Homrighausen, pastor of First English Lutheran Church in New Orleans has been re-elected to a fourth term as president of The Southern District of The Lutheran Church - Missouri Synod. Convention action last week in New Orleans occurred on the first ballot, following the primary ballot. Due to an administration change, this term will be for four years. Previous terms were limited to three. The 250 delegates rose in standing tribute to his nine years of leadership.

The Rev. A. Lorenz Grumm, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, New Orleans, was re-elected first vice-president of the Southern District, and the Rev. H. William Lieske, pastor of Redeemer Lutheran Church, Warrington, Florida, was elected as second vice-president.

FORWARD STRIDES

During his nine years of leadership in which he directed the district, composed of congregations in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and the panhandle area of Florida, Dr. Homrighausen has seen great forward strides in terms of growth statistics.

Size of the district presently includes 40,500 baptized members and 166 local congregations, up about 100 per cent from the 1957 statistics when 22,000 members in 76 congregations comprised the district.

Looking ahead, the re-elected president is optimistic about the future church activity. "My goal is to help each congregation understand that it must be totally committed to proclaiming the gospel message to its community. Anything short of this is inconsistent with the command of Jesus Christ to make disciples of all nations."

He expressed hope that every member of the district will come to a closer realization that evangelism is the work primarily of one individual confronting another person with the love of God in Christ. "To do this will require a renewed emphasis on adult education within our church," he added.

PROBLEMS RESOLVED

Reminiscing over his years of leading district activities he reflected, "We have seen turbulent times, but thanks to God, they have been resolved to His glory and to the salvation of many. They were years of change, but they were great years. We saw fear changed to trust and despair turned into hope."

At his first election Dr. Homrighausen, at 32, was the youngest district president ever to hold a presidency in the history of the 2.8 million member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

He previously served St. Paul Lutheran Church at Cullman, Alabama.

Evangelists Due For Revival At Central Assembly

The Rev. Darrell Pilcher and his wife, Carolyn, will serve as evangelists for a revival starting today and continuing for two weeks at Central Assembly of God Church, Hall and Calypso, it was announced by the Rev. Gerald E. Davis Sr., pastor.

Mrs. Pilcher is the former Carolyn Sellers of Monroe.

Services will be held 7 o'clock nightly. Music will be provided by the evangelists, and church singers. There will be solo, duet and trio singing.

A nursery will be open during services.

SIGNIFICANT steps toward closer coexistence between the Roman Catholic Church and the Communist world have been taken recently. When Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko visited Italy in April, he met with Pope Paul VI in the Vatican, without fanfare. It was the first time a Pope had received a Communist government minister in the Vatican. Here, Gromyko waves as he arrives at the airport in Rome, April 21. Debate In Subcontinent On Religious Tensions

NEW DELHI, India (AP)— Ancient religious tensions underlying the long India-Pakistan quarrel once again are being debated in the troubled subcontinent.

The issue is whether Hinduism, India's majority religion, is a threat to neighboring Pakistan, its Islamic religion and culture.

Z. A. Bhutto who has resigned as Pakistan's foreign minister, kicked off the current debate in an interview with a monthly magazine in the Pakistani seaport city of Harachi.

"The characteristic of Hindu culture," he said, "has been to assimilate every emerging culture in the subcontinent, thereby finishing off each one's revolutionary qualities. The Hindu culture devoured Buddhism, killed Jainism (a Hindu creed resembling Buddhism), and intended the Islamic culture to meet the same fate."

Bhutto's statement was an elaboration of a feeling often encountered in Pakistan, that India with its predominantly Hindu 495 million people, intends to swallow 110 million Pakistanis at the earliest possible moment.

Indian officials dismiss such fears as groundless but religious tensions nevertheless play a major part in the feud with Pakistan, which has erupted into all-out war twice since 1947.

India's spokesman in these matters often is Education Minister M.C. Chagla, himself a Moslem like Bhutto. Chagla put the Hindu case this way in an interview:

"Hinduism does not believe in conversion. It is not a militant fanatical religion, out to destroy others with a sword. India has declared itself a secular state, with equal rights for all religions."

He pointed out about 50 million Indians are Moslems, nearly 14 million are Christians, and about 10 million are followers of the militant Sikh religion, a mixture of Islam and Hinduism.

But the absorbent quality of Hinduism cannot be denied. This great religion, more a way of life than anything else, is universal in its appeal.

Historically, followers of non-Hindu religions in the subcontient are converts from Hindusim. Thus, Chagla claims Pakistan's Moslems are, in fact, converted Hindus.

"By attacking Hinduism, Mr. Bhutto is attacking only his own Hindu forebearers," Chagla said.

Another religious minority in India, the Sikhs, also fear they will disappear in a wave of Hinduism. Master Tara Singh, a fiery Sikh leader, says his people must have their own religious homeland or they will be swamped by the year 2,000.

Chagla said Bhutto's arguments "are at least a couple of centuries old—it is economics that shapes the modern ways of life, not religious tenets preached thousands of years ago."

Adventists' Leaders Are Announced

The 50th World Conference of the Seventh - day Adventist Church recently elected Neal C. Wilson of Washington, D.C., as president of Seventh-day Adventists throughout North America. The conference was held in Detroit, Mich.

Wilson, 45, president of the Columbia Union Conference of Adventists (headquarters at Washington, D.C.) since 1962, was elected leader of the 380,855 Seventh-day Adventists in the U.S. and Canada on the fifth day of the quadrennial world session of the denomination in session at Cobo Hall.

A native of Lodi, California, Wilson graduated from Vincent Hill College in India and Pacific Union College at Angwin, California. The son of Seventh-day Adventist missionaries, he began his ministry in Wyoming, then studied Arabic in Washington, D.C., in preparation for foreign mission service.

BACKGROUND

From 1944 to 1959 he was a pastor and church official of the Adventists' Egypt and Nile Union Missions. He returned to the United States to service in the church's Central California Conference at San Jose as a church official until elected as religious liberty director of the Columbia Union Conference of Adventists with headquarters in Washington, D.C., in 1960.

As new North American Adventist president, Wilson also will oversee the activities of some 24,000 paid church workers, 3,300 churches, 1,134 parochial schools, and 38 church operated hospitals.

OTHER ELECTIONS

In other elections the World Conference named the following to positions indicated:

Theodore E. Lucas, Washington, D.C., was re-elected world youth activities director of the church; and Adlai A. Esteb, Carl E. Guenther, and Vernon W. Schoen, all of Washington, D.C., were re-elected associate world directors of the church's lay activities department.

Roland R. Hegstad and W. Melvin Adams, both of Washington, D.C., were re-elected associate world directors of the Religious Liberty Department of the denomination.

W. Duncan Eva, Washington, D.C., was re-elected an associate world secretary of the church, and the following day found his election rescinded. He then was elected president of the Northern Europe world division of the denomination.

Clyde O. Franz, Miami, Fla., was re-elected treasurer of the Inter-American world division of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Cecil B. Guild, Poona, India, formerly treasurer of the Adventists' Southern Asia world division, was elected as secretary of that division, and Bert H. Stickle, Poona, India, formerly auditor of the Southern Asia world division, was elected treasurer of the division.

Honors Go To Former Area Pastor

A former area pastor, the Rev. Paul Durbin, now pastor of the First Methodist Church in Logansport, has been selected by the Royal Arch Masons there as the "Minister of the Year."

Rev. Durbin was pastor of the Brownville Methodist Church, West Monroe, from 1955 to 1960, and then served at the Wisner Methodist Church for three years.

The award was based on six points covering various phases of excellency in his ministerial work.

Rev. Durbin has served three years at Logansport. He has had 31½ years of service in the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Church, and served four years in the Texas Conference.

In 1948 he received the award of "Most Valuable Rural Preacher of the Texarkana District of the Texas Conference," which included a trip to Lincoln, Nebraska, to the Rural Life Conference. In 1939, he was a delegate to the Young People's Conference at Sabina, Ohio. He is married. The Durbins have two children, a daughter, Mrs. Fred Waldrop of Gainesville, Texas, and a son, Chaplain Paul G. Durbin, stationed in New Ulm, Germany, and four grandchildren.

Local Pastor Director Of Information

Changes in ministerial appointments resulted in some changes in the Methodist Information organization across the Louisiana Conference.

The Rev. E .W. Sandel, formerly director in the Alexandria District, is the new director for the Monroe District, following his appointment to the Claiborne - Wilhite churches in West Monroe.

Five new directors, one a layman, were named. They are:

William D. Peeples, St. Luke's Church, Lake Charles; Vernon Fairley, Trout - Eden - Urania, Alexandria District; Joe Fogle, First Church, New Orleans; James J. Caraway, Homer-Wesley Chapel, Ruston District, and John E. Boagni, Jr., a layman of the Opelousas-Lafayette District, succeeds Wayne Gilmore of Opelousas, who was named district director of lay activities for the Lafayette District

TWO REMAIN

Two directors remain the same — Deane Flett, manager of a television station in Shreveport, and the Rev. James Humphreys, associate pastor, First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge.

These men are responsible for publicity and public relations in the Methodist churches of their districts. They will conduct district workshops in these fields to train public relations chairmen in the local churches, with the help of conference public relations personnel and representatives of the newspapers, television, and radio stations in their districts.

Conference public relations is handled by the state office in the area office in Shreveport.

Protestant School In 100th Year

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A century ago, a Protestant missionary from New England gathered 16 students in a rented five room house, and beneath the suspicious eyes of the Turkish Empire, started an American college in the Arab world.

The house has grown to a 75-acre campus, the student enrollment has swollen from 16 to 3,200, and the American University of Beirut is celebrating its 100th anniversary as a most respected seat of learning in the Middle East.

In an area where the United States is none too popular, the American University exerts the influence of a giant magnet, attracting students and talent from the Arab world and beyond. It is assailed only rarely as an obtrusive American presence — most recently with accusations by Arab nationalist students that the campus was a base for CIA operations.

RANKING GRADUATES

Almost 400 of its faculty of 628 are Arabs, and six of seven Arab ambassadors to the United Nations are graduates. The school's international stature was exhibited at the 1945 San Francisco conference that founded the United Nations. Nineteen of the participants were from the Beirut university — more than from any other single educational institution.

The university was called the Syrian Protestant College originally. It is chartered in the State of New York, and its students come from 59 countries and 21 religions.

"The success of the A.U.B. comes from the affinity of the Arab way of thinking for the free type of learning we offer," says the university's Dr. Burton Thurston. "Also, we do not alienate Arab students from their own culture despite our western approach, and Arab leaders always have appreciated this.

"This year we have room for only 250 new students, but we have 2,000 applications."

Many of the Arab world's prominent citizens studied at the A.U.B. — statesmen, engineers, businessmen, guerrilla leaders in Yemen's civil war — and an A.U.B. project may affect the life of a city dweller in Pakistan, a villager in Africa or a nomad tribesman in the desert.

The university hospital has long been a major medical center, and $24 million in U. S. aid funds now are building the biggest and most modern hospital and medical school in the Middle East for the A.U.B.

The university began its centennial year with commencement exercises Monday, and in a ceremony next Dec. 3 it will re-enact the day 100 years ago when The Rev. Mr. Bliss, a one-time farm boy and tannery apprentice from Vermont, founded the original college with funds he raised in the United States and Britain.

MANY CHANGES

When The Rev. Mr. Bliss bought the present campus, it was a bleak sandy clearing reached by a mule track. Now it is a rolling, terraced garden sloping to the Mediterranean, with 70 buildings and its own swimming beach. The mule track is a bustling main street, named Rue Bliss after the founder, and a favorite students' hangout is Uncle Sam's Snack Bar.

In Bliss' day, co-education was unheard of in the Middle East, where the veil was compulsory for women. By 1925 only seven girls had dared to enroll at the university, although it was on the A.U.B. campus that Syrian Moslem women first appeared in public without veils, at a fund-raising ceremony during World War I.

Now almost a quarter of the university's enrollment — 773 students — are women, and the campus elects a beauty queen annually. A further touch of modernity was introduced this year when the votes for "Miss A.U.B.," a 20-year-old Arab brunette, were tallied by an electronic computer.

New Route Seen To Church Funds

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Reform Judaism has discovered a promising new way for religious organizations to raise large sums of money.

It works like this:

A church or synagogue member buys a special kind of life insurance policy, naming as beneficiary his local congregation, national denomination, a seminary, or some other religious organization. His premium payment will be tax deductible as religious contributions. For as little as $2 a week, he can leave an endowment of several thousand dollars when he dies.

Pioneering the experiment in mass philanthropy are the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and the Travelers Insurance Co., Hartford, Conn.

660 TEMPLES INVOLVED

Life insurance will be sold to members of 660 reform temples, without medical examinations, up to the age of 60. The insuree will choose how large a premium he wants to pay. It must be a minimum of $100 a year, but can be any multiple of $100. The amount of insurance for each $100 premium will depend on the age of the insured. The local congregation will be listed as beneficiary for 50 per cent of each policy. The remaining 50 per cent will be divided equally between the parent denomination and its principal seminary, Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Relgion in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Denominational officials and insurance experts expect to have about $100 million worth of the insurance in effect within the next year. They figure that $250 million can be sold to the 200,000 eligible adult males of the denomination over the next 5 years.

Reform Jews are noted for their generosity to philanthropy, and the goals they consider realistic may not be as readily attainable in some other denominations. However, the technique seems to be readily adaptable to any kind of religious body. Philanthropy, once considered the privilege of the very rich, may become a practical possibility for millions of persons of moderate income.

SEEKS MERGER

The Congultation on Church Union (COCU), which is trying to bring about a merger of eight Protestant denominations, got a strong endorsement recently from an influential Commission of the Episcopal Church.

Episcopalians are one of the eight groups involved in the merger talks. Fears have been expressed in some quarters that they might back away from the project as it approached the showdown stage.

But there was certainly no evidence of wavering in a statement issued by the Episcopal Joint Commission on Ecumenical Relations after a meeting at Nantucket, Mass.

It said that the "principles of church union" adopted by COCU delegates at their recent meeting in Dallas include the elements which Episcopalians would hold to be "essential" in any united church.

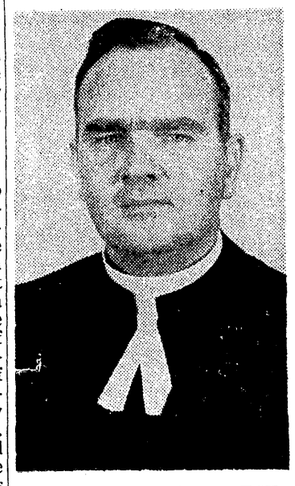
DESCRIBES ELEMENTS

These elements were described as: "The authoritative position of Holy Scripture and the creeds, the central sacraments of baptism and holy communion, and the historic ministry in its three-fold order."

The commission said that the difficulties of translating agreed principles into a detailed plan of union "are obvious." It added:

"It is our intention to support a plan of union which keeps open every possible relationship with all Christian bodies."

The joint commission is composed of eight bishops, 10 priests and seven laymen, elected to represent both houses of the Episcopal general convention. It is broadly representative of all major groups of Episcopalians, including the "high church" wing which has feared that a merger with Methodists, Presbyterians, Disciples and other Protestant bodies might impede chances for a reunion with the Roman Catholic Church.



REV. WILLIAM W. HATCHER, of Ruston, minister of education of Red River Presbytery, will be guest speaker at 11 a.m. services today at the First Presbyterian Church of Monroe. A native of Fayetteville, West Virginia, he graduated from Columbia Theological Seminary, Decatur, Georgia, and held pastorates in Virginia and West Virginia before coming to Monroe as pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, which post he held until assuming his present position.

Rev. O'Neal Speaker At Area Church

Special services are scheduled at Archibald Presbyterian, Church, Monday through Friday, at 7:30 p.m. The guest preacher will be the Rev. William D. O'Neal, pastor of the Broadmoor Presbyterian Church of Baton Rouge.

Rev. O'Neal was born in Bastrop, the son of a Presbyterian minister. He is a graduate of Louisiana Tech and of Columbia Theological Seminary in Atlanta Georgia. He has served as assistant pastor of the Trinity Presbyterian Church in Montgomery, Alabama. Since 1956 he has been the pastor of the Broadmoor Church in Baton Rouge. Under his leadership this has been one of the fastest growing Presbyterian Churches in Louisiana, officials said. Rev. O'Neal served the Archibald, Alto, Baskin and Union Churches one summer during his student days.

He is presently chairman of the Christian Education Committee of the Synod of Louisiana. He has been moderator of Louisiana Presbytery, and has served on important committees in presbytery and synod. Rev. O'Neal is married and has two sons.

Council Meets At St. Mary's Training School

The quarterly meeting of the Monroe Deanery Council was held last Sunday at St. Mary's Training School at Clarks.

Co-hosts for the event were St. Mary's, St. Ann's, Columbia, and St. Joseph's Parish Council of Bastrop. The Rev. Remy Stiglitz of Bastrop officiated at benediction of the blessed sacrament prior to the meeting. Assisting were the Rev. Gustave Bergeron, Rayville, and the Rev. Francis Couvillion, Clarks.

A business session was presided over by Mrs. Malcolm Smith.

A highlight of the afternoon's activities was a guided tour of the training school, which is one of the institutions operated by Catholic Charities. Children from 22 states live at the school.

A Deanery Council spokesman said of the school, "The wonderful work done here by all is an inspiration to anyone. The happy atmosphere and love shown these children is something to be remembered."

Articles made by the children of the school were on display. These included ceramics, hand woven mats, apron, pillows, and pot holders.

Children's Home

The Louisiana Baptist Children's Home Park on Bayou DeSiard was a busy place during June. It was the scene of five family reunions, eight vacation Bible school picnics, one softball team outing, one Eastern Star picnic, one Girls' Auxiliary picnic, one church picnic, and three late afternoon picnics for youngsters and staff of the Children's Home.

Earl D. Mercer, Home public relations director, said that groups desiring to use the park facilities may make reservations by writing or calling the Children's Home. A number of events have already been scheduled for July and August.

Compact Treatment Is Given To New England Farmhouse

By ANDY LANG

The ever popular New England farmhouse is given the compact treatment this week. In response to requests for a house of this style to fit on a modest lot, architect Herman H. York has come up with a design that suits the needs of a growing family.

There are two bedrooms on the first floor, with an expansion attic for two additional bedrooms. The area behind the garage has been laid out as a terrace, but could eaisily be made into a family room at a later date because two walls are already there. Design G-43 thus can be anything from a five-room to an eight-room house, starting with the lower figure and moving up to the higher as the family grows. Best of all, the original over-all dimensions of 54' 8" by 32' 4", which include the garage, do not change as the living area of the house expands.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G-43.

PROPER BALANCE

An important prerequisite to good layout is proper balance in room sizes. This is particularly true in a house which has an expansion potential. The architext has kept the rooms in good relationship here by using a minimum of hall space. A partially open plan, using the corner of the dining room as passage to the bedroom area, eliminates some hallway and additionally gives an impression of spaciousness. A large bay window in the dining room looks out to the rear. There is an attractive fireplace in the living room set in stone and flanked by vertical wood paneling.

The kitchen is at the rear of the house, conveniently located between the dining room and the outdoor terrace. If this terrace were made into a family room at a later date, the convenience factor would still hold true. One of the features of the kitchen, with its L-shaped arrangement of working appliances, is a full-height pantry, coming back into style since so many homemakers have been requesting it. Also, there is sufficient room in the kitchen for a dinette table.

CLOSET SPACE

Both bedrooms on the first floor have ample closet space and are close to a large bathroom that includes a long vanity. The front bedroom can easily be used as a den if desired. The architect has shown where an optional second door to this room can be located so that entry can be made directly from the foyer. Both rooms in this wing of the house have cross-ventilation.

Upstairs, the layout includes two good-sized bedrooms and a bath. The laundry chute which begins on this floor has an opening on the main floor and extends to the basement. There also is a very sizable storage area that can be utilized whether or not the attic is finished during the original construction or at some later time. Additional storage space is available along an entire side of the garage.

While most of the exterior is covered with wood shingles, brick has been used in the chimney and near the front door and covered portico. The shingles preserve the traditional flavor of a New England farmhouse. The brick expenditure is small, but is utilized where it has the greatest impact.

Conventional and without expensive frills, this house nevertheless should have plenty of appeal for a family of almost any size which wants a comfortable home on a medium-sized lot.

THE FIREPLACED living room at the front of the house provides immediate eye appeal from the foyer; the stairway leads to an expansion attic.

NEW NAIL ..

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A new, fully twisted nail designed to eliminate the home building industry's problem of "loose" framing and nail popping has been introduced by United States Steel Corp.

"The new nail has a 'helical' or spiral design which accounts for its superior holding power over the smooth shank common nail," says Robert J. Ritchey, general manager, residential construction marketing.

The spiral nail is easier to drive and offers more count per pound, according to Ritchey.

Ritchey said tests of holding power showed the new nails have a delayed withdrawal resistance of 336 pounds compared with 101 pounds for common nails.

IS IT SEASONED?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Seasoning, a drying process that preshrinks lumber, improves the wood's grip on nails and other fastenings, building experts say, and is a must for home building.

Garden Center Notes

Nine Designs Have Variety

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

From the roadside, from the field, and from the gardens, came the plant materials that were used in the nine lovely designs presented by Lakewood Estates Garden Club members on last Wednesday's program from Fifth District Garden Center. Proving that we have an endless supply of interesting line materials as well as blooms from the gardens the year around, there is no excuse for not having lovely designs in our homes at all times.

Combining garden flowers with wild plants for line certainly proves to be pleasing and interesting and it was especially so in last Wednesday's program. The club's president, Mrs. Don Culpepper, made one of the designs using the orange double daylilies that are blooming now. These were massed into a triangle line formed with Burford holly branches in a rectangular bowl. Finishing the design on both sides made it suitable for the mantel or the hall table in front of a mirror. These colors are so bright and cheerful they give a good welcome to guests who enter the home.

CRESCENT DESIGN

Two ladies, Mrs. Henry Adleman and Mrs. James Knox, made a massed crescent design, inspired with the crescent shaped container, a low tan ceramic bowl. Clipped pine was placed as the line within the line of the container. A massed grouping of yellow and orange miniature marigolds filled the crescent line, finished similar on all sides. Being a low design this was ideal for the coffee table or luncheon table.

Garlic blooms still take the spotlight. Mrs. James Ford, Jr. used them in a vertical line in a low, round, green ceramic bowl. A second line of rhythmic wisteria vine formed a background creating bold contrast of line. This was painted dark green. Rocks covered the holder in the bowl. No water was needed for this dried design which gave the impression of cool freshness of cut plant material. A woven rattan mat added balance.

Always lovely when combined are pine and roses. This is just what Mrs. John Sibley did to create her outstanding design. The Tropicana roses, graded from small buds to open blooms filled in the vertical line of clipped pine branches which formed the background and primary line in the authentic Oriental vase made of fine smooth earthy brown pottery. Placed on a footed teakwood base, more distinction was added. Simplicity of beauty was the keynote in this naturalistic design.

Mrs. Tom Easterling made two designs. Her first, the line created with dried branches of jimpson weed with seed pods, was strikingly modern in feeling. The pods were sprayed black to match the black bowl on teakwood base. The focal area contained one open magnolia bloom with one bud placed against a rosette of magnolia leaves. The design was placed to one side on a glossy black base. A hand-carved crane (black buffalo horn) was used as an accessory opposite the design on the base.

For the second design Mrs. Easterling used a very unusual basket for the container. Woven of natural reed forming a tall upright type container, the basket was a lovely setting for the gold colored calendulas (dairy type) placed within a line of baby ivy. The basket was placed on a natural rock base. For an accessory, a colorful feather butterfly, in colors blending with the flowers, was placed on the base near the basic line of ivy.

The last three designs were made by Mrs. Margaret Hough. All three designs gave excellent ideas for the use of dried materials with fresh flowers and driftwood for decorative motifs. Starting with the driftwood, a small piece that greatly resembled a rooster's body, was finished with black paint. For the tail feathers Mrs. Hough cleverly placed a grouping of dried red princess feather, also using this material to finish the head of the fowl which was made of a large seed pod of the lionatis (lion's tail). This, too, was sprayed black. This decorative motif created a lot of interest after the program. It was a real conversational piece.

A collection of materials formed the next dried arrangement. Swirling wisteria vine, eucalyptus and small dock formed the asymmetrical line in a low turquoise bowl. Lionatis pods formed the lower line. The focal interest was a grouping of wasp's nests (picked) into the holder. Rocks covered the holder.

The last design emphasized contrast of line using dried and fresh flowers. Wisteria formed the rhythmic line contrasted with three tiered sansavera stalks in a large cup holder placed on two round wooden bases (tiered). Two lovely cerise dahlias with rose foliage formed the center of interest, creating a pleasing color contrast. These, of course, could be changed from day to day with other blooms when needed. This makes flower-arranging quick and easy for the busy housewife.

Wednesday — "Designs in Bottles," by some of our most talented arrangers from Monroe Garden Clubs. Be Watching for ideas in using household bottles that would be thrown away. Some of our most beautiful designs have been made in bottles.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Just in time for summer —

A backyard pool — not for swimming, but for outdoor billiards. A new kind of indoor-outdoor pool table has moved the popular game outdoors for the summer, to patio or beside the swimming pool. Although the new tables play like the professional slate - bed type, actually they are built like a boat hull and are designed to be at home under the blazing sun or desert resort, in the rain of the jungle military rest camp or in recreational areas anywhere. A snap-on canvas cover saves shoveling snow, or raking leaves.

Fun for a whole table full of youngsters with a Walt Disney coloring table cloth — 48 by 40 inches, complete with non-toxic crayons and a wipe - off cloth. A score of animals, people, costumes and playthings are shown on each cloth with designs suited to carious age levels. a plastic carrying case is incluced for storage and travel.

Plenty of extra ice whenever you need it without costly trips to the corner ice machine, thanks to a handy home freezer ice - kit. The kit consists of four polyethylene trays, each making 49 ice cubes, in an aluminum carrier with fold-down handles for easy transportation to the party scene.

For cool kitchens no matter what the weather, cook ahead, freeze, then reheat — and do it with a minimum of wash - up time, thanks to a new boilable frozen food container. The rugged Freezettes, of a rigid, boilable, and virtually indestructible plastic, come in a wide range of sizes and shapes, all with seal-tight lids. Foods frozen in the reusable containers can be cooked or reheated without flavor loss, by placing the container in boiling water.

For underwater fun in pool, lake or ocean, a Sea Scope of durable polyethylene plastic -- a contoured swim float buoyant enough to support a 250-pound adult, complete with a removable rubber face mask with wide-angle lens, through which the user can scan the marine life below

A new development in anti-fouling paint for boat bottoms —an exclusive system of custom blending a broad range of pastels to give the boat owner a virtually unlimited color choice rather than the standard deep red, blue or green.

Cut down on summer laundry chores with new no - iron sheets which are wear - dated, carrying a five - year guarantee. Made of a new 180 - count blend of 50 per cent polyester and 50 per cent combed cotton, the new sheets are machine-washable, and machine - dryable and require no ironing despite repeated washing. They are shrink and wrinkle-resistant.

Candle Tree Planting Time

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, made plans to put out a candle tree, then you better get busy. If planted now there will be time for growth so that you will get blooms in August and September.

There've been a number of calls this past week regarding black sooty mold on gardenias. This is caused by the white fly which is a sucking insect. The best control is to spray with malathion.

This is the best time to prune hydrangeas. Cut the blossoms with long stems and use them or give them to your friends. Keep the dead blooms cut off for a better and longer blooming period. If you want to use them in arrangements, to keep them from wilting, place the cut stems in a bucket of hot water immediately after cutting. Leave them in the water for at least 30 minutes or until the water is cool. Another way to condition hydrangeas is to burn the ends of the cut stems.

If aphids and red spiders are attacking your chrysanthemums control with malathion.

FOOD PRESERVATION

July is one of the homemaker's busiest months in preserving foods. There are two excellent methods of preserving those fresh fruits and vegetables - canning and freezing. Of the two, freezing leads in popularity - but if you do not have a large freezer, then canning can be the answer especially for fruits as berries, peaches, figs, etc. If you do not have reliable canning instructions, call the Agricultural Extension Service for a copy of the bulletin, "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables." We, also, have an excellent bulletin on pickles and relishes.

WATER SOLVENT WAXES

With all water solvent waxes, Mrs. Homemaker, you'll need to strip the floor occasionally, that is remove all built up layers of wax. To do this, use about one-half cup of ammonia, one-half cup of detergent to one gallon of water. If this does not remove the wax you will need to increase the amount of ammonia. Scuff marks on the floors can very often be removed with a floor polisher. Try the buffer before you go to the trouble of rewaxing a whole floor.

Yellowing of floor is caused by built up layers of wax that have a yellow cast to them. Even some so called white waxes have a yellow cast to them that you can see only when you compare waxes poured into a clear glass. The whiter the wax, the less discoloration. Remember, Mrs. Homemaker, there's usually no traffic within six inches of a baseboard to wear off layer of wax - so don't wax this area. This is the area in the room that usually shows a heavy build up of wax.

Do be sure to apply wax in very thin layers. Most homemakers have the ever present temptation, "If a little is good, an extra amount must be better." Remember, thick layers of wax trap dirt and hasten build up which is hard on you as well as your floor.

FOOD FOR HEALTH

Planning your meals, Mrs. Homemaker, can save time, money, and food waste. Try planning all your meals for a week. Use the daily four - food groups as a guide for planning and buying food. You will find lower cost foods in each of the four groups and these are just as nutritious as those of higher cost. You and every member of your family need foods everyday from each of these four groups. The first group is milk - Children under nine need two to three cups; children nine to 12, three cups; teenagers, four cups, and adults two or more cups. Cottage cheese, cheddar cheese or ice cream may be sutstituted for some of the milk.

The second group is meat and each member needs two servings per day. A serving consists of two to three ounces of lean cooked meat, poultry or fish. Other foods that may be substituted are: two eggs, one cup cooked dry beans or four tablespoons peanut butter.

The third group, fruits and vegetables, of which each member of the family should have four or more servings daily.

Bread and cereals comprise the fourth food group. Choose four or more servings of enriched or whole grain bread and cereal.

A THOUGHT:

Sincerity is to speak as we think, to do as we profess, to perform as we promise, and really to be what we appear to be.

Stories Behind The Gardenias

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The different kinds of gardenias which we prize for their beauty and fragrance here in the south have an interesting history. The double kind which we call Cape Jasmine was found in cultivation at the Cape of Good Hope about the middle of the 18th century by a sea captain, one Capt. Hutchinson of the Godolphin Indiaman. He thought it so beautiful and fragrant that he brought the whole plant home to England in a pot.

England in the 18th Century as now, was full of plant enthusiasts. They grew the tender plants, which would not survive out of doors, in their greenhouses with suitable temperatures for plants of different degrees of hardiness. It did not take these plant fanciers long to discover that the plants from the Cape of Good Hope would thrive in a greenhouse with very little heat, and soon such plants came to be called "Cape plants" or "stove plants".

NOT CAPE NATIVE

When the Cape Jasmine was brought home, it was not realized that this beauty was not native to the Cape at all. It was just visiting there, and its real home was China. This was an easy mistake for Englishmen to make because they were at that time receiving the wonders of both the Cape and China into their gardens.

The new plant was first grown by Richard Warner, a great collector of new plants, at Woodford Row in Essex. It was not long, however, until the famous nurseryman, James Gordon, got hold of it and propagated it with the greatest success. This was not surprising, for it was said that this man could root almost anything that was brought to him. His reputation became so great that when Dr. Alexander Garden of Charleston, South Carolina sent plants of our native Loblolly Bay to his friend, the celebrated botanist, John Ellis in 1756 and asked Ellis to name the bay for his old teacher, Dr. James Gordon at Edinburgh, Ellis seems to have forgotten the request and named it for James Gordon the nurseryman, and Dr. Garden did not notice the mistake.

Dr. Garden had been sending the plants from the new world to England ever since his arrival at Charleston. His reputattion as an amateur botanist and collector became so great that the famous botanist, Linnaeus finally honored Garden by naming the beautiful and popular Cape Jasmine with the Latin name, Gardenia.

Anniversary Of Parks Is Commemorated

Amusement parks are popular in Eruope, too. But it isn't often that one is honored on a postage stamp. Austria, however, has just issued a 1.50 schilling green and black stamp celebrating the 200th anniversary of Vienna's giant amusement park, the Prater. The main design features a ferris wheel. Also issued by Austria was a 3 schilling commemorative in honor of the 10th anniversary of the death of architect Josef Hoffman. The stamp shows a portrait of Hoffman and bears the dates 1870-1956. Hoffman is considered a pioneer of modern architecture in Central Europe, emphasizing cubic structures.

The new 1966 Summer - Fall edition of the H. E. Harris catalog for U.S. and British North America has just been released. It contains 192 pages with 2,558 price changes and more than 2,000 illustrations. A new flat-back deluxe binding makes for easier handling and reading. This market guide to stamp values lists all U.S. issues — postage, airmails, postage dues, special delivery, revenues, envelopes, postal cards, etc. Also featured are plate blocks, mint sheets, first - day covers. The new catalog is available for 75 cents from H. E. Harris & Co., Box A, Boston, Mass. 02117.

Sports themes appear on two new issues by Chile. A 4 escudos stamp marks the World Ski Championships to be held in Portillo, Chile, during August. A closeup of a skiier is in the foreground and a skiier ready to jump off is in the background. The other sports stamp honors the World Basketball Championships which were held in Chile in April. The value is 13 escudos.

Demand Up For Light Fixtures

AP Newsfeatures

The sales of outdoor lighting fixtures for the home have more than tripled in the last 10 years.

Why? There are two key reasons. One is the trend to outdoor living. Swimming pools, recreation areas, patios, barbecues, flower gardens and attractive landscaping have all been laced into the contemporary living pattern. The other reason is a greater appreciation of better lighting in general.

Outdoor lighting has progressed beyond the dim fixture at the front door or the bug-chasing naked bulb near the grill. Lights not only are used to permit outdoor relaxing and dining, but to allow games to be played, paths and walks to be made safe, and flowers, fountains and statuary to be enjoyed.

MANY STYLES

There are many fixture styles and lighting techniques. In all cases, safety is a basic requirement. A permanent, underground wiring system to weatherproof boxes and outlets is recommended. In addition, portable weatherproof boxes and convenience outlets are available. There is growing interest in low-voltage equipment, operating on the same principle as high—intensity lamps. It ulitizes a transformer which may be plugged into a convenience outlet or permanently installed. The transformer reduces the normal household power to 12 volts. The outdoor power cable then can be placed on the ground, under it or even in water. The American Home Lighting Institute recommends the following basics:

1. Don't try to floodlight the entire area. It creates a flat, "whitewashed" appearance. A certain amount of diffused general lighting supplemented by local lighting accents is far more effective.

2. Always conceal bulbs. Use shielded fixtures or the natural shielding of hedges, shrubs or other foliage to hide the light bulb and prevent glare from disturbing your guests or next-door neighbors. When locating units near water, be careful of reflected glare.

LIGHT SOURCES

3. Use a number of light sources. Select one or two trees, a flower bed or lily pond, a fence or a wall to achieve your lighting pattern. The light source should never compete with the lighted object for attention.

4. Colored light can be effective, but should be used sparingly. Use white or blue - white on flowers, which nature already has colored. Vibrant colors are effective in pools or fountains and in dabs on light walls, fences or statuary. Green enhances grass and foliage; red will render a campfire quality.

5. Since dark colors absorb light, it is best to stick with white or pastel flowering plants and trees with light - color bark for best effect.

Photography's Newest Tools Given Workout

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

A couple of photography's newest tools have been getting a tough workout from me in the past several months and the results are worth talking about. Paired together for this long-range test were a Graflex XL camera and an Auto - Strobonar electronic flash.

They have been put to use around the house, at parties, press affairs, club meetings, in theaters and just for fun. In all cases the results were more than satisfactory; in some cases the pictures were of perfect technical quality. With time, they've become a dependable twosome.

COMPONENT SYSTEM

The Graflex XL is a component camera system which can be assembled to suit an individual photographer's needs. A camera has three basic elements: a lens, a body and a back. In the XL, there are choices of lenses, three different bodies and a variety of backs. Each of the different basic elements fit together instantly to make a precision camera.

I favored a "press" type camera so chose a rangefinder body, an 80mm Planar f-2.8 lens and two roll film backs. Both backs accept regulor 120 roll films but one of them, in addition, also accomodates the long-length 220 roll film for 20 exposures. Other camera backs in the system are for cut film, film packs, Polaroid film packs and 70mm 50-exposure cassettes. Each of the backs goes on or comes off in seconds.

SIDE - MOUNTED GRIP

The camera has a side-mounted pistol grip with fingertip cable release plunger making it easy to hold comportably and firmly for instant shooting. Sighting is sharp and clear in the large rangefinder window with splitimage focusing from two and a half feet to infinity.

A handy quick - focus lever, adjustable for personal fingertip convenience, makes it easy to follow action in the rangefinder while getting sharp focus. As the distance and focus changes, so does the "floating" picture frame because there is automatic parallax correction.

The camera has no light meter on it coupled with automatic exposure setting so I had the feeling that I was a complete photographer again making decisions and setting controls which make the picture. The shutter has to be cocked for each shot and a release lever pressed to wind the film with a rapid - advance flick of the thumb for the next exposure.

In the beginning, I made the usual goofs of forgetting to tension the shutter or release the film advance. Result? Occasionally, after getting all set to capture a scene. . .click!. . .and nothing happened. Or the film would show up with several double exposures.

In time, however, a picture-taking rhythm was developed so that the action of preparing for the following picture became automatic.

Another early problem was loading roll film under pressure. It is a bit troublesome in the XL back especially when compared with present-day pop-in cartridges and easy-load rapid film cassettes. But, again, it came easier with experience and even wiser when a long-length 20-exposure roll was preloaded in the extra back in advance.

The roll film backs produce 2¼ by two and three - quarter inch negatives. This is "big negative format" compared with 35 mm size and a handy rectangular shape for 8 x 10 enlargements.

All in all, I developed a "feel" for the camera with repeated use. It has solidity and a nice balance which imparts a sense of slower hand - held speeds.

My experiences with the Auto Strobonar electronic flash wil be detailed soon.

TV, Movies Cement Ties

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The marriage in which movie studios film television series is being cemented even further.

The union now produces feature-length pictures for both mediums.

NBC and Universal this year will make 8 to 10 of the network's Project 120's — so-called from the number of minutes in the two-hour dramas.

"These are not 'Gone With the Wind' — let's be honest about that," says Grant Tinker, newly appointed vice president in charge of NBC-TV programming. "But they will be well cast, well produced and as good as many present movies."

Three such tie-ups are NBC and Universal, CBS and Warner Brothers and ABC and MGM.

Starting next fall NBC will sandwich the Project 120 films in among old theatrical pictures on Tuesday — and Saturday-night-at-the-movie offerings.

Universal will release them in theaters abroad and later in this country.

CURTAIN CALL

By CURTIS RAPGE

With only four weeks to go, "Music Man" rehearsals are moving along at a rapid pace.

With a cast the size of the one for this production, long but fun-filled hours of singing and dancing are spent running through numbers over and over again until all routines are perfect.

Behind the scenes, dozens of workers are now busy taking care of the many details that compose a musical comedy. Scenery must be painted, costumes secured, and properties gathered.

COSTUMES RENTED

We are fortunate again this summer to be able to rent the costumes for the show from Evelyn Norton Anderson of Houston, Texas. She is widely known for outstanding costume design and has been costume designer to Casa Manana in Fort Worth, for a number of years.

Sandy Walker is busy gathering properties for use by the actors. That is a most difficult task, for this show calls for over a hundred different items, including player pianos and a steropticon.

Assisting George in scenic design and painting is Jack Bailes. Everyone will remember Jack as Mayor Crane in our last production, "Never Too Late." Besides possessing acting ability, Jack is an accomplished artist and teaches art at Ouachita Parish High School.

CHILDREN'S THEATER

George Brian, director of "Maggie's Magic Teapot," has announced some additions ot the cast of that show.

Murray Burfford, director of the Theatre School, will play the part of Beatrice of the Bog. Murray has appeared in several theatre productions including "King Midas," "Once Upon a Mattress," and "A Clown and His Circus," as well as directing the theatre school.

Dr. Brian will play the part of Billy O'Morra, Maggie's grandfather.

RECENT VISITORS

Among recent visitors to the theatre were Sara Womack Dean and Bill Haddad.

Sara is now living in Palo Alto, California, where she is working as a speech therapist. Her last appearance at Strauss Playhouse was in last summer's produciton of "The King and I."

Bill is working this summer as assistant to the producer at summer stock in Sullivan, Illinois. He reports that productions up there this summer will include such stars as John Payne, Troy Donohue, and Dennis Weaver.

Be sure to watch next week for news about production dates and box office hours for "Maggie's Magic Teapot."

Doubleheader Theater Project

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A firm here has announced plans to build a doubleheader drive-in theater in New Orleans this summer.

It will have a double-faced screen and two projection booths and will play to two audiences facing each other with different pictures starting at different times. The firm is Woolner Bros., producers and theater owners.

Dogs Coaxed In Pursuit Scenes

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A scene in "Warning Shot" called for Ed Begley to drive off in a car pursued by yelping dogs.

No problem. They got it in one take.

The car's tires had been rubbed with raw ground beef. Dog biscuits had been taped under the rear bumper. And Frank Inn, the dogs' trainer, climbed into the trunk of the car holding raw steaks in both hands just before the cameras started turning.

CHARLES E. BROWN

New Director Of American Bank Named

Charles E. Brown, has been elected to the Board of Directors of American Bank and Trust Company according to an announcement by William R. Boles, chairman of the board.

In making the announcement, Boles said, "All of us are extremely proud to welcome such an outstanding man to our board. His vast experience in industry, business and civic affairs will be a tremendous asset to us. His faith in the growth, of our bank, as expressed by him coming on the Board, is most gratifying."

Brown, son of Edgar W. Brown Jr., Texas industrialist-philantrophist, is a native of Orange, Tex., where he attended local public schools. He attended Southwestern University in Georgetown, Tex., prior to entering the United States Air Force.

In 1948 he moved to Monroe, where he became associated with Brown Container and Brown Paper Industries, Inc. as general manager with the paper-bag plant. When these industries were sold to Olin in 1955, he became an active independent oil and gas operator.

In 1957 he acquired an interest in what is now Rivers Ford; an interest he still maintains where he serves as secretary-treasurer. In 1958 he purchased the controlling interest in Southern Equipment and Tractor Company, a heavy equipment dealership having stores in Monroe, Shreveport, Baton Rouge, and New Orleans.

In 1960 he sold the Baton Rouge and New Orleans offices and acquired another heavy equipment company in Houston, which was renamed Brown - Fogle Equipment Company. In addition to these businesses he has real estate and oil interests in Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas.

Brown and his family have had bank interests in Texas for many years. He is married to the former Frances Eastin of Orange; and they are the parents of four children: Mrs. Carrie Brown West, 19, Charles Jr., 17, Richard, 16, and Robert, 15. They have one grandchild, Stephen D. West Jr. The Browns who reside at 624 Loop Road are members of St. Paul's Methodist Church. He holds membership in the Bayou DeSiard Country Club in Monroe, the Pickwick Club in New Orleans, Houston Club, Houston, City Club, Baton Rouge, and the Long Island Yacht Club in Hot Springs where the Browns own a home and property.

Among his wide participation in civic activities, Brown has served as president of the United Givers Fund in Ouachita Parish and a member of the Board of Directors of Monroe Chamber of Commerce.

Few Civilians Hurt, U.S. Says Of Raids

WASHINGTON (AP) — No more than one or two civilians—and perhaps none—were killed in Wednesday's bombing of oil targets at Hanoi and Haiphong, according to intelligence estimates given out by administration sources Saturday.

This word on the remarkably low civilian casualty count from the air strikes adjoining heavily populated centers is based on both aerial photographs and information from sources inside the North Vietnamese capital.

The administration officials did not disclose who was supplying information from Hanoi. A number of countries have diplomatic missions there, travelers come out from time to time and, of course, there could be spies there.

The finding that the bombing was, as administration informants put it, exceedingly accurate and a superb job comes as highly welcome to President Johnson's advisers amid criticism of the air strike that has come from abroad and at home.

The U.S. government has maintained that its air war on North Viet Nam is aimed at military targets and avoids as much as possible hurting civilians.

Further in this vein, the administration authorities said Saturday that food in North Viet Nam was not a military target as it is in some Viet Cong-controlled areas in South Viet Nam.

Red propaganda has accused U.S. planes of striking irrigation dikes important for farming in North Viet Nam.

Denying this, the U.S. officials said that while food supplies in South Viet Nam used directly by Communist forces there are subject to destruction, the agriculture in the north feeds the entire population and therefore is not a U.S. target. Nor are the American planes trying to destroy the general economic base of North Viet Nam by hitting industrial facilities, they said.

South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky Saturday portrayed the bombing of the north as a factor which could cause an overthrow of Hanoi's Ho Chi Minh regime. This is not the intent of it, however, in the view of U.S. officials. The avowed U.S. goal is not to unseat the whole government but to get it to halt infiltration of the south; thus the air raids focus on military targets.

The oil facilities hit Wednesday include about 60 per cent of North Viet Nam's petroleum storage capacity. Another 10 to 15 per cent has been bombed elsewhere. An estimated 90 per cent of the country's oil enters through Haiphong, its principal port.

U.S. strategists figure that beyond the restriction of the oil itself, a highly important effect of the June 29 attack was to cripple North Viet Nam's future ability to bring in oil supplies.

According to Washington estimates:

Some oil-carrying ships are presumably on their way from the Soviet Union and other Communist countries, but a slowdown was already under way before the Hanoi-Haiphong bombing because of unloading problems.

The June 29 targets included floating pipelines at Hanoi which allowed tankers to pump their oil directly from their holds into storage facilities ashore.

Without the pipelines, the ships would have to unload through the much more difficult process of putting their oil into drums, which would then have to be transported to their destination. And with storage facilites at Haiphong knocked out, it is believed here that tankers may have to stop at other points farther north to unload. This could include ports in China.

In Hanoi itself there has been no mass exodus of civilians, according to reports received here. However, U.S. officials said there had been a continuing departure of small numbers of nonessential civilians from the North Vietnamese capital.

In South Viet Nam the Communist forces are said to be suffering from losses of both men and supplies and damage to their campaign to maintain a shadow government in the countryside.

The number of Red defectors is reported to have climbed to about 1,500 a month, with an increase in the caliber of those turning themselves in. More lieutenants, squad leaders and others of significance are said to be among the defectors now.

Although the military program has been getting most public attention recently, administration sources maintain there has been no switch in over-all U.S. strategy. They said peace efforts would continue although no special diplomatic offensive was mounted at the moment.

Warsaw Pact To Hold Meet Of Leaders

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Leaders of Communist East Europe meet in Bucharest next week to discuss differences over the control of their military alliance, the Warsaw Pact.

European security will be another item on the agenda.

The Soviet delegation, led by Communist party boss Leonid I. Brezhnev, arrived Saturday.

The Warsaw Pact begins a conference Monday afternoon and the secret talks are scheduled to last three days.

The Soviet Union has been trying to tighten the command structure headed by one of its officers, Marshal A. A. Grechko. Romania is reported to have countered with proposals to give the East European members more voice in pact decisions.

Reports circulated here that the differences would be papered over for the meeting.

Brezhnev came here less than two months ago to discuss the differences with the secretary-general of the Romanian Communist party, Nicolae Ceausescu. Nothing seemed to have been settled then.

Romania was believed also to have proposals to make to the conference on European security.

The Soviet Union has recently been advocating in low key an all-European conference on security problems, which for the Russians revolve around keeping Germany weak and getting U.S. forces out of Europe.

Soviet failure to get President Charles de Gaulle of France to endorse the calling of a European conference during his visit to Moscow this week might have temporarily set back the Soviet campaign, informed quarters thought.

Romania was reported to feel that the United States should be involved in any European arrangements, either attending a conference or guaranteeing anything which would be arranged. The vague Soviet position has seemed to mean excluding the Americans.

According to sources here, Romania might also propose a broad plan for trying by East-West agreement to eliminate nuclear weapons from the middle of Europe. The area would extend from Norway to Greece and would include West Germany, which wants a say on nuclear weapons in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Part of the dispute over Soviet domination of the Warsaw Pact command involves Soviet nuclear weapons in East Germany. Other pact members have no voice in their use at present. Romania argues that it should have a voice since their use could bring retaliation down on all pact members.

The other active members are Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland, in addition to East Germany, Romania and the Soviet Union.

Sports Car Challenge Set By 'Camaro'

DETROIT (AP)—Chevrolet's new Camaro stands ready to challenge Ford's high-riding Mustang for supremacy in the small, sporty car field.

E.M. Estes, Chverolet's general manager, took the wraps off some details of the new, 1967 Camaro Wednesday at a 14-city news conference, hooked together by a two-way telephone line.

For Estes, announcement of the new car put an end to one question which had irritated him over the past two years.

It was: "When is Chevrolet going to come out with a car to match the Mustang"?

Estes answer was to effect that Chevrolet's Corvair, Chevy II ad Chevelle had put the division far out in front in the race to attract sports car enthusiasts and that the Mustang actually was a belated attempt to catch up with Chevy's lead.

The Camaro gives Chevrolet a car to do sales battle with Mustang, starting with 1967 models.

Estes laughlingly told newsmen he would not tell them all details about the new car until press preview time in September, but he did release a few details.

Camaro's wheelbase will be 108 inches, the same as the Corvair and the Mustang. Its overall length will be around 180-186 inches.

The Mustang-Camaro sales race seems a certainty to make competition between Chevrolet and Ford more intense next year.

Chevrolet sizzled a bit when Ford moved out in front in sales in the month of May, but the GM Division regained the lead in June.

Estes reported that in the 1966 model year to date, Chevrolet had a lead of over 150,000 cars over Ford. He listed Chevy's sales as 1,697,061 cars.

"Some of you have asked if Chevrolet will continue the industry sales leadership it has held in all but two of the last 30 years," he said. "The answer, is, I assure you, that we have no intention of losing it."

Estes said the market at which the Camaro is aimed is "the small, sportish part."

He estimated it at about 1.2 million this year.

"We hope to get our share of the marke,t" he said.

Body Does Little For Auto Safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Commerce Committee has spent three weeks working on auto safety legislation without answering the key question: How and when should federal safety standards be put into effect?

Aside from adopting a tough provision designed to assure that new cars are equipped with adequate tires and that tires are labeled so the purchaser can tell what he is buying, the committee has settled little in seven closed sessions on the senate-passed legislation.

Members of the committee who favor strong safety legislation remain confident it will approve a bill as strong as or stronger than the Senate version which requires the secretary of commerce to set new car safety standards by next January and provides fines up to $400,000 for violations.

No one is ready to predict when the committee will finish on the bill, but it has scheduled hearings on fair-packaging legislation for July 26. Thus it will have two weeks to complete action from the time it returns from the 4th of July recess on July 11.

In addition to provisions covering setting of federal safety standards, the committee still must decide such things as whether manufacturers should certify their new cars as conforming to federal standards, whether civil or criminal penalties should be imposed on violators, whether used cars should be covered and whether something should be said about recall campaigns for defective vehicles.

Whatever the reason, the going has been slow, with controversy erupting at almost every turn.

Even after the committee decided to adopt the Senate bill's definition of which vehicles will be covered by the legislation, there was a dispute.

Some members contended that by excluding vehicles covered by the Interstate Commerce Commission's safety provisions the committee was leaving out all truck, buses and other carriers.

Another delay was caused by a three-session wrangle over whether the committee should act on highway safety legislation as well as auto safety legislation.

This was resolved with a decision to let the House Public Works Committee proceed with its own highway safety bill. Thus the two measures coming out of the House will be parallel to the two passed by the Senate.

The committee also has consumed time with its public relations problems. Angered by published reports that a number of committee members and the staff were being influenced by the automakers, Chairman Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., lecturned the members on leaks and decided to brief the press after each session.

But Staggers said he would confine such information to positive action such as amendments adopted. This sent reporters back to their committee sources for details on defeated amendments—some of which were far more important than those adopted.

After stories about the 15-14 vote on excluding trucks, the committee had another discussion of "security."

When Staggers briefed newsmen last Thursday he told the committee clerk concerning one decision: "You might as well give them the vote. They'll find out anyway."

Several public relations representatives of auto companies have been active in the vicinity of the committee's meeting room. One sat in the committee office and conferred on amendments with members who went in and out of the closed meeting.

The committee seems likely to come up with a bill very similar to the one passed by the Senate. But it intends to do this in its own way and at its own speed—no matter how long that takes.

Livingstone Patron

LONDON (AP) — The London Missionary Society, launcher of Dr. David Livingstone (1813-73) on his historic mid-19th century healing and exploration career in Africa, has joined forces with the Commonwealth Missionary Society. The new organization is called the Congregational Council for World Mission.

Guide To Good Reading

Parish Library Will Be Closed July 4th

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Tomorrow is the Fourth of July and all of the Libraries of the Ouachita Parish Public Library will be closed. The Bookmobiles will not operate either. Please remember that there will be no Library service today or tomorrow, but that we will be open for business as usual on Tuesday morning, July the fifth.

There are several novels worthy of note this week. "The Jewel in the Crown" by Paul Scott is a very fine study of life in India during the final phase of British domination in 1942. Mr. Scott writes well and gives us a picture of many types of Indians and different strata of Indian life. This is a rather slow-moving book, but one that has much to recommend it to the discriminating reader. "The Mission" by Hans Habe is a frightening story of man's inhumanity to man. It is based on the historical fact of the Evian Conference about which very little has been written. "The One-Eyed Man" by Larry L. King is a story of Southern politics. It should be very interesting to men who have kept up with the political trends of the times.

Gun fanciers will want to see "The Breech-Loader in the Service, 1816-1917" written by Claud E. Fuller. This is a history of all standard and experimental U.S. Breechloading and magazine shoulder arms. "The Art Guide" by Lee Carvel contains much useful information about displays and the use of display materials.

There are a number of new books in the travel and history section. "An Atlas of Latin American Affairs" by Ronald M. Schneider and "An Atlas of World Affairs," by Andrew Boyd will be most useful to the reader who is interested in our foreign relations. "Rand McNally's Road Atlas," "The Rand McNally Vacation Guide" and "Rand McNally Guidebook to Campgrounds" will be most useful to the person who is planning a trip in our own country. These books may be borrowed and you can even take them with you on your vacation.

"Rescued Treasures of Egypt" by Max Pol Fouchet and "Sicily and the Western Colonies of Greece" by Helen Miller are two very fine new books in the field of archaeology. There are three specialized guide books: "Mexico City," by Cohen; "The City Within a City," the romance of Rockefeller Center, by David Loth; and "Pathway in the Sky," the story of the John Muir Trail, written by Hal Roth.

"The Crusades" by Zoe Oldenburg is a very well-written history of this phenomenon of the Middle Ages. "The Mistresses" by Betty Kelen is an account of the scandals of the 19th century rulers of European nations. "The Devil's Brigade" by Robert H. Adleman is the interesting account of a special service force made up of Canadians and U. S. soldiers. "The Conquest of England" by Eric Linklater is a new and fresh account of the Norman Conquest in 1066.

The Library has recently acquired the titles in a very fine concise new history series called "Nations of the Modern World." The countries covered are: "The United States of America" by H. C. Allen, "South Africa" by John Cope, "Sudan Republic" by Kenneth David Henderson, "Malaya" by J. M. Gullick, "Turkey" by Geoffrey Lewis, "Pakistan" by Ian M. Stephens, "Modern India" by Percival Griffiths, "Ceylon" by Sidney Arnold Pakeman, and "Modern Iran" by Peter Avery. A book of current interest is "War Without Guns" by George K. Tanham. This is an account of Americans civilians in rural Viet Nam today.

There are also some very fine new books in the field of American History. "Mount Vernon is Ours" is the story of the preservation of Mount Vernon written by Elswyth Thane. "The Dear-Bought Heritage" by Eugenie A. Leonard is an account of social life in the American colonies. "Edmund Ruffin, Southerner" is an account of the career of one of the great Civil War statesmen. "The Prose Works of William Byrd of Westover" has just been reissued. It is one of our best Colonial narratives. "The Overseer" by William Kauffman Scarborough is an excellent account of Plantation management in the Old South.

"Exploration and Empire" by William H. Goetzman is an account of the history, exploration and development of the American West. "The War on Powder River" by Helena Huntington Smith is the narration of the struggle between the cattlemen and farmers in Johnson County, Wyoming. "No Time for Rest" by Robert Cutler is a discussion of the political climate in our country today. T. Harry Williams, a Professor at L. S. U., has given us a very fine study of Southern politics in a small book called "Romance and Realism in Southern Politics."

CARD OF THANKS

Words cannot say the things that are in our hearts, but we take this means of expressing our deep appreciation and gratitude to every one of our friends and loved ones for each act of love and sympathy extended to us at the time of our great loss, the death of our loved one, William Elledge.

Especially to those who brought food, took over the household duties and cared for the babies; for the kind and comforting words; to those who called; to our Pastor and his wife, the Reverend and Mrs. Glen Lowery; to the Reverend and Mrs. Wheat; and to the Reverend Matthews for their presence and prayers; to the Caldwell Parish Sheriff's Department and the Richland Parish Sheriff's Department; to the Caldwell Parish High School Principal and his wife; the Caldwell Parish coaches and to the football boys; for the flowers, the cards, and all other expressions of thoughtfulness.

All of these things made our burden a little easier to bear. Our prayer for you is that God's blessings and His mercy may abide with you always.

The Ray Elledge family

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this means to extend our most heartfelt thanks to our many friends for their every act of kindness shown throughout the illness and loss of our beloved Mother and Grandmother, Dora E. Parker.

To all those who brought food to the home, the beautiful floral offerings, cards, telegrams and words of condolence, we shall always remember.

May God Bless each of you in a special way is our daily Prayer.

The Parker Family

Ben Ross
Joins
Rivers Fords Sales
Ben B. Ross, Jr., has joined the sales staff of Rivers Ford, it was announced today by Joe Kvaternik, sales manager. A veteran new and used car and truck salesman, Ben returns to Rivers after a period of time in school. He is presently majoring in Business Administration at Northeast College, while working full time at Rivers. Ben was formerly with Rivers in 1964 and has been selling cars for six years. He is a graduate of the Ford Marketing Institute. He invites all his friends to come see him and let him show you how you can save when buying a new car. Ben is married to the former Wanda Wheelington, of Oak Grove. They have a daughter, Pamela, 3, and reside at 4212 DeSiard Rd.

Clifford Jones Fifth Anniversary at Rivers Ford

Clifford Jones says, "I have been selling Fords at Rivers Ford for 5 years, and intend to be here for 20 more years. Many hundreds of folks in the Twin Cities have saved hundreds of dollars by trading with me. Won't YOU be next? I'm a volume salesman, and you save because of it. I believe in Personal Service after the Sale. I'd consider it a privilege if you'd call me before you buy your new car."

Family Safety Is The Most Important Thing In Your Life

Old Friends Trust Our Service

It Doesn't Always Happen to Someone Else — Let Us Help Make Your Holiday Free of Accidents.

- BRAKES . . . Do they hold properly and evenly? How about the hand brake and cylinder? Let us check and adjust them for your safety.
- LIGHTS . . . Are all lights, turn, head, stop, tail, signal, working properly? How about the dimmer switch? We'll check them for you. Are your headlights aimed for maximum safety and efficiency?
- MUFFLER . . . A defect here can allow deadly carbon monoxide to enter your car. Let us see if they are tight, free of worn spots.
- FRONT END . . . Is the front suspension free of excess play? Wheel bearings tight? Wheels balanced? Suspension in correct alignment?
- HORN & WIPERS . . . Both pretty important when you need them. Let us check and make sure.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:
I work in an apartment hotel and must defrost the ice unit in many refrigerators each week. Here is the best way to do it that I have run across in over 20 years . . .

I take the biggest plastic wastebasket I can find and put it right in front of the refrigerator when I open the door and start defrosting.

I lay newspapers over all the food on the top shelf, being sure that the newspaper fits up against the wall of the refrig.

The newspaper will catch any drips from the melting ice and keep it off the shelves below. Besides, if a big piece of ice falls off, then all I have to do is plop it into the wastebasket.

I always leave the drip-tray under the frozen food compartment to catch most of the melted ice.

I put newspapers on the linoleum in front of the ice box and they catch all the drippings and mess, and I do not have to clean the floor later.

I NEVER try to clean the entire refrig in one day. I do the defrosting one day and clean the shelves another day.

I think this would help your housewives who don't have time to defrost and clean the shelves the same day.

Fanny

IT MAKES SENSE

DEAR HELOISE:
After waxing all my table tops, instead of using old rags, I bought a new lamb's-wool shoe polishing brush. As this is extra long, and fits the hand beautifully, I find I can cover more space at one time, thus saving energy.

It's not only wonderful for table tops, but for the kitchen floor too, in case you don't have an electrical gadget.

Milliard

WORTH TRYING

DEAR HELOISE:
I use your wonderful nylon net for the stubborn spots on wall and woodwork cleaning jobs.

As a mother of four preschoolers, I feel qualified to state that it's the best thing I've found for removing dried-on milk spatters, etc., around high chair and table!

If it doesn't come right off, come back to the spot after washing the next section.

Those little net balls are handy in the bathroom, too, and more attractive than a cleanser. I can clean the tub and sink with the stuck-on soap in the soap tray!

Beverly

BUBBLE BATH

DEAR HELOISE:
Most people enjoy eating by candlelight, but I wonder how many of the gals have ever bathed by candlelight? (Naturally, I mean since the advent of the electric light!)

When I want to give myself a pampered feeling, I ignore the electric light switch, light a couple of candles, fill the tub with water and a generous amount of bubble bath, bath salts, or some bath oil, and lie back in the tub and enjoy a leisurely bath.

I get out feeling relaxed and at peace with the world.

Kathryn

FOR FLOWER POTS

DEAR HELOISE:
If you find that egg cartons are taking up too much

If you have a hint, problem or suggestion you'd like to share . . . write to Heloise in care of this newspaper.

room in your refrigerator—

Try cutting a half-gallon plastic bleach bottle in half. The round bottom part will store a dozen eggs easily and won't take up as much refrigerator space as the long cartons do.

As for the top of the bottle—keep the cap on and it will make a good dipper for watering house plants.

Mrs. R. A. Comett

SCOURING PAD

DEAR HELOISE:
If that poor ol' plastic scouring pad is dripping all over everything in the kitchen . . . go buy a small plastic flower pot, with a drain saucer beneath it.

The saucer will catch the water, and the plastic pot is a perfect house for our little scrubber!

Marguerite Frey

* * *

The inexpensive little plastic flower pot would make a good home for any of our plastic or metal scrubbers, and let's not forget our nylon pompon scrubbers!

Heloise

GRATING

DEAR HELOISE:
When grating such things as cabbage, carrots, cheese, etc., I place a dishcloth in my sink, put my bowl on it, push it back so that my flat grater leans against the back of the sink for support, and grate away.

Saves having to clean the counter of all the stray gratings, since the sink, dishcloth and grater can all be rinsed off immediately after the operation is completed.

Naomi Ide

CRAYONS

DEAR HELOISE:
Colored crayons are handy for repairing marred or scratched wood or leather surfaces.

On shoes, purses, or leather luggage, try to match the color, then color generously over the blemish and polish with a soft cloth.

On scratched furniture, work the harmonizing color of crayon into the scratch, smooth off with a polishing cloth, and give the entire surface a coat of good furniture polish.

This will also work with black crayon on chipped wrought iron. The wax is waterproof and stands up remarkably well.

Sigrid Rasmussen, Art Consultant

AWAY DUST

DEAR HELOISE:
I bought a white dust mop with a long handle, and dust my walls with it. It may be washed often and easily.

I also use a dust mop to sweep my bare floors. It not only picks up the dust, but it also buffs the floors at the same time.

Annette Gay

TIE-UP

DEAR HELOISE:
When my daughter was nine months old, she learned to untie and unlace her shoes. Oh, the shoestrings and tempers that were lost.

I found that I could put the shoestring in the bottom eyelets and knot it together underneath, then continue lacing. Now, when the little one unlaces, she can go only so far.

The shoelaces are a little harder to take out for washing, but at least, I know where they are when I want to wash them!

... SO THERE YOU ARE! NOT THAT I BLAME YOU FOR HIDING! BOY! ARE YOU HOMELY!
HE SURE DOESN'T LOOK LIKE MUCH! ISN'T THE FEMALE MALLARD ALL BROWN AND SPECKLED LIKE THAT?
NEVER MIND, MILTON. IN A COUPLE OF MONTHS YOU'LL GET YOUR NATTY SET OF FEATHERS BACK AND YOU WON'T HAVE TO STAND FOR THIS!
EVEN THAT WON'T HELP HIM...
...HE'LL JUST BE A GOOD LOOKING BUM! HE HAS NO CHARACTER!
WELL—IT'S BETTER THAN BEING A HOMELY BUM. WHAT'S THE ONE ABOUT BEAUTY BEING ITS OWN EXCUSE?

"GOOD NIGHT, GOOD NIGHT! PARTING IS SUCH SWEET SORROW"! - SHAKESPEARE. "AND SO THE BAD BOYS GO INTO THREE OF NATURE'S GARBAGE DISPOSAL UNITS!

WE'RE PRETTY SURE "CAP" IS THE MAN WE'RE AFTER! HE'S AN OLD-TIME RUMRUNNER WHO KNOWS EVERY HIDING PLACE IN THAT SWAMP!

"CAP" AND TWO RIVER RAT PALS VANISHED THE SAME TIME YOUR BOAT WAS TAKEN, WITH ANNIE ABOARD!

LOT OF THAT AREA IS FAIRLY OPEN, BUT A LOT MORE IS PURE JUNGLE, HALF UNDER WATER!

EVEN FROM HELICOPTERS YOU CAN'T SPOT ANYTHING THROUGH THAT THICK COVER!

'TIL THOSE KIDNAPERS CONTACT US, WE'RE HELPLESS!

WHILE THROUGH THE GLOOMY, TWISTING TUNNELS OF JUNGLE GROWTH, KNOWN ONLY TO "CAP," THE SLEEK CRUISER GLIDES SLOWLY AND SURELY TO ..... WHAT?

WELL, BOYS, COUPLE MORE BENDS AND WE'LL BE THERE!

HA! THERE'S THE OLD STONE LANDIN' WHERE WE TIED UP, MANY'S TH' NIGHT, IN TH' GOOD OLD DAYS!

CHEESE! TH' SIZE O' THEM GATORS!

HEY! "CAP"! THOUGHT Y'SAID NOBODY ELSE KNOWED ABOUT THIS PLACE!

EH? WHAT TH'....?

WE SEE YUH, SANTA CLAUS! WHO ARE YUH, ANYWAY?

YOU OUGHT T'KNOW ME! I SURE REMEMBER YOU, "CAP"!

HIM? TH' KID WE LEFT HERE? CAN'T BE!

FELLER CHANGES IN THIRTY-FIVE YEARS, EVEN YOU, "CAP"!

BUT YOU GOTTA BE DEAD: IF YOU AIN'T A GHOST YOU SOON WILL BE! AR-R... MISSED HIM!

HEH-HEH! BEEN LOOKIN' FOR'D TO TH' DAY YOU'D COME BACK!

GIMME THAT TOMMY GUN! JUST LEMME SPRAY THEM BUSHES!

Y'LEFT TH' MOTOR GOIN'! WE'RE RUNNIN' ONTO A SNAG!

EEE YI!

ZOK

I'LL GET TH' OLD.... WAH!

HELP! THEY'LL EAT US ALIVE, TOO!

GLUP! GLUP! GLUP!

DON'T WORRY! I WON'T LET NOTHIN' EAT YOU!
